Washington's Speech Cited In Warnings On 3d Term

Weir Named Chief Of G.O.P. Finances; Ashurst Admits He Seeks a Sixth Term

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Ceremonial reading of Washington's Farewell Address in both houses yesterday dramatized new Congressional pressure for the President to make his political intentions known.

Calling on Mr. Roosevelt to declare himself, "as did Washington," Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, said the White House silence on the third term issue "is greatly impairing the success of his party in any campaign."

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, again warned of the "inherent danger" of a third term for any President. Their comments climaxed a full week of "smoke out" statements by Western Democratic colleagues and accompanied the Capitol's annual recital of Washington's own renunciation of a third term.

Ashurst After Sixth Term

Aut from Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, and Senator Ashurst, of Arizona (Democrats), the expressions of complete indifference as to the timing of the President's announcement. Bailey said he was convinced long ago that the President would not be a candidate, while Ashurst said he was concerned about a sixth term for himself rather than a third term for Roosevelt."

Republicans, meanwhile, looked to their war chest by appointing Ernest T. Weir, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the board of the National Steel Corporation, to head the Republican Party's finance committee.

Weir, president of the Iron and Steel Institute, will be charged with raising funds to finance the Republican campaign. The party wiped out a deficit in a midwinter fund drive and now seeks to build up a formidable balance.

Profited in Depression

Announcing the appointment, Hilton said Weir's steel corporation "made a profit every year during the depression." Weir, who once urged business men to "go into politics with a vengeance," has frequently collided with New Deal policies and the C. I. O.

Coveted labor support for 22 Senators whose terms are ending came from the Railway Labor Executives Association, representing 20 of the railway labor organizations.

Democrats Indorsed

The indorsements were published in Labor, weekly railroad labor publication, which said further indorsements could be expected. The list included 17 Democratic Senators, 3 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Laborite and one Progressive.

Those publicly supported for renomination in State primaries were Ashurst, Arizona; Maloney, Connecticut; Slattery, Illinois; Minton, Indiana; Radcliffe, Maryland; Walsh, Massachusetts; Bilbo, Mississippi; Truman, Missouri; Wheeler, Montana; Pittman, Nevada; Chavez, New Mexico; Mead, New York; Donahey, Ohio; McKellar, Tennessee; Connally, Texas; Schwellenbach, Washington, and O'Mahoney, Wyoming (Democrats); Johnson, California; Vandenberg, Michigan, and Gurney, North Dakota (Republicans); Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, and La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

While the group's Nebraska indorsement went to Gov. R. L. Cochran over Senator Burke, it was announced that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers took no part in Cochran's indorsement and was unprepared to act at this time.

A third term comment resumed on the floor of the Senate, McCar-

Capital and Nation Do Homage To Memory of Washington

Waving flags, blaring bands, the rattle of field guns on pavements, and bursts of oratory in a holiday atmosphere betokened the 208th anniversary of George Washington's birth in the Nation's Capital and vicinity yesterday.

Washington was bright with flags, flapping in a light wind on a sunsplashed day, and visitors to the Washington Monument passed through the great stone doors between two rows of wreaths. Around the tall obelisk flew 48 American flags on tall staffs.

In Alexandria thousands of descendants of George Washington's friends and neighbors—with newcomers who swelled the crowd to an estimated 25,000—witnessed a spirited military parade that re-

Dirksen Urges Action Now On Suffrage

Suggests House Report To Separate Issue From Reorganization

By James D. Secrest.

Immediate action on local suffrage as a distinctly separate issue was proposed yesterday by Representative Dirksen, ranking minority member of the House District Committee, as the Kennedy subcommittee prepared to tackle reorganization next Tuesday.

"I think the subcommittee should report a suffrage measure to the full House District Committee without recommendation," Dirksen said. "Then, if the committee approves, the legislation can be carried directly to the House to be voted up or down on its own merits."

Dirksen said he thought it would be disastrous to any government reorganization plan to tie it up with the highly controversial suffrage issue at this time.

Chairman Kennedy, who last year held a similar view, has promised to

Hyattsville Guard Armory Robbed

The Hyattsville National Guard armory, raided seven years ago by the Mais-Legenza gang, was robbed again Wednesday night, it was revealed yesterday. Prince Georges County police and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation began an immediate search for the thieves.

In addition to a number of field glasses, compasses and other equipment, eight .45-caliber pistols and one .22-caliber revolver were stolen.

Dies Reports C. I. O. Scheme To 'Purge' Him

Reveals Union Fund Of $100,000, Plan To Win in Run-Off

By Cecil B. Dickson.

Chairman Martin Dies of the committee investigating un-American activities, yesterday revealed a C. I. O. official had served notice on him that a $100,000 fund was going to be spent in the coming Texas primary elections in a drive to purge him from the House.

Harvey Fremming, of San Francisco, head of the C. I. O.'s Oil and Refinery Workers Union, delivered the message personally to Dies. Long before Dies became chairman of the special House committee he and Fremming were close friends.

Fremming told International News Service he had discussed the Texas political situation with Dies and predicted, "There will be plenty of candidates against him, including those backed by the C. I. O." He intimated aid might come from high New Deal quarters.

He said a high official, probably Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel, would be the brains behind the anti-Dies campaign.

Dies said Fremming warned him the strategy to be employed was designed to force him into the runoff primary in Texas, with all candidates defeated in the first primary to indorse his opponent.

Fremming said it would be "a strange analogy if Dies was purged by President Roosevelt as President Wilson purged his father." Dies' father retired from the second Texas District after leading an unsuccessful fight in the House against Wilson's plans to enter the World War.

Boy Falls 100 Feet and Lives; Hikers Rush Him to Hospital

Stunned and battered by a plunge down a 100-foot embankment, Robert Young, 14, of 3334 N street northwest, was back at home last night after a trip to a hospital which rivaled rescue in battle.

Robert was hiking with several companions 3½ miles above Key Bridge in Virginia when soft earth gave way underfoot. He fell and rolled to the bank of the Potomac River 100 feet below. One of his fellow hikers, Arthur Julicher, 14, of the N street address, raced down the slope and found Charles B. Meyer, of Thrifton, Va., hiking with his son, Burton, 12.

Meyer rushed to the scene and found Robert unconscious. He had the boys place Robert on a stretcher made of real estate signs and start with him toward help and a hospital.

The painfully slow journey was speeded when Meyer spied a flatboat across the river, hailed it and had Robert and his companions ferried across to the District side and the injured boy taken to Georgetown Hospital by a motorist.

There Robert was treated for shock and head cut and one leg was examined for a fracture. Later he was taken home by an aunt, Miss Elizabeth Young, little the worse for his experience.

House Vote Due Today On Hull Pacts

Extension Certain, Proponents Report; Senate Poll Favors Continuing System

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

As the House prepared for a vote today on three-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, Administration leaders on both sides of the Capitol yesterday appeared confident of passage of the bill without amendments.

A reliable poll of the Senate, which begins hearings on the measure Monday, disclosed yesterday that 47 Senators are definitely committed against an amendment requiring Senate ratification of the trade agreements.

Most Stringent Test

Since this proposal is considered likely to master maximum opposition strength in the Senate, ultimate approval of the bill without any amendments at all seemed assured.

Senate hearings Monday will begin with Secretary Hull on the witness stand, to be followed by Secretary Wallace.

Secretary Hull conferred late yesterday with House leaders and Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee and said he found "a spirit of optimism" among them regarding chances for extension of his trade program.

When the House takes up actual consideration of the bill today, two major amendments will be offered from the Democratic side. The one providing for Senate ratification of the agreements is to be presented by Representative Coffee, of Nebraska, while a proposal to prevent the State Department from lowering current excise taxes on four commodities will be made by Representative Disney, Oklahoma member of the Ways and Means Committee.

The Disney amendment was expected by Administration leaders to collect the largest number of opposition votes in the House, but a majority against it was believed probable. The four products protected in the Disney proposal are petroleum, lumber, coal and copper.

A supplementary amendment will be offered by Representative Mundt (Republican), of South Dakota, specifically denying the Secretary of State authority to reduce tariffs on many farm products including cattle, butter, cheese, poultry and eggs.

To Speed Hearings

Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee said yesterday that he hoped to expedite hearings, but they would take at least a week.

While Harrison predicted an Administration victory, two leading opponents of the trade agreements, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Capper (Republican), of Kansas, said the proposal for Senate ratification of the agreements would entail "a close fight."

In a statement in the Congressional Record, Representative Burch (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday declared that the reciprocal trade agreements program was "the only sound way of maintaining our position in foreign markets" for tobacco. Concessions already obtained on tobacco and tobacco products, he said, represent "a major triumph for the trade agreement program."

Roosevelt Firm Insures Line Aided by U. S.

Government Owns 90% of Common Stock In President Company

The insurance firm of Roosevelt & Sargent, Inc., in which James Roosevelt is a member and the President's wife a director, has taken over the insurance account of the American President Steamship Line, it was announced yesterday.

Chairman of the line, which formerly was known as the Dollar Steamship Lines, is William Gibbs McAdoo, former Senator from California and political ally of President Roosevelt.

John A. Sargent, president and treasurer of the insurance firm, announced the new account, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Boston.

U. S. Holds Most of Stock

McAdoo was named to the $25,000-a-year position with the President line after his defeat in the Democratic primaries in 1938. The United States Government holds 90 per cent of the common stock in the line.

A $4,500,000 RFC loan was granted the line in 1938, and the Maritime Commission agreed to give the company an annual operating subsidy of $3,000,000 for a five-year period.

The line's insurance account previously was held by a San Francisco firm.

Mrs. Roosevelt became a director of Roosevelt & Sargent December 14, 1938, after her son resigned to accept a position in Hollywood as vice president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc.

Resignation Followed Article

Young Roosevelt's resignation came shortly after charges in a Saturday Evening Post article, written by Alva Johnson, that he had made use of his father's office to promote his insurance business.

James answered the article with a statement in Collier's Magazine, in which he denied that he had ever written any insurance "that might by any definition be called political." He had never been asked by any prospect or client, he said, "to do anything except write insurance contracts."

Jimmy's name also was in the news in Washington and Philadelphia yesterday. Stopping at the

Truck Kills Boy, 7, at Play With Sister; 13 Others Hurt

Driver, 18, Is Held On Technical Charge Under $500 Bond

A 7-year-old boy was killed and seven other children and six adults were injured in traffic in the District area yesterday.

Chest Leigh Buchanan, second grade Kensington, Md., school boy, died at Washington Sanitarium after he was struck by a truck at Connecticut avenue and Farragut street, near his home. Police said the boy was playing while on his way home from school with his sister, La Dosca Buchanan, 9, when he ran into the path of the truck.

"I closed my eyes tight," said the little girl. "Then I ran home to tell mother."

She is Mrs. Pearl La Dosca Buchanan, of 42 Farragut street, Kensington, a typist in the Department of Agriculture. His father, Hugh Buchanan, is at present in North Carolina.

Police said the truck was operated by Harold T. Carter, 18, of Arlington, Va., who was released in $500 bond on a technical charge of reckless driving.

Callie Young, 40, of 14 I street northwest, lost her left foot when a lamp standard, broken off by a truck driven into it at North Capitol and I streets by an automobile, fell across her legs. She also re-

British Deny Using Arms To Take Mail

Censor in Bermuda Calls Tale 'Nonsense;' Pittman Describes Action as 'Foolish'

Angry protests from Senators yesterday followed reports that British authorities had used a show of armed force in removing 2,600 pounds of United States mail from the Pan-American Airways clipper at Bermuda on January 18.

By nightfall, however, there had come from Bermuda a denial that any armed men were in the vicinity when the mail was taken from the plane.

Senators used such terms as "foolish," "high-handed" and "a hell of a note" after reading reports that the postal cargo had been seized "at the bayonet point."

Chief Censor Replies

To which the chief censor at Bermuda, Lieut. Col. R. Swire, replied:

"The story of the removal of mail at the point of a bayonet is utter nonsense. A request to hand over the mail was made to Commander Lorber of the clipper by an unamed officer on shore at the air base but no armed men were in the vicinity. Commander Lorber made a formal protest as he is in duty bound to do but thereafter put no obstacle in the way of the censorship officials who waited while the protest was put in writing before boarding the plane."

At the Capitol Senator Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said earlier, according to the Associated Press, that Britain had made an "excessive and very foolish" use of its right as a belligerent. His comment was based on the report of the display of force

Truman Would Stop Flights.

Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, said: "I think that's a hell of a note. I think we ought to stop the whole business of sending our planes over there—and I'm not neutral. Just stop the clippers from running until the British have learned to behave themselves, and stop their ships from landing in our ports."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, remarked that he had introduced an amendment to the Neutrality Act prohibiting our clippers from landing at Bermuda, and that the latest developments bore out his theory.

"It just adds some more details, but my views are the same," he said, referring to what he said was the "high-handed procedure" at Bermuda.

Nye Is Caustic

Elimination of the stop at Bermuda by the clippers has been considered by Secretary of State Hull, who has also vehemently protested seizure of United States mails by the Allies.

Officials at the department yesterday said that they had no details on the British using force in the Bermuda seizure, although they had received a report of the incident.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, remarked caustically that it was "nice, friendly attitude toward a would-be ally."

"If the other side had done it, I know where we'd be today," he said.

Schwellenbach Comment

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, warned the British that if they continued to act in a similar manner they might end by losing the sympathy of the United States.

"While I don't see that the incident was very much worse than prior incidents, it is an indication of the extent to which England will go in her attitude towards neutrals," Senator Schwellenbach said. "If England doesn't watch out, she will bring about a definite antagonism on the part of our people toward herself."

Defense Stiffens

By Thomas F. Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, Feb. 22.—Finland called more of her older men to the colors tonight as the Red army, hammering relentlessly at the Mannerheim Line, continued a tremendous offensive which the Finns said was being repelled with heavy losses after reaching a point 12 miles from Viipuri.

Approximately 2,000 Russians were reported killed at Taipale in unsuccessful assaults on the east flank of the line, while on the opposite flank the Finnish high command said the attackers had lost "large numbers" of tanks in fierce fighting.

The Finns did not mention their own losses, but the need of replacements was emphasized by an order calling out the classes of 1894 and 1895—men 44 to 46 years old. The three preceding classes were mobilized last week.

Fighting Nears Kamara

The extent to which the Mannerheim Line has been penetrated in the bitter battle that has raged along the Karelian Isthmus for almost four weeks was indicated by the nightly communique, which acknowledged that the fighting had reached the vicinity of Kamara.

The village is a station on the railway line from Leningrad to Viipuri, about 32 miles from the Russian frontier and about 12 miles from the Finnish seaport at the head of the Gulf of Finland which is the immediate objective of the Soviet drive.

[The Exchange Telegraph's Helsinki correspondent reported tonight that Viipuri was being shelled incessantly by six-inch Russian guns, the United Press said in a London dispatch. The dispatch said there were 300,000 Soviet soldiers on the Karelian Isthmus at the beginning of the operation and that these have been reinforced by 10,000 fresh troops daily, supported by tanks and more than 800 planes.—Editor's note.]

Scandinavia Worried

By the Associated Press

Kirkenes, Norway, Feb. 22.—An undetermined number of British warships are cruising off Finland's Petsamo district and Russia's Arctic coast near Murmansk, it was learned definitely here tonight.

This was the first confirmation of reports circulated since yesterday that British men-of-war were in those waters.

It was believed that the ships were in the area to prevent German vessels from using Norwegian territorial waters in trade with Russia.

Eighteen Russian bombing planes droned through a blinding snow today to stage a four-hour raid on the Petsamo district. The raids started at 8 a. m. and continued until noon.

Soviet Navy Ready

Copenhagen, Feb. 22 (AP).—Dispatches from northern Norway tonight definitely establishing that a number of British warships are lying in wait off Finland's Arctic coast and the Russian port of Murmansk produced fresh trepidation in Scandinavia where it was feared new incidents might threaten the northern countries' neutrality.

Some Scandinavian papers also said French warships had joined the British warships, possibly for the purpose of preventing German-Russian commerce making use of Norwegian waters.

It was recalled after the Altmark incident, in which a British boarding party raided a German steamer in a Norwegian fjord and took off British prisoners, the French and British expressed dissatisfaction with the way German ships evade the blockade through Norwegian waters, and threatened to take steps to stop it.

Because of the unusual configurations of Norway's shores, the Germans are able to navigate most of the way from Russia's ice-free port of Murmansk to the Baltic without going outside territorial waters.

Any new naval activity in Norwegian waters might confront Norway with new decisions decidedly embarrassing to her efforts to offend neither Allies nor Germans.

(Informed London quarters said there was reason to believe a British naval detachment recently had been in the vicinity of Petsamo, Finland's Arctic coastal region which is in Russian hands, near the Murmansk region.)

The Soviet Commissar of naval affairs, Admiral Nikolai Kuznetzoff, was reported by the Stockholm Aftonbladet to have flown from Moscow to Murmansk upon reports of Allied naval movements in the Arctic.

Russia's Arctic navy was said to have been placed in complete preparedness for war.

London, Feb. 22 (AP).—Two bombs, believed to have been planted by Irish Republican army terrorists, exploded tonight in London's West End.

Police believed the bombs were intended to renew the "terror campaign" which preceded the execution of two I. R. A. zealots

$1,251 Given to Blood Bank At Legion's Annual Ball

The District of Columbia Department of the American Legion celebrated its twenty-first anniversary last night with a ball at the Mayflower which also marked the climax of Legion's share in the blood bank campaign.

A check for $1,251.92, representing funds raised to date by the 38 Legion posts and their auxiliaries, was presented to The Washington Post to help perpetuate the blood and serum bank at Children's Hospital.

The check was presented by Department Commander William T. Slattery and Mrs. Mary Brown McMillin, president of the department auxiliary. It was accepted for The Post by Alexander F. Jones, managing editor.

At the ball nearly 1,000 Legionnaires and their ladies welcomed as honored guests the Ambassador from Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; Col. Emmanuel Lombard, military attache of the French Embassy, and Col. Teh-Chuan Kuo, military attache of the Chinese Embassy.

BIG SHOW OF 1940

If I were a professor of civics or political economy or American history or whatever they call the classes where young Americans are taught to be practical politicians—as if instinct wouldn't tell 'em—I'd hang on the wall an enlargement of that magnificent picture of Senator Taft holding a dead but still reproachful turkey by the neck.

Harlan Miller

A drawing of President Roosevelt saying "Scram, ladies!" when it was time for the Queen of England and the First Lady and the rest of the girls to leave the men at the Hyde Park dinner table would do equally well.

* * * *

So would that photograph of Jack Garner carrying a deer or stooping to pick up walnuts at Uvalde for exercise, or the one of Cal Coolidge with a pitchfork and duste or Herbert Hoover in a starched collar lashing a trout stream, or of Cordell Hull playing croquet.

* * * *

The professor could get the same idea across with a picture of Tom Dewey plowing at the old homestead in Michigan, or Jim Farley at a prize fight, or Paul McNutt in soup and fish, or Henry Wallace throwing a boomerang. (Sometimes it's a genuine private whimsy that's dragged into the limelight.)

"—vaudeville isn't dead"

They say that vaudeville is dead. But they forget its final refuge—the American political campaign. Vaudeville lives on, in the hearts of the American voters, and therefore in the election year behavior of candidates.

* * * *

Consciously or unconsciously, every talented politician knows he must provide the electorate with more than just wisdom, courage, probity, experience, the gift for getting along with friends and enemies, skill as an executive, a knowledge of public affairs.

He must provide them with entertainment.

* * * *

So even beneath the stuffed shirt of the stuffiest politician as well as in the bosoms of the true statesmen lurks the open-eyed realization, or the blind intuition, that he in direct competition with W. C. Fields and Mickey Mouse, with Charlie McCarthy and Clark Gable.

* * * *

As the Supreme Court has so wisely said, the States must serve as laboratories for experiment. And the experiment of Gov. O'Daniel at passing the biscuits in Texas, or of Happy Chandler in singing to the voters in Kentucky, or of Huey Long in Louisiana, or of that Seattle young man who became Lieutenant Governor, are refined and adapted and perfected by the mental giants of the national scene.

"—it approaches grand opera"

Thus, on the national stage, the regional vaudeville approaches the munificence of grand opera.

So far, I think, Senator Taft is in the lead. The other candidates will have to go some to equal his picture fishing in a rowboat, in vest and shirtsleeves, or the great group picture of the Taft clan, or the gem of him with an umbrella inspecting his garden in the rain. Mr. Taft is a shrewd gentleman, and these views have entertainment value, no matter how much he'd prefer more staid images.

* * * *

It isn't really as superficial as just posing for pictures in Indian feather headdresses or planting a kiss on the cheek of Miss Wisconsin Cheese.

The candidate must prove that he isn't merely a bundle of opinions about the budget or foreign affairs.

He must prove he's human; he must step out and do his stunt for the delectation of the masses; and it wouldn't hurt him to have a Frank Capra on his campaign strategy board.

* * * *

If a candidate has no personality, it must be invented. If his personality is ingrown, it must be brought out.

The American instinct is sound. All this may seem to add up to clowning. But the total is really greater: Proof of sense of humor and a sense of drama, of humility before the masses.

Somehow, as the entertainment proceeds, the voters decide which candidate's essential intelligence is steeped in a sense of proportion.

* * * *

Is his humor sturdy enough to preserve his courage and fairness in the face of controversy and confusion?

Does he play his role well enough in the tryout drama to assure a good performance in the greater drama to come?

The voters watch the show and decide. Let's hope they're good critics.

Report Opposes Putting Courts Over Agencies

Brookings Survey Finds No Absolutism, Criticizes Logan Bill

A Brookings Institution report last night criticized the Logan-Walter bill to provide court reviews of orders and regulations of quasi-judicial Federal agencies, and opposed proposals to place nearly all administrative activities under the President.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, announced he will move for consideration of the measure, after he received from the Attorney General's committee on administrative procedure a special report regarding pressure exerted by members of Congress on the Federal Communications Commission in connection with applications for licenses to operate radio stations.

The report recommended that the FCC pursue a "definitely courageous course" and "discourage" such lobbying. Consideration of the Logan-Walter measure, passed alst year but recalled for further consideration at the request of Administration leaders, had been delayed pending receipt of the report.

New Court Urged

The Brookings report, written by Drs. Frederick F. Blachly and Miriam E. Oatman after survey of Federal regulation of business and industry, proposed that a new constitutional court be established to hear appeals from administrative agency rulings when constitutional or statutory rights are involved.

It criticized the Logan-Walter bill for failing to take into account "the needs of day-by-day Administration" and for defying "long-settled principles" of judicial jurisdiction.

Furthermore, the report said, the bill "disregards the constitutional separation of powers" and seeks to compel courts to interfere with legislative actions properly delegated by Congress to quasi-judicial administrative agencies.

No Fear of Absolutism

Summarizing the report, the institution said:

"The authors state that, because of the careful procedures and judicial controls already established, there is little fear of administrative absolutism under the operation of the present system . . . urge that . . . improvements be based on a far-reaching study on constitutional law."

The report found that the existing system operates efficiently without invading individual rights.

Commenting in general on rulings by Federal quasi-judicial agencies, the Attorney General's committee, headed by Dean G. Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, said:

"Administrative justice will not acquire the stature of its judicial counterparts until it is as immune from lobbying as most courts are popularly thought to be."

If the FCC is to avoid the imputation that it is subject to pressure, the committee declared, "it must pursue a definitely courageous course." It added:

"Unlike a court, the commission cannot punish for contempt one who diminishes confidence in its objectivity by seeking privately to sway its judgment of a pending matter.

"But, on the other hand, it can, like a court, protect itself by a dignified and unwavering rejection of communications and arguments whose mere reception, even though their contents later be ignored, involves a lowering of prestige."

Associated Gas Is SEC's Job, Jackson Says

Morgenthau Also Prefers U. S. Agency To Hanes as Trustee

The controversy within the Administration over the Associated Gas and Electric Corporation trusteeship broke into the open yesterday when Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Attorney General Jackson insisted that the trusteeship would be best handled by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Morgenthau and Jackson thus, in effect, opposed the appointment of John W. Hanes, until recently Undersecretary of the Treasury, as trustee.

Both officials made known their position in letters to Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, who is leading the fight against the appointment of Hanes and in favor of the appointment of the SEC.

The SEC, however, has rejected by a four-to-one vote the suggestion that it accept the trusteeship. By the same vote, it decided that Hanes' sponsorship by New York banking interests, and his support by Roger Whiteford, Washington attorney and former Associated Gas Corporation president, did not disqualify him as an "independent trustee" within the meaning of the Chandler Bankruptcy Act. Norris and Edward C. Eicher, the lone dissenting SEC member, argue that Hanes' connections legally disqualify him as a trustee.

Both the Associated Gas and Electric Corporation and the Associated Gas and Electric Co., top holding companies in the $1,000,000,000 utility system, are before the Federal District Court for the southern New York district for reorganization under the Chandler act.

Neither Morgenthau nor Jackson made any reference to Hanes. Morgenthau told Norris that he had instructed Treasury counsel to bring his letter of protest to the attention of the court.

Closed Shop Held No Peril To Free Press

Guild President Replies to Charge News May Be Colored

Kenneth Crawford, president of the American Newspaper Guild, told the House Labor Committee yesterday that a closed shop on newspapers constituted no threat to the freedom of the press.

Answering charges made before the committee Wednesday by Oliver Holden, executive director of the American Press Society, Crawford declared that the closed shop in newsrooms would not lead to coloration of the news or discrimination against newspapermen because of their opinions.

"The closed shop is necessary to our continued growth and to the ultimate success of our effort to stabilize the wages, hours and working conditions."

Holden Asks Change in Law

In his testimony, Holden declared that the closed shop was "definitely an infringement upon the freedom of opinion and affiliation of news workers." He proposed amending the Wagner Act so that no newspaperman would be required to join a union.

Declaring that guild membership itself has been divided on the freedom of the press issue at times, Crawford told the committee that now it was "overwhelmingly agreed that the closed shop was no danger to freedom of the press."

He added that the term "closed ship" was a misnomer, as the guild actually almed at "guild shops"—an arrangement whereby the employer can hire anyone he chooses, but the employe must become a guild member within a certain time after his employment.

Asked by Acting Chairman Ramspeck of the Labor Committee what would happen "if officials of the guild ordered a reported to color the news and he didnt do it," Crawford replied:

"Mr. Chairman, it just couldn't happen."

Publisher Is Boss

"What would happen if officials of the C. I. O. [with which the guild is affiliated] issued instructions to write news against the A. F. L.?" pursued Ramspeck.

"We'd tell 'em to go to hell," Crawford responded. "We wouldn't submit to that kind of directions, and the C. I. O. officers wouldn't attempt it." He added that even if the guild did submit, the "ultimate decision" as to what goes into newspapers rests with the publisher.

"We have good, loyal guild members who kick the stuffing out of the C. I. O. in every editorial they write," Crawford said with a smile.

"Well, if they worked in a closed shop, how long would it take you to kick the stuffings out of them?" retorted Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina.

"We wouldn't do it," responded the witness.

Opposes Segregation

He declared the guild wanted to be 'treated "like any other labor union," and opposed "putting us in a separate category by denying the closed shop to the guild alone.

In explaining the stand of the American Press Society, Holden had told the Labor Committee that freedom of the press would be endangered if the guild had power "to cause the economic death of any of its members for heresy." He cited examples of alleged persecution of nonconformists by the guild.

Crawford said he thought Holden had been seeing "ghosts under the bed."

airport here, he denied that he plans to marry Miss Romelle Schneider, who was his nurse at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. He said he intends "being a bachelor for a while." Miss Schneider is "simply a very good friend of mine," he said.

Roosevelt arrived in Philadelphia later in the day to deliver a Washington's Birthday speech to the B'Nai B'rith. An interviewer told him a letter has been discovered in which Washington implied approval of a third term for Presidents.

"The question is," said James "how George Washington would feel about it now." He added that the lives of the first and present President "have been far apart."

Not "Taken Over," Says Ord

San Francisco, Feb. 22 (AP).—W. E. J. Ord, vice president of Johnson & Higgins, San Francisco insurance firm, said today his company still retained a major portion of the insurance covering ships of the American Presidents Steamship Line.

Ord was commenting upon a statement of John A. Sargent, of Boston, president of Roosevelt & Sargent, that the Eastern firm had taen over the account.

"Roosevelt & Sargent have a very small portion of the whole, a portion of the ship liability coverage," Ord said.

The Gallup Poll

Republicans Believed More Likely To Balance Budget Than Democrats

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 22.—The repeated attacks which Republican candidates like Senator Taft and Thomas E. Dewey have launched against the fiscal policies of the New Deal raise the question whether the Republicans, if they get into office, are more likely to balance the budget than the Democrats.

GALLUP

Taft has said that Federal income and expenditures could be balanced within two years, and the report of the Republican program committee early this week likewise came out for a balanced budget by 1942. What impression has the Republican fiscal program made on the voters?

A national survey just completed by the Institute shows that the largest single group of voters think the Republicans are more likely to balance the budget in the next four years than the Democrats, but a substantial number think that neither party will be able to accomplish this aim.

The specific issue on which opinion was measured follows:

"Which political party do you think is more likely to balance the Federal Government's budget in the next four years—the Republicans or the Democrats?"

Those with opinions voted as follows:

Republicans more likely . . 42%
Democrats more likely . . . 23
Neither 35

Approximately one voter in every six polled (16 per cent) expressed no opinion.

In relation to the coming campaign this sentiment is significant on at least two counts. First, it shows that the symbol of "thriftiness" and conservative fiscal policy is at present more associated with the G. O. P. than with the Democrats in the minds of voters. Second, a large body of opinion—more than one-third of the voters polled—is skeptical of the ability of either party to balance the budget, which means that even the Republicans will have to convince many voters of their ability to make ends meet if they win the Presidency.

Earlier Institute polls show that not all of the Nation's voters feel that it is necessary or important to balance the budget. At the time of the 1936 campaign a little over one-quarter expressed the opinions in a survey that there was no pressing necessity for budget balancing. In another recent study, published last week, a substantial number of voters (48 per cent) were against Roosevelt's proposed cut in farm spending, although relatively large majorities approved his proposed cuts in relief and public works.

The public attitude toward the whole issue of spending and budget balancing is conditioned largely by party affiliation, the Republican voters being, on the whole, much more in favor of reduced spending and budget balancing than the Democrats. The intensely partisan character of opinion on spending is a good indication that it will be a leading campaign issue. The question still undecided is whether the budget-balancing appeals of Republican candidates will attract enough Democratic voters to help swing the election to the G. O. P.

On this question today's poll throws some light. The results show that while the great majority of Republicans confidently believe that the G. O. P. can balance the budget, the largest single group of Democrats do not believe either party will be able to accomplish the feat.

Which Party is More Likely to Balance the Budget?

	Repub. Party	Demo. Party	Neither
Republicans ..	75%	4%	21%
Democrats	15	41	44

$102,000,000 Sent From U.S. To Kin Abroad

Decrease of 10% From 1938 Is Noted In Remittances

The United States supplied an estimated $102,000,000 to foreign countries in 1939 by personal remittances from American residents to their kinfolks in "the old country."

Preliminary estimates by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce show that about $137,000,000 was sent to European and Asiatic nations last year, while Americans abroad transmitted only $35,000,000 to the United States.

The net loss was offset many times over by a favorable American trade balance of $859,000,000 and record-breaking gold imports of $3,040,000,000. In view of the shortage of foreign exchange in many countries, however, the $102,000,000 was doubly welcome "golden gravy" in Greece, Italy and other nations.

Personal remittances to foreign countries last year decreased 10 per cent from the $150,000,000 sent abroad in 1938. Remittances are made by international postal money orders, 50 banks and steamship, communications and express companies.

Italy is one of the greatest beneficiaries, with an average of $25,000,000 being sent there annually by Italo-Americans. Remittances were much higher shortly after the World War, hitting $200,000,000 in 1919.

An estimated 175,000 foreign-born Greeks sent $20,000,000 back to Athens and Grecian towns and farms last year. Sweden received $4,000,000 and Norway $2,000,000 from American remittances.

Figures for China are difficult to obtain, but the best estimate is that 73,000 American Chinese sent approximately $35,000,000 back last year, a somewhat higher amount than was transmitted before Japan invaded their homeland. Remittances to Japan maintained a normal level of about $7,000,000.

The 750,000 Eire-born Irish here sent $11,000,000 to the "Ould Country," not including Irish Sweepstakes funds.

Remittances to Finland (not including war donations) were approximately $2,000,000 last year. Several million dollars were remitted to Russia, but no accurate figures are available.

Insurance Companies Improve

By the Associated Press

Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, told the Senate yesterday that the Monopoly Committee's study of insurance "already has resulted in voluntary improvements by the life insurance companies."

A report of the superintendent of New York State, he said, substantiates his contention.

At the same time O'Mahoney reiterated assertions that nothing in the testimony before the committee "gives any basis for the fears that have been expressed in some quarters that it is the intention of the committee to nationalize the insurance business."

The committee's only objective, he declared, was to make the "system of free private enterprise" work in the best possible manner.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, expressed gratification at O'Mahoney's statement, saying he understood meetings of policyholders were being held or would be held throughout the country to protest "what they assume to be the purpose of the committee to invade or destroy the values behind their policies."

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina), said he thought the flow of "propaganda" inspired by certain insurance interests would continue despite O'Mahoney's "satisfactory" explanation.

O'Mahoney said most of the evidence before the committee was "testimonial" to the efficiency with which the institution of life insurance had been managed.

"Tastes Better and Better" SAYS—George Jessel

HAM FISHER, creator of Joe Palooka, has definite opinions when it comes to whiskey! "Seagram's 7 Crown", says Mr. Fisher, "today is smoother and finer than ever—it makes a wonderfully silky Manhattan."

GEORGE JESSEL, beloved comedian of stage and radio, compared Seagram's Crowns of today with the Crown Whiskies of 1934—the identical whiskey that became America's largest seller in the 90 days after Repeal. Said Mr. Jessel: "Your present Crowns taste much smoother and milder." Today, say Seagram's—and taste the difference.

REX BEACH, author of 20 "best sellers" and a judge of fine whiskey tasted Seagram's 5 Crown of today and the 5 Crown of five years ago. He, too, agreed: "Much finer today ...a great all-around whiskey!"

D. C. Boy Takes Full Blame In Bank Holdup

Follows Mother's Advice, Pleads Guilty In Baltimore Robbery

The 18-year-old son of a Washington woman yesterday pleaded guilty in a preliminary hearing in Baltimore to a $1,500 bank robbery charge and sought to clear three other youths of blame, the Associated Press reported.

Mack Lloyd Wilt, who surrendered to Baltimore police because his mother persuaded him it was the best thing to do, pleaded guilty to robbing the Westport branch of the Union Trust Co. last Monday noon, and to charges of taking a pistol and automobile used in the holdup. He was bound over to the grand jury in $10,000 bond.

"Please disregard the whole thing with the exception of my case," pleaded Wilt in his effort to absolve William J. De Bullet, 19; Lester E. De Witt, 19, and Dean S. Dentry, 21. "I am in the wrong and they are not," the boy said to Magistrate Edward A. Dougherty in Southern Police Court.

"It is no use to make them suffer for my mistake. There is no use ruining their lives in addition to mine. They knew nothing about it."

"I appreciate your view," replied Dougherty, "but, because of the testimony produced before me here, I will have to hold all four for the grand jury." De Bullet, charged as an accessory, was held in $2,000 bond. De Witt, also accused of being an accessory, and Dentry, charged with receiving stolen property, were released in $1,000 bond each. All three pleaded innocent.

Police Lieut. Fred Ford said the plea of Wilt's mother, Mrs. Thelma E. Wilt, caused the youth to return to Baltimore and surrender after fleeing to Washington, and police testified that $1,450 was returned by Mrs. Wilt.

Blamed On Impulse

Night before the hearing Mrs. Wilt told a Post reporter that "Mack will take the blame." She said she would fight to save her son.

In the thoughts of his mother, Mack has done the thing on "the spur of the moment," in despair over having flunked out of school the week before. He wanted to get money to go on with high school, so he could get into college and study medicine, she said.

"He was one of the best boys there was," she said. "He got into bad company."

Mrs. Wilt, 42, and a widow, operates a boarding house in the first block of N street northwest. Her husband died in August of 1929 in Baltimore.

Slew Wife To Save Self, Says DePerini

Hunted Since Slaying Tuesday, Aged Man Surrenders to Police

Joseph A. DePerini, of Riverdale, Md., 84-year-old retired blacksmith, yesterday chose to face a charge of murdering his wife rather than continue to live as a penniless fugitive.

After eluding capture since Tuesday night, when police found the body of his wife, slain with a butcher knife, in the kitchen of their home, DePerini walked into the Hyattsville police station yesterday morning and said he was surrendering because he "couldn't exist without money."

Policeman Earl Huber, in charge of the investigation, said DePerini, former blacksmith with the Capital Transit Co., made a written statement in which he admitted killing his wife in self-defense.

Huber said DePerini accused his wife, who was 46 and weighed 200 pounds, of rushing toward him with a butcherknife. DePerini, according to Huber, said he struck his wife a blow in the face, seized the knife and felled her with a wound in the throat. The accused man then admitted stabbing her 7 more times, Huber said.

An autopsy by Dr. James I. Boyd revealed the woman's nose was broken. DePerini's only wound, police said, was a skinned knuckle on the forefinger of his right hand.

DePerini told police he had lived at the D. C. Hotel, Ninth street and New York avenue northwest, since Tuesday night, having registered under another name. Police said DePerini admitted having about $40 when he started out, but had either lost it or had it stolen.

He caught a street car in Washington and rode to Hyattsville to give himself up, police said.

DePerini was quoted as saying he called a step-daughter, Mrs. E. A. Webster, at Camp Springs, Md., Tuesday night to tell her Mrs. DePerini was dead. He denied having telephoned a granddaughter in Washington, as reported.

He said he did not remember sending a note to Frank Dawson, son-in-law, of Riverdale, in which he allegedly admitted killing Mrs. DePerini and threatened to commit suicide.

"I never had any idea of committing suicide," DePerini said.

Police said the handwriting on the note and on the statement yesterday was the same.

DePerini's statement was made in the presence of Supt. Arthur W. Hepburn, Detective Sergt. Ralph W. Brown, and Policemen Charles N. Thomsen and Huber.

A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Monday at 10 a. m. before Magistrate Walter Green in Hyattsville Police Court.

Students to Pick Beauty in the Raw

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 22.—Who is the "best undressed woman" of the year?

Piqued by perennial selections of the "ten best-dressed women," the Art Students League of New York is going to pick the ten who look best without benefit of two much drapery, on the grounds that "clothes make the man—shape makes the woman."

They will get down to the bare facts by studying 1,500 photographs of slimly dressed and unclad film stars, stage players, ballet dancers and professional models. The winners will be announced at the league's annual ball Friday night.

Society beauties and other "amateurs" are barred because the art students feel they uncover only to "get their pictures in the papers."

They are held for entering Mexico on forged passports.

Presbyterian Pension Fund Ready for Vote

$3,000,000 Set Aside To Provide Old Age Security for Clergy

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 22.—The Presbyterian Church in the United States (Southern) today announced completion of a $3,000,000 fund to underwrite pensions for all of its ministers and missionaries.

Dr. Henry H. Sweets, secretary of the board of pensions, said the fund effective April 1, 1940, would benefit 2,500 ministers and 400 foreign missionaries.

"Efforts have been made since 1717 to provide for the ministers and missionaries who have been called away from the sources of material gain and all plans have proved inadequate and for the first time in its history this branch of the church will begin to fully meet its obligations to its servants . . . when on account of age or disability they are forced to retire both from labor and from income," Dr. Sweets said.

At the start minimum pensions of $50 a month will be paid. Ministers will contribute 2½ per cent of their annual salaries with their respective churches contributing 7½ per cent. Missionaries will contribute the same as ministers with the boards of home and foreign missions contributing the 7½ per cent.

Church workers who have reached the age of 65 will be eligible for retirement. The compensation of those forced to retire before that time because of disability will be based on the number of years of service to the church. Retirement at 65 however, is not compulsory.

Dr. Sweets said it was planned eventually to absorb the work of the board of ministerial relief into the fund. This board is now aiding widows and minor children of ministers and missionaries. Under the new plan widows would receive a minimum of $300 annually, with $100 a year for each minor child.

Churches, ministers and missionaries now are voting on the plan and will be given six months to a year to signify their intentions.

The plan will be operative in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, North and South Carolina, Louisiana and Mississippi.

6-Year-Old God-King Ascends Forbidden Tibet's Gold Throne

New Delhi, India (Friday), Feb. 23 (AP).—The child Dalai Lama formally ascended the golden throne of Tibet at Lhasa yesterday to reign as "his holiness the precious Dalai Lama, owner of all living beings in the snowy country," official shortwave advices from a British mission in the Tibetan capital said today.

Enthronement of the child, Ling-Erh La-Mu-Tan-Chu, occupied the entire day, and the ceremonies may last for several more days in the great hall of the Potala, golden roofed palace of the forbidden city.

Yesterday's rites reached their crescendo when the peasant boy, regarded as the 6-year-old reincarnation of his predecessor, the thirteenth Dalai Lama, walked hand in hand with the chief abbot and another chamberlain through the lamplit great hall, thronged with dignataries. Over the carpet marked with eight lucky signs he toddled with the help of the priests, then clambered up on the massive throne amidst the throb of trumpets and solemnly surveyed his subjects.

Now he is lord, spiritual and temporal of all Tibet, the world's only theocracy—vice regent of Buddha on earth and god-king of a country nearly three times the size of California, a land in which one out of every five men belong to the ruling class of priests.

Supposedly this divine child was born the exact moment the old Dalia Lama died, on December 17, 1933.

Since 1904 when a British party visited Lhasa, the British have sought to extend their influence in Tibet—which Chinese and Russians also have sought to dominate.

Virginia Boy, 13, Gets Penitentiary Term in Slaying

Jonesville, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—Thirteen-year-old Harold Eldridge tearfully received a five-year penitentiary sentence today for the fatal shooting of Roy Stapleton, 17, a Lee County neighbor.

(Usually such youthful cases are turned over to State welfare authorities in Richmond, and sent to the industrial farm instead of to the penitentiary).

A jury was unable to reach a decision in the case at the November term of court. A later trial was averted by the boy's plea of guilty yesterday.

Eldridge said at first he shot Stapleton who he said was trying to force entrance to his home "to whip me and little brother." Commonwealth's Attorney Robert B. Ely offered testimony, however, to show that Stapleton was shot as he rode horseback by the Eldridge house on his way to a lumber camp. The State said blood was found in the saddle.

Wife, 16, Accused Of Slaying Mate, Freed on Bond

New Martinsville, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—Mrs. Violet Delaney Long, 16-year-old widow accused of slaying her husband, was released last night from the Wetzel County Jail on $5,000 bond pending the opening of court May 7.

The slender, expectant mother looked wan from her five days incarceration and told Sheriff Frank Berger she was "tickled" at the prospects of rejoining her 2-year-old son, Ogie.

She left immediately for Time, Pa., near Waynesburg, to stay with her son and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Delaney.

Sheriff Berger said his prisoner told him she did not know the gun with which she shot her husband, Okey Long, 27, last Thursday, was loaded.

Lansing Sought Break in 1915 With Germany

Papers Reveal U. S. Efforts to Separate Austria and Kaiser

By the Associated Press

President Wilson wanted both the German and the Austrian ambassadors to quit Washington a year and a half before the United States entered the World War, it was disclosed yesterday through the State Department's publication of papers of Robert Lansing, World War Secretary of State.

The same papers show that Lansing advocated a rupture with Germany as early as August, 1915, and also that the American Government was seeking to separate Austria from Germany a month before it declared war on Germany.

President Wilson was determined to get rid of the German Ambassador, Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, and the Austrian Ambassador, Constantin T. Dumba, following a disclosure they had employed an American citizen to carry secret messages to Berlin. These messages outlined activities of the envoys to cripple American plants manufacturing munitions for the Allies.

Agrees on Need for Action

One of the Lansing papers is a note from Wilson to Lansing, saying: "I entirely agree with you that we shall have to take some decided action with regard to the activities of Dumba as well as those of Bernstorff . . . what do you think would be the best course, a private intimation to each of them which would allow them to ask to be relieved, without public rebuke, or a direct request on our part to their governments? I do not know the practice in these matters."

The recall of Dumba was requested shortly thereafter, but Bernstorff was permitted to remain on.

The Lansing papers, revealing that Lansing was seriously considering war with Germany as early as August, 1915, contain a letter from Lansing to President Wilson, in which he says:

"On the assumption that we sever diplomatic intercourse with the German government, which responds by a declaration of war, the consequences internationally would seem to be the complete restoration of friendship and confidence with the Allies and the necessary recognition of the United States as a party to the peace negotiations.

Conferred With Austrians

"We would be in a position to influence the Allies, if they should be victorious, to be lenient in their demands and to regain a part of the good will of Germany by being a generous enemy. If, on the other hand, Germany should triumph, we would be included in any settlement made, and Germany would be deprived of the free hand she would otherwise have in dealing with us after she had overcome her European adversaries.

"If the foregoing views are sound, it would appear that our usefulness in the restoration of peace would certainly not be lessened by a state of war between this country and Germany, and it might even be increased."

The Lansing papers show that, even while still a neutral, the United States had engaged in conversations with Austria which might have led to a separate peace, with Austria deserting Germany.

U. S. Reveals Efforts to Save Nurse Cavell

By the Associated Press

Dramatic details of American diplomatic efforts to save Edith Cavell, British nurse executed by the Germans in 1915, were published yesterday by the State Department together with disclosure that:

All efforts of the American Legation at Brussels were carried on without consultation with the State Department.

Walter Hines Page, American Ambassador to London, turned over to the British an official American account of the case, and British authorities published it without authorization.

German authorities in Belgium were much incensed by the publication, and Brand Whitlock, American Minister at Brussels, reported that it was with difficulty that "serious complications" were avoided.

The Cavell case, which created a furor in England and America, is covered in the Lansing papers, the correspondence of Robert Lansing, World War Secretary of State, which was published yesterday.

Gibson Sent With Letter

Miss Cavell, who was head of a Belgian training school for nurses, was convicted by a German court-martial of "having hidden in her home English and French soldiers as well as Belgians of the age to bear arms, all desirous of going to the front." The German authorities said she "confessed to having furnished these soldiers with the money necessary to travel to France and to having aided their departure from Belgium by procuring guides to conduct them secretly across the Dutch frontier."

She was tried secretly and the German authorities did not inform the United States Legation, at that time looking after British interests in Belgium, as to the progress of the trial or the sentence of execution.

On the night before the execution, October 12, 1915, the legation learned of the death sentence, however, from a source which is not disclosed. Whitlock was too ill to see the German authorities personally, but he dispatched Hugh Gibson, secretary of legation (later Ambassador to Belgium); to Baron von der Lancken, chief of the political department of the German general government in Belgium, with a letter in which he said:

"My dear baron: I am too ill to present my request myself, but I appeal to your generous heart to support it and to save this unfortunate from death. Have pity on her."

Gibson Hinted at Reprisal

Gibson also got the Spanish Minister to leave a dinner and go with him to the German authorities.

Baron von der Lancken himself did not know of the sentence of execution, but telephoned the presiding judge of the court-martial and was informed that the sentence had been handed down and would be carried out before morning.

Gibson used every argument he could with the German authorities, "emphasizing (he said in a report to the Minister) the horror of executing a woman no matter what her offense, pointing out that the death sentence had heretofore been imposed only for actual cases of espionage and that Miss Cavell was not even accused by the German authorities of anything so serious."

He also said "I went so far as to point out the fearful effect of a summary execution of this sort upon public opinion both here and abroad and although I had no authority for doing so, called attention to the possibility that it might bring about reprisals."

But all efforts were in vain. A firing squad executed Miss Cavell.

Whitlock sent a long report to Ambassador Page, who turned it over to the British authorities for their information, whereupon they published it.

The legation was obliged to send away its legal adviser, a Belgian attorney, who had taken a leading part in the plea for Miss Cavell.

S.S.S. TONIC must be good

So many people take it
—to increase appetite
—to boost energy

COUNTLESS thousands of men and women can testify to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought them.

The facts are simple because of all conditions effecting the human body a low blood count is most deceptive. If you feel rundown . . . lack a keen appetite . . . have lost weight . . . don't give up until you restore those precious red-blood-cells back to normal.

S.S.S. Tonic may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again.

In S.S.S. Tonic you go after the trouble in two ways . . . first you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

Try S.S.S. which any drug store can supply and no ethical dealer will suggest a substitute. The big 20 oz. size is a two week's treatment and represents a saving in the purchase price. S.S.S. Co.

Soviet Oil City Blacked Out In Arms Tests

South Russian Fleet Finishes Maneuvers As Turks Talk War

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Feb. 22.—Russia, even as she is embroiled with Finland, is testing anew her defenses in the vital south where her wealth in oil is concentrated.

Conclusion of important winter maneuvers in the Black Sea of the fleet commanded by Admiral Oktyabrsky was disclosed today simultaneously with word that a training blackout had been decreed from Tuesday until further notice in Baku, Caspian seaport from which the oil supplies of the region are shipped.

Russia's naval forces are divided into five fleets—based in the Far East, the Caspian, the Black Sea, and Baltic and the Arctic.

From Baku a pipeline crosses the southernmost extremity of the Soviet Union to deliver oil to the Black Sea port of Batum.

(The Russian Caucasian oil fields have figured prominently in speculation over the possibility of a spread of the European conflict to the Near East since Britain and France were reported to have massed some 570,000 men in Syria, Egypt and Palestine.

(A British-French-Turkish drive on the fields has been envisioned as possible in a two-edged stroke to cripple Russia and deprive Germany of a chance to get needed petroleum.

(Russia obtains nearly all her oil from fields in the Baku region; Nazis have arranged to get such oil at Batum and transport it across the Black Sea and up the Danube to make up for the lagging oil supplies from Rumania.

(In their reports on the Russian Black Sea fleet maneuvers, mariners said all classes of ships took part in the exercises and many of them apparently had been built recently.)

New Turkish War Step

Istanbul, Feb. 22 (AP).—The Turkish government took another step toward putting the nation on a full war footing today by deciding to group all exporters and importers into controlled syndicates.

Emphasizing again the close cooperation between Britain and France and their nonbelligerent ally, Turkey, Gen. Maxime Weygand and Lieut. Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, heads respectively of the French and British Near East forces, met in Palestine for a talk, understood to be connected with the recent session of Turkey's supreme war council.

Under today's decision all import and export prices will be controlled by government order. The syndicates are to be charged with responsibility for accumulating stocks of raw materials and manufactured products to assure adequate supplies for national defense and the civilian population's wartime needs. Stiff penalties are to be provided.

Talk of Knockout Blow

The Turkish press, again turning to the possibility of a British-French-Turkish attack on Russia's rich Caucasian oil fields, said such an attack might easily prove the knockout blow for Russia.

It addition, it would shut Germany off from all opportunity of getting oil there, one newspaper observed.

It pointed out that air raids on such Russian oil centers as Tiflis, Baku and Batum would cripple Russia, which obtains a large part of its petroleum from these fields.

Italian Troops at Rhodes

Copyright by New York Times

Athens, Greece, Feb. 22.—The Italian-owned Island of Rhodes, off the Turkish coast, is the scene of urgent war preparations, it was learned today. Recently, 5,000 more Italian troops arrrived, bringing the estimated total of the garrison there to 40,000.

Virtually the whole of the island is protected by barbed wire fences. The reason for these precautions given here is fear of a Turkish attack.

Finland Reports Russians Repelled

Finns reported continuing successes, resulting in the capture of "several enemy strong points" and 200 prisoners.

In the Pitkaranta Islands along the northern shore of the lake, the Finnish communique said, several Russian supply columns were dispersed and more than 200 vehicles destroyed.

Stubborn air battles took place as Russian bombers roared across the lines to bomb localities immediately behind the isthmus front, including Kakisalmi, Lappeenranta, Hilpola and Elisenvaara.

The Finns said that the Russian bombers flew in massed formations numbering 40 or 50 planes and that 13 of the Soviet planes were shot down.

The Russians also bombed Rovaniemi and a few localities in central and southern Finland, but the Finns said there had been no loss of life so far as could be learned.

Voroshilov in Charge

London, Feb. 22 (INS).—Russia's army is launching the biggest offensive of the Soviet-Finnish war at dawn tomorrow against Finland's second City of Viipuri, a Stockholm dispatch to the London Daily Express said late tonight.

The message said War Commissar Voroshilov was personally directing the biggest military operation undertaken since the World War.

Tomorrow, February 23, is the twenty-second anniversary of the formal creation of the Red army.

The text of the communique:

"February 22. Nothing of importance at the front. On the Karelian Isthmus Soviet troops, repulsing the enemy, occupied 21 defensive fortifications, including 15 iron and concrete artillery forts.

"In view of a snowstorm, aviation activities were restricted to reconnoitering flights."

Unusual attention was focussed on the meeting of Scandinavian foreign ministers in Copenhagen Saturday and Sunday in belief a greater degree of Scandinavian cooperation may result.

Swedish indignation was running high over the Russian bombing of Pajala, a village near the Finnish frontier, yesterday and the press demanded that full compensation be asked of Moscow.

Swedish antiaircraft units were under instructions to fire on any foreign planes flying over the frontiers.

American Club Told Paris Awaits Welles

Will Be Welcomed, Vice Premier Says At Washington Fete

By P. J. Philip

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Feb. 22.—Vice Premier Chautemps speaking in place of Premier Daladier, who is suffering from a cold, at the Washington Birthday dinner of the American Club in Paris, referred to the forthcoming visit of Undersecretary Sumner Welles, who he said would be welcomed here.

"Between you and us," M. Chautemps said, speaking to 300 members and guests of the club, "there is so much in common that even though we speak different languages there is no division of thought. You have the same conception as we of how relations between different peoples should be conducted, that is—by fidelity to contract and the given word, by respect for the independence of the weak as well as of the strong, by formal repudiation of violence and trickery as means of political action.

"Neither we nor the British have any other aim. We never interferred when ideals of religion and race were being persecuted within German territory. But we are resolved to fight without mercy to prevent persecution and oppression being extended over other peoples."

Cheering greeted the presentation by Max Shoop, president of the club, of the British Ambassador and the ministers of Czecho-Slovakia, Finland and Poland.

Maynard Barnes, First Secretary of the United States Embassy, spoke, recalling President Roosevelt's words that while America is neutral, all Americans are free in their hearts to judge for themselves.

Quoting from Washington he concluded that the conception of liberty and government on which the United States was founded was not to be found in the doctrines or actions of the totalitarian states and that in his heart, like so many other Americans, George Washington would have been, had he lived today, on the side of France.

J.F. McKinney Dies On Visit to S. C.

John F. McKinney, 58, of 1307 Trinidad avenue northeast, associated with the Capital Transit Co. 38 years, died Wednesday at a Greenville, S. C., hospital, it was learned here yesterday. He suffered a heart attack while visiting relatives.

Mr. McKinney leaves his wife, Mrs. Azile E. McKinney; three sons, Douglas, Neal B. and Harold McKinney, and three brothers and three sisters. Funeral services will be held tomorrow in Greenville with burial in New Liberty Baptist Churchyard there.

Gen. Weygand's Camel Corps Ranges Far on Its Own Power

Veteran Desert Soldiers Guard Wastelands and Oil Line; Demonstrate Completeness of 'Fire Brigade' in East

(Frazier Hunt, author and war correspondent, has just completed a 600-mile inspection tour of the Franco-British troop concentrations in the Near East. In the following dispatch from the land of Biblical lore, Hunt describes his visit with Gen. Maxime Weygand's Camel Corps and the French Foreign Legion.—Editor's note.)

With the French army in Syria (By wireless from Damascus) Feb. 22. Nothing has been overlooked in this great mystery army of Gen. Maxime Weygand. It is complete to the minutest details, and it is doubtful if anywhere in the world one could possibly find a more professional army.

FRAZIER HUNT

Today, in the desert outside of this ancient historical city, I visited a company of Gen. Weygand's camel corps. It was soldiering raised to the highest degree. But it was far more than that. It was concrete evidence of the completeness of this extraordinary cosmopolitan army whose duties are both varied and unknown.

Two days before I arrived, a company of 150 Bedouins recruited from the desert tribes of Syria had made a practice march 62 miles across the desert, without food or water for the men or camels, in 8 hours. They rested the following day, but early this morning they had gone off for maneuvers, and it was late in the afternoon when I saw them returning.

It was a sight I will never forget as long as I live. In columns of fours they came riding in from the desert skyline, their red capes, white headgear and the red camel coverings with great tassels flashing in the afternoon sun. The men were singing desert marching songs, while the camels stuck their long necks forward jogging home.

Merely to complete the picture of desert life, the commander ordered tents erected, and here I was received the same as a sheik.

The camel outfit was an old company of the French Syrian army, and some of the men had served for 15 years. When they joined up they brought their own female riding camels, for males are no good except as pack camels. Many of these camels are worth more than $100 apiece, and the French captain's own mount, which was imported from South Arabia, was worth $500. With the 150 camels went two special desert patrol cars mounting two machine guns each.

Now recruited to full war strength, these desert companies not only watch over the desert tribes but help guard the great pipeline from the Mosul oilfields to the Mediterranean. Quietly they go about their duties watching thousands of square miles of country which is of little importance at the present but which some day might be a battleground for priceless oil.

Can Live Off Country

Under their own power, and living off the country, these camel desert companies are able to travel hundreds of miles. Certainly they are the most vivid feature of this war that has not yet come to the desert.

Later this evening I visited the second most colorful part of Gen. Weygand's far-scattered army—the eternally interesting Foreign Legion. This battalion was quartered on a hill high above the old city, and looking down on its ancient mosques and the tombs of both St. John and the Moslem Saladin, who captured Damascus from the Crusaders.

A battalion's bugle corps met me with the stirring march of the legionnaires, which countless brave and unknown men have listened to on their way to death.

I asked the commandant if any Americans were here. He shook his head and replied, "I do not know who these men are or from where they came. We never ask. They never tell."

The Strangest Army

Walking through the barracks, mess hall and club rooms, all spotlessly clean, I peered into a hundred faces. Once or twice I was so sure that I saw an American that I almost stopped and questioned.

Tomorrow I shall drive over passes and through a rich valley, and then over the Lebanon Mountains to the sea and Beirut. I will have done 600 miles and I will have seen fighting men from all the world—Annamites from Indo-China, Algerians, Moroccans, Tunisians from North Africa, Senegals from West Africa, Malgaches from Madagascar, Syrian cavalry, Bedouin camel troops and sturdy sons of metropolitan France. They form the strangest army ever brought together.

They are Gen. Weygand's army of mystery—"firemen," in the words of this great French soldier, who will put out a fire anywhere it breaks out.

Thieves Use Gas In Chicken Foray

Towson, Md., Feb. 22 (AP).—Gas masks for chickens may be in order if poultry thieves continue the methods used here today.

Reginald Groom reported to police he discovered two men in his hen yard early today silencing the birds with gas. Half his flock of 100 was asphyxiated.

Groom said he fired his single-barreled shotgun and heard one of the men scream as if hit. The other already was in flight.

Historic Office Opened

Winchester, Va., Feb. 22.—The George Washington headquarters, which he occupied for several years while surveying and while directing the construction of historic Fort Loudoun here, was opened to the public today as a part of the commemoration of Washington's birthday.

A dividend of 2% ($1.00 per share) was paid December 18, 1939 and charged to Income as against a dividend of 1% ($.50 per share) which was paid December 20, 1938 and charged to Profit and Loss.

FINANCE

Equipment Trust Obligations in the amount of $7,807,000 and $1,100,000 Thirty-year 4% Bonds which matured were paid, and redemptions were made through operation of sinking funds. To finance in part the cost of 2500 freight cars and 20 electric passenger locomotives, the Company issued $8,859,000 Fifteen-year 2¾% Equipment Trust Obligations. For the entire system the debt in the hands of the public was reduced $20,000,000.

NEW EQUIPMENT

Arrangements were made for the building of 20 electric locomotives, 1000 box cars, 1500 automobile box cars, 16 passenger cars, 19 dining cars, 10 steel car floats and 25 barges.

The new freight cars will replace cars retired, and their larger capacity will make possible more efficient and economical handling of a wide variety of commodities now moving in volume. The electric locomotives are especially designed for the high speed electric service on the Company's lines in its eastern seaboard territory, and will augment the present fleet of locomotives of this type.

PASSENGER AND FREIGHT SERVICE

On July 28, 1939 an all-coach overnight train known as "The Trail Blazer", was inaugurated in each direction between New York, Philadelphia and Chicago on a 17-hour schedule, combining low-cost high speed service with every modern convenience and appointment of coach train service.

The schedule of the eastbound "Spirit of St. Louis" operating between St. Louis and New York, was reduced to 20 hours, the fastest ever established between those cities, and the running time to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington was also quickened. Schedules of the westbound "General" and the eastbound "Golden Arrow", operating between Chicago and New York, were reduced to 17 hours.

In conjunction with its southern connections, the Company established 3 daily coach services between New York and Florida, namely "The Silver Meteor", "The Champion" and "The Vacationer". These trains feature reclining seats, moderately priced meals and lounge facilities.

Through arrangements with the Pullman Company, new light weight Pullman cars embodying the latest modern features for comfort and enjoyment of travel, and providing strikingly new forms of private room accommodations for overnight journeys, were placed in service on many of the Company's premier trains. Both coaches and Pullman cars on all principal trains are now completely air-conditioned.

During the last 4 months of 1939, industrial activity scored one of the sharpest upturns in history. The railroads took it all in their stride. They went smoothly and successfully from generally poor business in August to relatively good business in October—from about 650,000 carloads a week to over 860,000 a week. That in itself was an accomplishment. To do it without congestion or delay was notable. It speaks well for the railroads—for this railroad and everyone connected with it.

Constant study is given to service rendered passengers and shippers, and the accomplishments are the result of many years of development and improvement in the art of railroad transportation.

Patrons are now receiving more for their transportation dollar than ever before.

PASSENGER FARES

On June 30, 1939, most of the railroads in the eastern territory established a new low experimental basis of round-trip fares. In coaches, this new basis was below the 2½¢ per mile basis, being on a diminishing scale as the distance traveled increased, ranging from 2.25¢ for the first 100 miles, and then on a diminishing scale to 1.7¢ per mile for distances 901 miles or more. Reductions on a diminishing scale were also made in round-trip fares good in Pullman cars.

On December 5, 1939, certain of the eastern railroads petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for an extension to October 31, 1940, of its order authorizing the basic fare of 2½¢ per mile in coaches, which would have expired by limitation on January 24, 1940.

The Commission, on February 12, after granting an extension of 60 days pending hearing, denied the petition and ordered, effective March 24, 1940, a basic passenger coach fare in the East of 2¢ a mile, a 20% reduction.

TAXES

Taxes amounted to $40,095,847, an increase of $2,870,519. The increase in business meant greater employment, which was responsible for an increase in Unemployment Insurance taxes of $789,635, and Railroad Retirement taxes of $733,399.

All taxes required about 9½ cents out of each dollar of operating revenues, equal to 6.1% ($3.06 per share) upon the capital stock.

The continuing increases in taxes are particularly burdensome to the railroads. They are the only form of transportation that furnishes its own right of way and pays for its upkeep.

NATIONAL RAILROAD POLICY

It is the hope of the Management that Congress will, at the present session, enact legislation that will declare as a national transportation policy that all forms of transportation shall have equal opportunity.

STOCKHOLDERS

The Capital Stock of the Company at the close of the year was owned by 209,346 stockholders, the average holding being 62.9 shares. Information concerning the Company and its activities will be gladly furnished stockholders upon request, and constructive suggestions respecting its service are always appreciated and receive full consideration.

The Management, through the press, has kept the stockholders informed as to the earnings and finances of the Company, and the progress made in improving the service. The security holders, the public and the employees have been extremely helpful, and it is through such cooperation that your Company is able to give good service, pay good wages, meet its obligations and pay dividends.

British Reject U. S. Protest On Export Ban

London Calls Action Legal Reprisal Against Germany

London, Feb. 22.—The foreign office in a long closely-reasoned note to Washington today rejected the United States protest against the British seizure of German exports.

While regretting any inconvenience the seizure may cause United States traders, the note said that in Britain's view it is a justifiable and legal reprisal against Germany's illegal practice of mining and torpedoing Allied and neutral shipping.

Britain's rejection of the State Department's protest will scarcely cause surprise in Washington. Ever since December 8, when the United States protest was published, Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, has been expressing the British view to Secretary of State Hull and although the final British explanation was not sent until today it has been traveling back and forth between the foreign office and the British embassy in Washington for weeks in order to give Lord Lothian the opportunity to mould it into just the right form.

Reasons Listed

The British note, it is understood, contends Britain had the right of retaliation because Germany violated the declaration of Paris of 1856 by sinking Allied and neutral merchant ships regardless of the nature of the ownership or destination of their cargoes.

Other reasons set forth were because she repeatedly violated the submarine protocol under which as recently as 1936, she undertook not to sink merchant ships without providing for their crews; because she also violated the eighth Hague convention of 1907, which bound her not to lay mines without giving notice where they were laid.

Nazi Planes Sink Trawler, Flee Another

Newly-Armed Ships Rout Raiders as British Lose Small Navy Vessel

By Edwin Stout
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 22.—Germany's black raiders accounted for Britain's twenty-ninth naval loss today, sinking a naval trawler in another wave of attacks up and down the British coast, but suffered repulses in fierce return fire from newly armed small boats and lost two planes in hot sky fights.

German undersea activity was reported in dispatches from Amsterdam to have resulted in loss of the 2,621-ton Finnish steamer Brita off the Irish coast. The crew abandoned ship after an explosion.

"A submarine was sighted after the explosion," said the Brita's message.

Nine trawlers were attacked by the air raiders during the day, and one of them, the 540-ton navy boat Fifeshire, was sunk, the admiralty announced. Two officers and 19 men were believed lost, the admiralty said, and only one crewman saved.

The naval trawler Solon was bombed and raked with machine-gun fire, but the attacking planes were driven off by sharp fire.

The Royal Air Force was reported to have attacked German torpedo boats in continuing reconnaissance flights over Germany's Borkum and Helgoland bases.

One of the German bombers shot down by the British crashed in a farm field on the outskirts of Coldingham, near St. Abb's Head, southeastern Scotland, while the other plunged into the sea off the coast of Northumberland.

Reporter Sees 1,500 Russians Dead at Front

By Wade Werner
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Finnish Army Northeast of Lake Ladoga, Feb. 22.—Finnish troops fighting amid gorgeous scenery of this winter wonderland fought on today in their weird, intricate war of encirclement against the Russian invaders.

They drew their lines tighter around the remnants of the shattered Soviet eighteenth division—perahps a whole battalion is valiantly holding out—while their comrades, operating tractors and trucks, hauled away tons and tons of war booty from one of Finland's greatest victories.

Others, slowly and relentlessly, with phantom ski troops and artillery strategy prepared the way for new Finnish pushes elsewhere on this complicated front.

I motored 50 miles this afternoon and walked several more to reach the front where the last resistance of the famous eighteenth division is being wiped out.

A few miles behind the front I encountered a long cavalcade of captured Russian tanks and trucks being hauled to the rear by the Finns for repair and later use against the enemy.

More tanks were scattered here and there in ditches and fields.

Then we came upon whole parks of tanks and tractors, automobiles and artillery—and among them the frozen dead.

We picked our way through a confusion of vehicles and what seemed to be thousands of grotesque wax-like figures lying alone or in heaps.

Actually there were only about 1,500 dead in this particular scene of carnage—only a part of the eighteenth division's fallen, who were scattered in various positions over an area of many miles.

As night fell and moonlight illuminated the scene, the impression of utter destruction, complete disaster and death was overwhelming.

The crash of artillery suddenly broke the silence.

"There are the Russian lines," said the captain accompanying us. He pointed to a hillside half a mile away.

A rocket shot skyward.

There were intermittent bursts of machine gun fire; then the roar of a plane flying over us.

We stood motionless until it had passed over.

"Probably it was a Russian plane trying to drop something to those fellows over there and that is why they signaled him just now with a rocket," said the captain.

We walked back toward our cars as the Finnish artillery opened up. The shells overhead made noises like a train rushing through a tunnel.

The survivors of the Eighteenth Division were getting an uncomfortable evening.

Army Budget May Escape Economy Knife

Virtually Impossible To Cut Appropriation, Says Rep. Snyder

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Congressional economy forces, which already have slashed President Roosevelt's budget estimates by approximately a quarter billion dollars, will have little success with the $853,356,734 asked for the Army next year, Chairman Snyder of the House Military Appropriations subcommittee predicted yesterday.

Consideration of the record-breaking Army outlay begins this morning, when ranking War Department officials will appear before the subcommittee to urge approval of the estimates.

Snyder said that while his group will prune the Army budget wherever possible, no large reductions such as the House made in the naval estimates will be made. The House Appropriations Committee cut the Navy $111,699,699 and the House cut off an additional $1,000,000.

"The Army situation is quite different from that of the Navy," Chairman Snyder declared. "Naval expansion has been under way for eight years and the sea forces are in relatively good shape, whereas the Army, which has been starved for years, is just starting its program.

"Moreover, it is possible to curtail naval appropriations by holding up a battleship, without affecting the rest of the service, while a material reduction of Army funds would mean halting the whole preparedness plan."

Meanwhile, the Army subcommittee gave approval to $19,000,000 of the military funds for special protective work on the Panama Canal and prepared to vote Monday on starting a spare set of canal locks which will cost $277,000,000 over a period of years.

The projects are carried in the War Department civil functions appropriation bill which is expected to be brought before the House next week.

Television Relay, Vital Problem, Declared Solved

Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 22 (AP).—Successful television relay, with which engineers have struggled for years, was declared an actuality tonight by Dr. W. R. G. Baker, General Electric Co.'s television and radio manager.

This problem generally is blamed with delaying widespread inauguration of television. Theoretically it limited television to the visual horizon.

Tribute Is Paid To Finnish Youth

A tribute to Finland's youth for "militant defense of democracy" was presented yesterday to Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope by Aleph Zadik Aleph, youth organization of the B'nai B'rith. The message expressed "deepest sympathy to the hard-pressed youth of Finland."

Procope said the message will be forwarded to Finland today. Julius Bisno, executive director of Aleph Zadik Aleph, and Maurice Bisgyer, council member, presented the message.

Dahl, 7 Other Americans Given Freedom by Franco

Aviator Who Fought Nationalists Slated to Sail for U. S. Today; Wife Saved Him From Execution

By the Associated Press

Madrid, Feb. 22.—Harold Dahl, the American aviator whose blonde actress wife helped save him from a firing squad by sending her picture to Gen. Franco, finally was a free man tonight.

Seven other Americans who fought for the Spanish Republican army also were freed.

(Edith Rogers Dahl, in the Philadelphia Night Club, where, with the billing "She Stopped the Firing Squad," she is doing a Spanish dance specialty, refused to celebrate until she got official word from the United States State Department.)

Dahl and his companions were the last of 106 American prisoners released since the war ended last March. Dahl was a prisoner nearly three years.

Tonight Dahl, Clarence Alvie Blair, of Red Granite, Wis., and Cohn Haber, of New York, were at Seville, waiting to sail on the American export liner Exiria for the United States tomorrow.

Others released—after intervention of the State Department in Washington—are Lawrence Fant Doran, listed as a native of Los Angeles; Anthony Peter Kehrlicker, a native of Polk County, Iowa; Rudolph Opara, of Cleveland; Alf Abdreasen, naturalized American from Norway, and Conrad Stojewa, of California.

The romance came in with Mrs. Dahl's touching letter to Gen. Franco, begging him to spare her aviator-mate. Mrs. Dahl was in Paris then.

R. A. McPherson, Express Agent, Dies Here at 62

Robert A. McPherson, 62, of 405 Upshur street northwest, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital. Funeral services will be tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the W. W. Deal funeral home, and burial will be with Masonic rites in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. McPherson was a native of this city. Entering the employment of the Adams Express Co. in 1899 as waybill clerk, he rose to be commercial agent and stayed with the company when it merged with others to form the Railway Express Agency. He married Miss Martha Ellen Price in 1901.

He was a member of Hiram Lodge of Masons. Besides his wife he leaves two sons, Robert A. McPherson, jr., of this city, and Ralph E. McPherson, of St. Louis.

Rumania Forbids Exporting Of Materials Vital in War

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Feb. 22.—Rumania, showing mounting concern over the possibility of war in the spring, today increased her armed forces and published a sweeping decree banning the export of a long list of raw materials and manufactured goods "necessary for the national defense."

Many of the 200,000 reserves who originally were called for March 1 were ordered to start reporting immediately. The armed forces already number 1,400,000 men and, with the latest call, a virtual state of mobilization will be in force by March 1.

Oil and wheat—Rumania's chief exports—were left out of today's decree, although it was confirmed authoritatively that delivery of aviation gasoline and lubricants abroad previously had been banned.

It was learned that large internal purchases of commodities in which Rumania is deficient—mainly by Germany—and the Allies' delay in furnishing new stocks led to issuance of the decree.

Forbidden were exports of iron, steel, lead, aluminum, copper, fur, leather, charcoal, wool, cotton, rayon industrial chemicals and all manufactures in which these materials are used.

The government, meanwhile, was reported hoping to stave off a showdown in the increasingly tense Allied-German struggle for a major portion of its oil exports by offering Germany the government's entire legal share of the product of allied and neutral-owned corporations at Ploesti.

With the arrival Monday of Dr. Karl Clodius, German economics expert, the Nazis were expected to make sharp demands that Rumania fulfill her promise to sell Germany 1,680,000 tons of petroleum in 1940.

Government circles saw little chance of furnishing Germany's quota.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended February 17 as approximately 8,700,000 net tons.

There Are Two Ways to Get at Constipation

Yes, and only two ways—before and after it happens! Instead of enduring those dull, tired, headachy days and then having to take an emergency cathartic—why not KEEP regular with Kellogg's All-Bran? You can, if your constipation is the kind millions have—due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. For All-Bran goes right to the cause of this trouble by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this toasted, nutritious cereal regularly—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if your life isn't a whole lot brighter! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

The Washington Post This Sunday Brings You The Picture Story of the Junior High Schools

The Sunday Post will present the second in the series of picture stories of the Washington schools. This time it's the junior highs—the newest thing in education.

In this 8-page picture section you'll see the junior high school students in action. You'll find out—through pictures—what they learn and how they're taught. You'll find out what the junior high is supposed to accomplish—why these schools exist. And there's a page on Wahington's school teachers.

It's an entertaining section, too! You'll find these pictures of Washington children full of life, of humor, of real human interest.

Washington was enthusiastic about last Sunday's section, on the elementary schools. You'll find this one equally good—and equally interesting to parents of the elementary school children, for it shows you what lies ahead for them in junior high.

Here are some of the topics illustrated in this second section:

Teaching the Teachers to Teach.
The Junior High Is Different.
Latin Is Fun.
English Is Required But Grammar Isn't.
Learning to Do Things.

There are many other interesting subjects touched on—science, art, music, civics, self-government. But we can't tell you all about it here. Get the Sunday Post and see for yourself!

Enthusiastic Comments from Washington Parents Show How Interesting the First School Section Was—This Second One Will Be Equally Good!

Here are just a few of the many comments received by The Washington Post about last Sunday's "Our Town in Pictures" section on the elementary schools:

"I was amazed at the subjects children learn nowadays and the way they are taught." —Mrs. Elfreda Tice, 2138 California St., N.W.

"It's so good that I've saved it so I can study it more carefully." —Mrs. F. W. McNamee, 201 Willow Ave., Takoma Park.

"I think it is one of the finest displays I ever saw in a newspaper." —John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

"A very valuable enterprise." —Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Superintendent of Schools.

"I am already looking forward to the picture section about the high schools." —Mrs. J. W. McDaniel, 436 Ingraham St., N.W.

You will be just as pleased, just as enthusiastic, when you have seen the section showing the junior high schools—in Sunday's Post.

Japan Curtails Civil Bombings To Please U.S.

America Cool To Diplomatic Wooing in Tokyo

By Hugh Byas.
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Feb. 22.—The refusal of Secretary of State Cordell Hull to enthuse over the settlement of 21 cases out of the 232 cases of insults, injuries and interferences suffered by American citizens as a result of the war in China has not greatly surprised the Tokyo foreign office, because the Japanese believe that the State Department understands the real meaning of Japan's action.

The fact that these cases are being settled, however, signifies that the Japanese government has reverted to the American plan for an adjustment of existing relations by making an attempt to settle outstanding claims.

Foreign Minister Arita has always clearly understood that the United States makes two major demands of Japan—one material, and the other humanitarian. That is, the settlement of the 232 cases of injuries and the cessation of bombing of civilians.

This correspondent has been informed that the bombing operations have been curtailed considerably. Categorical declarations which would tie the hands of the fighting forces cannot be expected, but the news from China suggests that Japan has heeded Ambassador Grew's emphatic representations.

Although the opening of the Yangtze River has fallen into the background at present, it is still regarded as in integral part of Japanese policy. As a bargaining point, it completely missed fire, and the cabinet's misjudgment was one of the reasons why the army withdrew its support from former Premier Abe. The decision to reopen the river remains in principle unchanged, but it can no longer be regarded as an ace card in the Japanese government's dealings with the United States.

Legion Gives Blood Bank $1,251

ciation; Lieut. Horace Lineburg, and Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter.

National officers of the legion at the ball included Watson B. Miller, director of national rehabilitation; Col. John Thomas Taylor, national director of legislation; Paul Griffith, business manager and national director of employment, and Joseph J. Malloy, national executive committeeman.

The check presented to The Post represented returns from parties held by 17 Legion posts and 9 Auxiliary units. The sum will be increased by at least 15 parties still to be held, Commander W. A. Corley, chairman of the Legion blood bank committee, declared.

Additional funds were collected last night at a "small change contribution booth" operated in conjunction with the ball.

Sponsors of the drive for blood bank funds—The Post, Station WJSV and the Washington Section of the American Contract Bridge League—learned meanwhile of the collection of an additional $284 through benefit parties given by cooperating organizations.

Mary Ann Kiatta, 9-year-old pupil at the John Eaton School, informed The Post that she has invited 50 of her friends and classmates to a benefit party at her home, 3039 Macomb street northwest, at 2:30 p. m. today.

Mrs. Winslow B. Van Devanter, co-chairman of the ladies committee of the Post-WJSV blood bank campaign, reported collections, totaling $149, including additional contributions from the Chevy Chase Club. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post of the Legion raised $100, Ernest F. Dwyer announced.

The Judge Lynn Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution raised $25 at a party held at the home of Mrs. J. Wesley Buchanan, Josephine M. Hoffner, state treasurer, reported. The Little Club reported a contribution of $10.

Of the total raised by the legion, $323.45 was collected through efforts of auxiliary units. One of these, the Kenneth H. Nash Auxiliary Unit No 8, reported a $10 contribution through its president, Mrs. Ossie Ritter.

In a letter to the Editor of The Post, Mary Ann explained her interest in the campaign:

"I am in the four-B grade," she wrote, "and every morning I read your paper. We have to cut out interesting news and take it to class, and that is the reason why I am having the party because I have seen so much about the blood bank in your paper. Of course, the amount will not be large, but if boys and girls realized what a great thing the blood bank is and parties were given for this cause all the small amounts would turn into a large amount.

"I am sending the money to The Post and you may turn it over to the hospital. My friends and myself hope it will do some good."

Mary Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Kiatta.

Starting at King and Fairfax streets, it swung for ten blocks downtown to West street, led by the Thirty-fourth Infantry Band, and behind it the band of the Fifth Engineers and the Fort Myer Third Cavalry Band on prancing brown horses. The crowd packed the sidewalks, and some looked down from windows and children climbed trees and to the rooftops as on circus day.

In Washington, speeches resounded in a number of halls, many places of public business closed; patriotic organizations placed wreaths on the Monument and last night hotel floors echoed with dancing.

The twilight fell on a bank of wreaths beside the quiet brick tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon.

V. F. W. Head Speaks

In Alexandria, Otis N. Brown, of Greensboro, N. C., commander in chief, Veterans of Foreign Wars, here to participate in the ceremonies at Alexandria, pleaded in behalf of his organization:

"Give your personal and active protection to the basic principles of Americanism—to certain human liberties that both of us must always possess if life is to be worth living. Shun those who preach hatred and persecution within our borders for the purpose of promoting internal feuds.

"Discourage those who would put the torch of revolution to the Constitution of the United States by denying the rights of free speech, a free press or religious freedom to any citizen or group of citizens. Be prepared at all times to reject the propaganda that is invented only for the purpose of dividing our strength as a united people," he said, addressing the V. F. W. national defense banquet in the George Mason Hotel at 7 p. m.

Alexandria people on the sidelines said they had not seen such a parade in many a day. V. F. W. officials said 7,000 persons marched. They all were waiting for it at 2 p. m., the scheduled hour of march, and by 2:40 p. m. it was there, filling the cleared street with a wash of flags and blare of music.

In front of the grandstand, firemen and police had continuously to push back little boys who rushed into the streets as the bands went by. For 23 minutes the excitement and noise ran high.

For the street was full of color. Trucks with dark green bodies rolled, with machine guns atop pointed at the sky; field artillery came along, rattling; the Alexandria National Guardsmen, in their gray jackets of cadet cut; transport trucks, the canvas tops about a story tall; the heavy artillery, drawn by heavy motors, and the band of the Fifth Marine Reserves, playing the Marine hymn.

The John Marshall High School Cadet Band, of Richmond, gray-uniformed, went along; the George Washington High School cadets and girl cadets, of Alexandria, went by; then two little boys, dressed and painted as Indians, on ponies; then veterans, in uniform and with middle-aged plumpness, went by, to be followed by Boy Scouts, volunteer firemen, volunteer stretcher bearers of volunteer firemen's outfits, ambulances, fire engines, all overtoned by sirens that moaned and squealed against the distantly sounding bands.

In the reviewing stand was Lieut. Col. W. C. Crane, commander, First Battalion, Sixteenth Field Artillery, Fort Myer, and the grand marshal of the parade, with V. F. W. Commander Brown and Mrs. Ida S. Cohen, of Roxbury, Mass., national president of the V. F. W. Ladies' Auxiliary.

Crowds flowed all day to Mount Vernon, where Washington, as proprietor, once made notation for posterity: "I have no objections to any sober or orderly persons gratifying their curiosity in viewing the buildings, gardens, etc. . . ." Among those on the grounds were Washington Boy Scouts; 50 delegates from the Washington Masonic Lodge of New York City; hundreds of former service men and members of patriotic societies—who left a total of 30 wreaths. The attendance was officially estimated at "several thousand persons."

Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, said last night that the American people, like Washington, must sacrifice their selfish interests and battle for the common welfare.

Had Much at Stake

Speaking to the first donor banquet of the Washington Ladies Auxiliary of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States, Voorhis pointed out that the First President cast his lot with "a struggling group of people, although he stood to lose a high social position, a fortunate financial position, a position of prestige under the British flag."

Voorhis, a member of the Dies Committee, stated that he is convinced that at least 96 per cent of the American people give their first loyalty to the United States. He urged tolerance for all points of view on economic questions, "as long as 'a person's first loyalty is to this republic."

Sixty members of the Cy Pres Sorority of National University heard Senator T. F. Green, of Rhode Island, discuss the qualifications of the present-day lawyer. Members of the group met at the Roger Smith Hotel for their annual Washington Birthday dinner.

Faith in Past Scouted

Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, said last night that Americans who would be worthy of Washington must "break with the past" and substitute "mutual cooperation" for "individualistic competition."

Speaking over a Mutual Broadcasting Company network, under the auspices of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States, Hill insisted tthat "we can no longer trust to the evolution of future decades to meet new problems."

"Washington," he said, "dared break with the past and became the rebel of his day. Let us know that if we would be worthy of him there are times when we must break with the past. Today's problems cannot be solved with yesterday's solutions.

Floods Damage Channel Banks On Potomac Basin

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., Feb. 22.—Channels of streams in the Potomac basin have been steadily filling as a result of heavy floods in the past several years, A. L. Richey, who is in charge of the Department of Agricultural flood control survey, which has headquarters here, said today.

As a result, the streams are becoming shallower and flood their banks more easily with resultant damage to bottom lands.

The Potomac and tributaries have been under the surveillance of a 30-man survey crew since last November, the work extending as far south as Staunton, east to Washington, west beyond Cumberland, Md., and Petersburg, W. Va., and north to Chambersburg, Pa.

Act on Vote Now, Dirksen Urges

offer a suffrage amendment to his own reorganization bill when the subcommittee is ready to make its report.

Local civic organizations are prepared to renew their demands for the vote when hearings being on reorganization, probably the latter part of next week.

As the Kennedy sub-committee is now constituted, there is little likelihood that a suffrage amendment would be reported favorably to the full committee. Four of the five members are either hostile to the proposal or unenthusiastic.

Besides Kennedy and Dirksen they are Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Dirksen explained that his proposal would obviate any criticism of the sub-committee for "bottling up" the suffrage amendment should it be rejected. He said he thought it should be given a fair chance before the full committee, where there are several outspoken supporters of self-government for the District.

The ranking minority member also has suggested to Chairman Kennedy that the subcommittee ask all interested organizations to consolidate their testimony on reorganization when hearings begin.

Simpler Procedure Suggested

Instead of hearing a long list of spokesmen for community citizens' associations, he said, the subcommittee would make better progress if it heard one representative of the organized citizenry, another spokesman for trade organizations, and a representative of labor.

Dirksen said by the procedure each witness could be given ample time to develop his ideas on reorganization and the subcommittee would have a more intelligent record to present to the full committee and to the House.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, yesterday introduced the Seal reorganization bill in the Senate but said he will give the House committee time to consider the question before putting it before the Senate committee.

Should the House fail to act within a reasonable time, however, Senator King has indicated he may ask the Senate committee to conduct hearings. He has long advocated an extension of the powers of the Commissioners although he is opposed to any revolutionary change in the administrative set-up.

Washington's Address Quoted In Warnings on Third Term

ran told reporters he thought the President "too good a politician to stake everything on the turn of a card." He said the President, "as a great leader," owes it to himself, his party and the people who put him in office "to say what he intends to do." McCarran said his views were "not personal."

Gives Party Credit

"The Democratic Party itself was the power by which the President achieved his present great position," said McCarran. "It should be given an opportunity to trim its sails and chart its own course in the campaign."

The Nevadan said he agreed with Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, that the nomination would be "worthless" to any other Democrat unless the President spoke out. He said his silence was causing "internal disruption" in the party. Business and labor are equally anxious to know his plans, he added.

It was Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, who read Washington's farewell and the First President's declaration that it was "proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed, to decline being considered among the number of those, out of whom a choice is to be made."

Senator Gillette, in stressing his "strenuous opposition" to a third term, said he would feel the same way "if the candidate were my own father."

"It not only does violence to tradition, but carries inherent danger," said Gillette. "If a third term, why not a fourth? Why not make it a lifetime job."

Inroads in New England

Said Senator Bailey: "I am indifferent on the point of time of the President's decision. I have never thought he would be a candidate. I think most of the pressure is due to interested candidates in both parties."

As shrewd jockeying continued between Vice President Garner and third-term organizations in Midwestern primary battle grounds, reports continued to reach Washington of heavy Roosevelt inroads in New England Democratic State organizations, generally regarded as Farley territory.

New Hampshire's organization primary slate, formerly considered the Postmaster General's for the taking, is now believed committed first to Roosevelt if the President runs. Published reports that President Roosevelt is directing selection of National Convention delegates in New England pledged to a third term were relayed from Providence, R. I., by Associated Press. Boston dispatches said William R. Burke, jr., chairman of the Massachusetts State Democratic committee, commented it was "foolish even to deny such a statement." The Massachusetts delegate slate would be pledged to Farley provided the President does not run.

A Republican Approves

Representative Bruce Barton's advocacy of the reciprocal trade agreements program is outstanding for two reasons. In the first place, Mr. Barton has refused to treat the question of continuing the program as a partisan issue. He has the distinction of being the only Republican in the House who has as yet openly indorsed it. In the second place, he has based his advocacy on the long-time benefits of cultivating two-way trade instead of concerning himself about the immediate effects of specific tariff changes upon our import trade.

On both counts Mr. Barton deserves to be congratulated for putting the interest of the Nation as a whole above lesser political and economic considerations. All economists stress the inevitability of admitting imports in order to provide foreigners with the means of buying our goods. But Mr. Barton puts his emphasis not so much upon the necessity of our taking goods as upon the desirability of doing so. "It is a matter of common sense," he says, "that we should take useful goods—rather than, to us, useless gold—in exchange for our exports."

That argument is not only a more realistic but also a more compelling reason for lowering barriers to imports than the one usually assigned. Today many nations are able to buy from us considerable amounts of goods without selling an equivalent amount of goods to cover payments. That is because the export excess in our favor is covered by imports of gold. We take this gold at an artificially high, fixed price in unlimited quantities. And the more we take, the less we obtain of useful goods in exchange for our own valuable exports.

In discussions of our gold policy, these facts have frequently been brought out, but there has been little enlightening discussion of their bearing upon the future of the trade agreements program. Mr. Barton has performed a public service, therefore, in directing attention to the importance of stimulating a useful import trade as an alternative to acceptance of overvalued gold that adds to our already excessive stocks of the metal.

Turkey The Key

Because of Rumania's dangerously exposed position, it can be assumed that no move is made by the Bucharest government without a careful survey of its possible consequences. One serious misstep would be enough to plunge the kingdom into war.

It is thus of considerable significance that, following Allied pressure, Rumania has placed a ban on the export to the Reich of high-test aviation gasoline. Moreover, this action comes on the heels of Rumania's failure to supply Germany during January of this year with more than a fifth of the 130,000 tons of oil previously agreed upon.

Oil happens to be indispensable to a nation at war and Germany is not in a position to supply herself out of domestic production with more than a small fraction of her needs. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that the Berlin government will strenuously object to the Rumanian action and will do everything in its power to persuade or compel King Carol to increase oil shipments to the Reich and to remove the ban on aviation gasoline exports.

It must also be assumed, however, that the Bucharest authorities took fully into account the likelihood of German wrath and concluded that Rumania is strong enough to risk the inevitable blast from Berlin. But since Rumania herself is far from being a military match for Germany and even less so for Germany and Russia combined, the stiffening of the Rumanian position suggests a growing confidence at Bucharest that Hitler's inevitable bark will be worse than his bite.

It is more than coincidence, in this connection, that Rumania's new-found boldness occurs at a time when the Allies are openly broadcasting the concentration of a large Franco-British force in the Near East, and at a time when the Turkish press is proclaiming to the world that Turkey is prepared to resist aggression anywhere in the Balkans.

In other words, an attack on Rumania must anticipate not merely Rumanian resistance but probably the combined resistance of Rumania, Turkey and the Allies. Under the circumstances, the subjection of Rumania might be no walk-over and might even open the way for an ultimate attack on Germany from the rear.

It has long been recognized that the key to the Balkan puzzle is Turkey. With Turkey taking a strong pro-Ally stand the other Balkan states, notably Rumania, feel less helpless in the face of German pressures.

They Fear The Truth

During the 12 weeks of the Russo-Finnish war the Russian people have been kept in the most complete ignorance of both the conduct and the development of the struggle.

For the first two months of hostilities, while the greatly outnumbered Finns were repeatedly hurling back the invaders, the people of the Soviet Union were barely permitted to know that a war was in progress. They were merely told that on November 30 the Red troops entered Finland as a result of "White Guard provocations" and were greeted with open arms by the Finnish people. That myth the Kremlin has sedulously sought to preserve.

The situation has changed since the tide of battle in Finland began to turn. The former news vacuum is now filled with glowing reports of amazing Russian victories against a foe whose courage is for the first time implicitly recognized. But the Russian people are still vouchsafed only an incredibly distorted picture of what is going on.

If this were not otherwise known it would be made clear by examination of the Kremlin's New York mouthpiece, The Daily Worker, which, like its Moscow counterparts, prints only what the Bolshevik regime wants it to print. In yesterday's issue the American Communist sheet carries an eight-column streamer head announcing the capture by the Red army of 176 forts in three days. But what The Daily Worker does not print regarding the fighting in Finland is far more revealing than what it does.

Thus, not a word was said yesterday of the bombing, deliberate or otherwise, of the Swedish village of Pajala by a squadron of Red planes. Nor is there any reference to the pressure which Germany, apparently acting on Russia's behalf, has been putting on Sweden to avoid giving open military assistance to the Finns. And, of course, there is not a line about the terrific punishment visited by the Red air force on dozens of Finnish villages and towns in one of the most ruthless bombardments of civilians ever perpetrated.

To mention such facts might upset the Stalinist claim that, in the words of The Daily Worker, "the heroic legions of the Red army are waging a struggle to liberate the Finnish people." It might lead the Russian serfs to wonder what kind of a policy it is which requires this merciless attack on populations marked for "liberation." And such questioning the Soviet regime is, of course, determined to prevent.

In Finland the Soviet government fights with all the high-powered instruments of destruction and conscript man power which it possesses in such abundance. At home its principal weapon is ruthlessly enforced ignorance. Over here the palpable suppressions of The Daily Worker in its treatment of Finnish war news can be laughed off. Only the handful of die-hards who continue to follow the party line are taken in. But in Russia that sort of reporting is all the news they get. For there is nothing a totalitarian government fears more than a free press and the truth which a free press, for all its deficiencies, at least approximates.

Reductio Ad Absurdum

F street shoppers are currently receiving a very instructive object lesson in the effects of jurisdictional labor conflicts upon hapless employers.

One of the large women's wear shops which is building an extension to its quarters displays a conspicuous placard informing all passersby that work on the new structure is being performed entirely by union labor affiliated with the A. F. of L. The reason for this announcement is explained by the presence of a C. I. O. picket before the store, in protest against employment of A. F. of L. union members.

The unfortunate employer who is the victim of this inter-union battle is, of course, helpless to cofrect the situation. All he can do is to protest publicly against the unfair treatment which he is receiving from organized labor.

The irritation and costly delays caused by jurisdictional conflicts among building trades unions have been a large factor in increasing building costs and retarding construction activity. Realizing that fact, the Buildings Trade Department of the A. F. of L. has been trying recently to improve the machinery for handling conflicts between building trades unions. Indeed, the Building Trades Department was organized over 30 years ago mainly for the purpose of dealing with jurisdictional disputes. A problem of extreme difficulty even when the labor movement was under a united leadership has become practically insoluble with the appearance of rival union factions unwilling to compromise differences.

The only way to put an end to the jurisdictional rivalry that has resulted from a split in the ranks of organized labor is for the leaders to declare a truce to suicidal methods of warfare. The F street shop, realizing that necessity, makes a very timely public appeal to John L. Lewis and William Green to settle their quarrel. Mr. Lewis is reminded that the picketed employer has provided jobs at union wages, with union hours of work. He is asked, quite pertinently, if the picketing of a firm under such conditions is a way to encourage private employers to furnish jobs. Mr. Green, on the other hand, is reminded that an employer may be goaded into stopping work if he is pushed too far. In other words, continuance of the quarrel with Mr. Lewis constitutes a threat to the jobs given to Mr. Green's followers.

These are timely and by no means far-fetched reminders that the leaders of organized labor are playing a dangerous game when they engage in factional disputes at the expense of employers. When union pickets union, and the employer is put on the defensive through no fault of his own, the cause of organized labor is sure to suffer. For many employers, harassed and injured by disputes to which they are not parties, will be increasingly disposed to say "a plague on both your houses" and to employ nonunion labor whenever possible.

Envoy From Australia

The arrival in Washington of Richard Gardiner Casey, the first Minister of the Australian Commonwealth to the United States, offsets the ravages which war has made and threatens to the Diplomatic Corps. But it is not for this arithmetical reason that Mr. Casey's advent is welcome.

Commercial relations between Australia and the United States are steadily growing closer and promise to be further augmented as a result of the European war. The political uncertainty in the Far East has also increased the desirability of continuous contact between our Government and that of the great British Dominion in the Pacific. The time is ripe for the establishment of formal diplomatic representation between the two nations.

As a matter of fact the arrival of Mr. Casey merely regularizes a situation which was already established. For some time Mr. Keith Officer, filling the post of Australian Counselor of Embassy at the British Embassy, has in effect been serving as the Australian envoy to the United States. And this has been reciprocated by the stature of our diplomatic officers who have in late years held the post of Consul General in Australia.

Mr. Casey, who has had a very distinguished career in his own country, holding the post of treasurer and more lately that of minister of supplies, will be welcomed in Washington alike for his attractive personality and because of the esteem in which Americans hold his young and vigorous country. It may be hoped that his arrival will hasten Congressional appropriation for the new position of American Minister at Canberra. Mr. Clarence Gauss, formerly our Consul General at Shanghai, has been named to this office, but cannot proceed to his duties until Congress authorizes the necessary outlays.

The interchange of ministers between Australia and the United States will probably delay for some time the proposed elevation of our legation at Ottawa to embassy rank, a suggestion which has been persuasively urged by Representative Stearns, of New Hampshire, among others.

It does not appear that there would be any serious British objection to an exchange of ambassadors, instead of ministers, between the United States and Canada. But to change the status immediately after the arrival of a minister from Australia would clearly be invidious.

The old distinction between ambassadors and ministers rested on the right of the former to have access at any time to the sovereign to whom they were accredited. It has now ceased to have practical meaning. Presumably it will be only a matter of time before all the responsible diplomatic envoys in every capital have a common title.

The issue is one which might well be resolved at the next peace conference, if any, since it was at the Congress of Vienna, closing the Napoleonic Wars, that the arbitrary distinction between ambassadors and ministers was first laid down.

Some Place Names

From the Pleasures of Publishing, Columbia University Press

At last we have found out how Featherbed Lane here in New York's Bronx got its name. Our informant is Miss Abigail F. Halsey, author of the recently published "In Old Southampton." She tells us that Featherbed Lane "owes its name to the fact that when Washington brought the Continental guns from Boston to New York in 1776, the women of that street placed their feather beds in the street to deaden the noise of the horses and the gun carriages."

We also have some other contributions to our symposium on unusual street names. W. B. Beatty, who signs himself "Your Pacific Coast Correspondent," saw our note on the street in Wilkes-Barre whose name was changed because of its ill repute. He says that a street in San Francisco which was once used by the same profession was called Maiden Lane. One would think that Redlands, Calif., was nothing but a newspaper town, for Fulmer Mood, librarian at the University of Redlands, says there are three streets next to each other named Post, Herald and Tribune.

"Youth" Problem Is Old

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the past few weeks the youth of our country have been given a lot of publicity and mostly it has been adverse publicity.

It is a mistake to think of youth in the mass. We should ever think of boys and girls as a real father and mother think of their sons and daughters. Let me illustrate: Two years ago it was my rare privilege to be named leader of a group of 14 boys allied with a local settlement. One can quickly become acquainted with 14 boys and learn their faces, nicknames, real names and problems because you are dealing with individuals.

The boys ranged in age from 16 to 22 and none of them had jobs and some of them needed friendly counsel. However, what they lacked in opportunity they made up in spirit. The group grew to a membership of 55 in one year and secured jobs. Four of them married and established homes of their own. In addition, they became actively interested in the smaller boys around them and sponsored a junior group with a present membership of 40 boys.

The picture of 2 men plus 14 boys plus an increase of 41 boys plus a "branch growth" of 40 more boys adding to a total of 97 boys is the picture I wish to make plain.

This group originated right here in Washington less than 2 miles from the Capitol. We are prone to think and discuss youth in terms of millions scattered over the 48 States and District of Columbia.

As one who has been actively associated with youth as a volunteer worker since 1904 I think our youth of today is finer raw material than the youth of any decade of our history. What we "oldsters" do with that raw material is up to us. It would be good if we each bought a mirror and used it regularly and thoughtfully as we look for solutions of the youth problem. Incidentally, we have had the "youth problem" with us since Cain and Abel and may we always have it is my humble prayer. VETERAN.

Fear For Neutrality

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Official fear of lending Finland financial aid, which may have such disastrous consequences for the gallant Finnish people and the Scandinavian democracies, must appear extraordinary to foreign observers. For it seems less fear of Russia, who cannot get at us, than lack of confidence in ourselves.

There is much talk of the "precedent" that would be created by a loan to Finland, although we have already made her one such loan and have made another to China under parallel circumstances. But, surely, nothing can compel us to follow such a "precedent" if we do not wish to. We have been an independent Nation for 150 years, and should by now be able to determine our own course. If we do help the Finns, and then later shrink from helping some small nation attacked by Germany, we can always find an alibi in the "spirit of the neutrality act" if nowhere else.

Where fear for our neutrality seems more jutifiable is in relation to the consequences of refusal to help the Finns. For if their defense fails through lack of weapons, they will suffer the fate of the Poles and we shall feel partly responsible. And if their fall is followed by a totalitarian attack upon Scandinavia, we shall again feel partly responsible and again face this question of what we are going to do.

If we were a Nation of Caspar Milquetoasts, such a feeling of responsibility for disaster would not be dangerous. But our character is so different from that of Mr. Milquetoast that such a feeling is bound to generate a reaction in the opposite direction, toward some effective intervention in the European struggle. And that will be very dangerous to our neutrality.

The Greatest Danger

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the beginning of the Republic statesmen have recognized that the greatest danger to American democracy resides in the contradiction between the concentration of wealth and economic power and political equality.

This antithesis worried the Founding Fathers, who sought to resolve it by the system of checks and balances in the Federal Constitution: the indirect election of President and Senators and the provision for an independent judiciary.

James Madison proposed to avoid the potential conflicts implicit in the contradiction by restricting the suffrage to freeholders, merchants and capitalists. John Adams feared that intrigue and bribery of the poor by the opulent would be the outcome. Daniel Webster anticipated the use of military force. And John Taylor urged his contemporaries to sweep away property rights founded on paper, corporation bank notes, protective tariffs and factitious claims to wealth—"the aristocracy of paper and patronage," and preserve property founded on nature, industry, science and arts.

Evidence that this basic problem is still with us is seen in the current TNEC investigation of the concentration of economic power, in Berle and Means' oft-quoted figures on the 200 corporations that control over 50 per cent of the Nation's industrial assets, and in the recent NRC study of consumer incomes showing increasing inequality in the distribution of the national income. The net result of this maldistribution is oversaving and idle money at the top, and deficient buying power and idle men at the bottom of the economic pyramid.

Free government, as President Roosevelt has said, is incompatible with a rapid accumulation of property in a few hands. How can we remedy the antithesis between the concentration of wealth and the diffusion of political power? I suggest that we can follow Thomas Jefferson, who based his hopes for popular government on a wide distribution of property, and Madison, who thought that the tendency to concentration might be diminished by legislation regulating the descent, distribution and equalization of property.

We can gradually correct the inequality and insecurity of the present system by drastic limitations on the right of inheritance, by reducing the claims of the rentier class to unearned incomes by forcing down the rate of interest on all forms of loan capital through Government control over the banking system, by the taxation of land values and by giving every worker a property right in a job in an industry of his own choosing.

These are the basic principles of an American program recently submitted by Henry B. Parkes in his provocative book: "Marxism: An Autopsy." Such a program, he believes, is more likely than is that of the Marxists to be politically effective, is based on a sounder economics and would not destroy individual freedom or create a bureaucratic dictatorship. I think it is entitled to serious consideration.

Fighting At Home

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the rays of hope in the much-beclouded American scene is the overwhelming refusal of the American people to become the victims of war hysteria. Despite concerted efforts of the free press and other powerful organs that mold public opinion, the vast majority of the people are cold to the various schemes to drag them and their sons into the European war.

The campaign that is being led by Herbert Hoover for "relief" for the Finnish war machine has won the support chiefly of the same handful of economic royalists whose lust for markets was the cause of both the first World War and the present one. Particularly interesting is the fact that Finnish-Americans in this war drive for "aid to Finland" are conspicuous by their absence. They know the real issues in this fight and remember how the present "Finnish" ruling clique of White Guard Russians and Swedes bathed in blood their every attempt to free their country some 20 years ago.

In the slogan "The Yanks Are Not Coming," initiated by the Maritime Union, America is finding a practical way of expressing its overwhelming desire and determination to do its fighting at home, where unemployment, disease, violations of civil rights and Wall Street are problems enough to cope with.

A Friend In Need

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am disappointed. For some time I have been proud of your editorial pages. I have pointed with pride to the erudite articles on national affairs and I have viewed with alarm the evils pointed out by Pegler, Thompson, et al. But with it all the literary quality has been high.

But last Saturday you let me down. The editorial was on spinach. For years I have been holding forth against that vegetable and your article was just up my alley. But there ain't such a thing as "oxilate radial." You people must have taken an arts course and shuddered when chemistry was mentioned. What you meant was oxalate radical—oxalic acid, the old friend of the straw hat cleaner.

But do not be downcast, keep up the good work and if you are in doubt, in the future, as to proper scientific terminology just call on the phone and we, over here at Georgetown University, will be glad to help maintain the purity of your composition.

Blood And Tears

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Capper told the meeting of Republicans last night that they must find another Lincoln to oppose that "dangerous F. D. R."

Capper knows full well that you can get away with any kind of tosh if you bring in the name of the man who conquered the South, and made a mark which will remain for 200 years.

It has been only 75 years since our Government was pinned together with bayonets. Maybe that had something to do with our present collapse. But you can't teach people who don't want to learn. Only by blood and tears can progress be attained.

The Post Impressionist

Letter Home

It costs bu. 10 cents, Joe, to visit the Lincoln Museum down on Tenth street, but not many people go there.

Last year they used to have as many as 300 a day, but that was during February—when people think a lot about Lincoln—and before the Government started charging a dime.

"Don't have many now," one of the guards, an old Lincoln raconteur, told me. "A few folks trickle in during the day to see the exhibits, and some of 'em come in to use the rest room. But I guess that dime keeps a lot of visitors away."

The guards have hope, Joe, that when the Government finishes "stocking up the museum," business will pick up.

"They're even going to put the gun in here that Wilkes Booth killed Lincoln with," they said.

I hope crowds will start coming when they get the gun and the other stuff, but I'm not too optimistic.

You remember that old Darby House back home, Joe, that they never could rent because people said it was haunted. Maybe no one really believed it, but it did have a foreboding look and the fact that so many Darbys had died there didn't help any.

Well, this Lincoln Museum reminds me of the Darby House. It's housed in the shell of the old Ford's Theater—where Lincoln was shot. And it's as drab and uninviting a building, even now, as any haunted house.

From the outside it looks like a huge box-like barn. The front is of brick with broad shaded windows. Someone, with unintentional symbolism, has painted the bricks a sickening blood red, each brick outlined in a black mourning border.

It was built more than 100 years ago, and used for years as a Baptist church. Sermons, weddings—a few, and many funerals. You can sense it, Joe, in the somber atmosphere.

Shortly after Lincoln became President, the building was gutted by fire which reduced the pews to ashes and left the thick brick walls gaunt and bare. The Baptists left, and the structure was rebuilt and converted into Ford's Theater.

There was a gala opening in 1862, followed by three prosperous seasons. But the shadows were gathering.

On April 14, 1865, at approximately 10:30 p. m., "Our American Cousin," a third-rate comedy starring Laura Keene, was stopped in the middle of Act III, Scene II, by Booth's shot. It was the last play ever given in the old building, the last comedy, but not the last tragedy.

The door through which Booth made his desperate escape has been replaced by a window and is now encircled by the museum offices. Any reader of modern detective stories would have known better, Joe, but the guards seemed to take this desecration as a matter of course. The flag, which was ripped by Booth's spur as he leaped from the President's box, has met with tenderer care and hangs on the museum wall.

The narrow stone steps, down which they carried the bleeding Lincoln that night, are still there, and so is the house across the street where he died.

On that day, April 15, the Secretary of War ordered Ford's Theater closed and stationed guards around it.

Then the seats, the stage, the box where Lincoln sat, were ripped out, and the whole structure was remodeled and used as an office building by the War Department until June 9, 1893.

I told you it was a doom-ridden building, Joe, where even the vines, more dead than alive, have not fought their way to the roof in all these years.

While it was filled with workers that hot June day in 1893, the floors, which had been slowly weakening during the years since Lincoln died, suddenly gave way. There was as little warning as Booth gave. Twenty-three people were killed, 69 injured.

Even the Government seemed to give up then. For a while the wrecked old building was kept closed, as silent as a cemetery, but then it was repaired again and used as a storehouse for War Department records until 1932. It seems an appropriate repository for the names of all our dead and wounded.

In 1932 the Interior Department took over the building and ran it as a free museum until last year. Perhaps it would have been wiser to keep it free, for like that old house of the Darbys' it reeks of disaster, and Lincoln lovers prefer the classic white beauty of the Memorial to the more tangible mementoes of the drab museum.

Things of Lincoln in life, the chair from the old office in Springfield, the gray-black shawl that draped his shoulders, the letters of pardon he wrote, yes—a wreath, dried with the years, from Mary Lincoln's grave, all these are there in the dull-lighted museum.

But, as I say, Joe, I don't think it will ever be a popular place even for Lincolnians. There is too much death in the air.

Gains Vs. Losses

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Roosevelts had a ticklish problem on their hands with the Youth Congress. Other parents face the same problem when the children get crazy ideas and fall into bad company. Father is all for ordering them out of the house with a few time-worn remarks about never darkening his door again. But mother hears them through, cooks them a good dinner, and says, "Now, Frank, let's talk this thing over. After all, they're so young."

So they compromise. Father tells them exactly what he thinks of their foolishness. Mother risks the criticism of the neighbors, invites the wayward friends home, and serves them gallons of hot chocolate. The neighbors say plenty, as she knew they would, especially a fellow named Pegler, who is always quick to blame, and oh, so slow to praise.

Yes, Mr. Pegler, "Mrs. Roosevelt risked her personal and official prestige," but she has lost nothing. How much she has gained, no one will ever know. MRS. G. R. W.

Fair Enough

Gangster Diplomacy

IT WERE FUTILE to challenge the Popoli di Romano's version of the method by which American diplomatic representatives are selected, but still that system, with all its vulgar faults, may be preferred to the Italian way. That is, Americans may prefer it while wishing, nevertheless, for improvement. There is no way of learning, however, what the Italian people think about anything, including their Count Ciano, who married into this job.

The Popolo di Romano says that this country gives preference to enriched greengrocers who have been generous to the campaign funds of the party in power, and that is approximately right. Some of the greengrocers are newspaper publishers, some are merchants and some are packers, but it would be dishonest to quibble. For a general term, greengrocers will do, and it may be agreed, also, that they go to their posts untrained and, as a rule, are withdrawn to make room for other greengrocers as soon as they have be un to get the hang of things.

HOWEVER, there is comfort for our pride in a comparison of the American way with the Italian way, for we begin with the fact that Italian Ambassador and Ministers must be members of the Fascist Party, which means that they must be racketeers at heart, probably by practice.

We know that in the rising days of fascism in Italy it was customary for deadbeats and crooks of various kinds to join the party and denounce as enemies of the regime those who they wished to put out of the way The man who owed another man an honest debt would put the finger on him and have him shipped away to a prison camp or killed.

Of course, not all members of the party were active or positive crooks, but membership in the party bespoke a very hardy tolerance for the most unspeakable treachery, dishonesty and criminality. And some of the most distinguished patriots—or patrioteers, as they would be called in Americanese—were some of the most unscrupulous rotters of the Italian middle and upper classes.

The more brutal and indecent a man was, the more ready to persecute another man, even unto death by torture, the more likely he was to qualify for a party job and a handsome broadcloth uniform with a buzzard or canary on his cap. Not an eagle. The eagle was for Mussolini, although it could be mistaken for a vulture.

What fascism did was to substitute the Mafia system for the more enlightened but more difficult semidemocratic system. This just proved that the Italian nation, for all its culture and heredity, lacked the ability of the crude American people. They had to resort to gangsterism on a national scale, and the distinguished Fascists of the present who came through the unsettled days when the racket was being imposed on their nation were hoodlums of extraordinary talent.

They cut themselves in for commissions and concessions of all sorts, planted their relatives and mistresses in jobs which paid well and called for no particular ability, and those whose conduct proved them to be the least honest or decent rose to the top. For this was a system which placed the highest value on the lowest traits. Racketeering was not wiped out but was made a party monopoly.

Now it may be that this produces the best kind of diplomats for Italian purposes, inasmuch as diplomacy, in the Italian, German and Russian system, is an elegant form of safe-blowing, porch-climbing and eavesdropping. And it may be admitted that our system does not produce the best kind for American purposes. But if we were to adopt the Italian way we would now be represented in Rome by Mr. Al Capone, and it is doubtful, even so, that we would get much better than an even break there, for Capone was a genius only by comarison with the rest of us in the United States. In Italy, the native land of the racket, he might be only a punk, and they might steal his shirt.

AND, BY THE WAY, has anyone heard anything in the last few months about the indomitable legions of the Duce who advanced so briskly to the rear at Guadalajara and who now wear chain-mail chest protectors in the seat of their trousers? Weren't these irresistible legions going to do something to France a year or so ago when the cultured Old World diplomacy of Italy was loudly demanding Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy? This would seem an opportune time for the Duce's brave lions to carry out those threats—unless, of course, in the actual fac. of war, their indomitability faded out.

This last is not strictly pertinent to the subject of the piece, but it is always a pleasure to revive the glories of Guadalajara. It drives the Italian journalists crazy, and there are few greater pleasures than to hear Signor Virgilio Gayda scream about insults to the honor of the hasty Invincibles of Guadalajara.

The New 'Conspiracy'

By Ernest K. Lindley

The 'Plot' Against Advertising

ACCORDING to this column's tally, New Deal "conspiracies" against something or other that is fundamental in the American system have been discovered at the rate of only about one a month the last six months. The rate used to be at least one a week. Either the New Deal "conspirators" are losing their ingenuity or the politicians of the opposition have become more tolerant.

What is lacking in quantity is compensated for by quality, however. The most terrifying "conspiracy" detected by anybody in a year or longer has just been nosed out by Representative Bruce Barton. Mr. Barton asserts that the New Dealers want to "destroy national advertising."

ACCORDING to Mr. Barton, Donald E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the AAA, in the Department of Agriculture, is "antiadvertising," and has joined with the Federal Trade Commission to provike an attack on national advertising. Like almost everyone else who makes a living out of writing for newspapers and magazines, I see red when anyone conspires against advertising, which Mr. Barton, an expert on such affairs, properly defines as the "spark plug of industry."

Since he came to Congress, Barton has been an advocate of reason and restraint in the discussion of national problems. And, as an advertising man, he presumably has a meticulous respect for facts. Such a serious accusation from so weighty and responsible a source naturally impelled me to investigate. My investigation indicates that Barton is off base in asserting.

1. That Montgomery, in the AAA, has "joined together" with anybody in the Federal Trade Commission. The latter body is responsible to Congress and is not controlled by "New Dealers."

2. That $88,829 now asked by the Federal Trade Commission is to finance an investigation of advertising practices. It seems to be more an investigation into "methods and costs of distribution." Advertising is one item, but not the only one nor probably the most important.

3. That the Federal Trade Commission is packed with employes who are "antiadvertising." It was the friends of advertisers and advertising who insisted that this commission be given the authority to check "misleading" advertising when amendments to the pure food and drugs law were before Congress. The New Dealers wanted the power vested in the Pure Food and Drug Administration in the Department of Agriculture.

4. That Montgomery, in the Department of Agriculture, is anti-advertising.

MONTGOMERY is a conscientious and persistent advocate of more informative advertising, especially for articles bought by the ordinary housewife. His division of the AAA has done excellent work in educating consumers to see through the catchwords and look for facts in advertising.

"Consumers now are seeking facts," he said in a recent address, "and if advertising will not supply them, some other medium will be found . . .

"The consumer movement does not intend to assume the burden of attacking advertising. It is concerned chiefly with the way advertising works . . . The real purpose of the consumer movement is to obtain information which will assist buyers to make an intelligent comparison of products."

Incidentally, it takes more advertising space to print facts than to present a nifty catch-line.

Barton may have information which he has not disclosed to back up his accusation. But he is hardly the person to hold back facts. On the record to date, it looks as if somebody had sold him a bill of goods. Maybe he needs a little more of the consumer-training advocated by Donald Montgomery.

MY RESEARCHES did disclose one extremely rigorous criticism of advertising published in Advertising and Selling for July 16, 1936. This critique said: "Disraeli remarked of lawyers that they first try to get on, then to get honor, and at length to get honest. Advertising is somewhere between the first and second steps of that evolutionary process. It has proved its power to get and to push businesses on. It has not yet proved its right to be honored."

The author of this subversive doctrine was disclosed in Advertising and Selling. It was not Donald Montgomery, or anybody connected with the Federal Trade Commission, or anybody directly, indirectly or remotely connected with the New Deal. It was Bruce Barton's advertising firm: Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn.

The 'Secret Weapon'

By Dorothy Thompson

The Revolutionary Offensive

ON FEBRUARY 1, 1938, this column predicted that with the conquest of Austria by Nazi Germany the World Revolution would begin, and the World War.

We put the word "Revolution" ahead of the word "War." For the chief weapon in the Nazi armory has been, is and will be revolution. It is curious that this aspect of the war continues to escape most observers or to be relegated to second place. I believe this is a serious mistake.

Whether or not Nazi Germany intends to make an offensive in the west is a question. She will continue the war at sea, and possibly back it up by some great air offensive, although this is not certain, because it would invite serious reprisals.

But Nazi Germany is making another offensive, and that is a revolutionary offensive. The Revolution is the "secret weapon" of which Hitler bragged some months ago. And the Nazis are not making it alone; they are making it in complete harmony with Communist Russia. The program of the merged revolutionary propaganda and international espionage and sabotage systems, combined with two revolutionary organizations in all countries, including our own, is to reduce the western countries by dividing them internally, trusting the war to bring about economic collapse or difficult economic adjustments in the capitalist states, and meanwhile keeping America from doing anything at all in an economic or financial way to strengthen the other capitalist economies and prevent their breakdown.

THIS POLICY, of which the Nazis are now the front, is a policy of instigating and spreading civil war. It has always been part of the Communist program that in another war the disintegration of capitalism would bring civil war —for that is what revolution is. Hitler and Stalin are much less concerned with what is going on at the Maginot Line, where they, also, do not fear a mass offensive, than they are with what is going on in French factories and among French workers. While they direct their chief armed offensive at Great Britain, they are directing their chief revolutionary offensive at France. There was a large Communist Party in France and a small Fascist Party. The two are now working together. But since communism is a much better revolutionary propaganda among the workers, who also make up the bulk of the army and represent the broad masses, the Nazi propaganda is now Communist.

THIS PROPAGANDA is, in the first line, defeatist and pacifist. It is directed against the Daladier government; it tells the French workers that they are "pulling England's chestnuts out of the fire"; that the French soldier will have to bear the brunt of the war to save the British Empire, and that the British are prepared to sell them out to Germany, if they can restore in Germany, a strong capitalistic regime, which will then cooperate with English industry and trade to the detriment of France.

THIS PROPAGANDA is not conducted by Nazi Germans, but, for the greater part, by French Communists and, unfortunately, by German emigres. The latter confront the French government with a dilemma. Having given refuge to a great many German emigres, it now distrusts them all, for many of them are or have been Communists. It is true that thousands of former Communists deserted the Comintern the moment of the Russo-German pact, but it is also true that others pretended to and did not, and that others have never even pretended to.

The French government has locked up German emigres, and the procedure has greatly upset the liberal world, which constantly protests. Undoubtedly a great many innocent people have been interned. For the French, it must be said that they are letting out everybody who can furnish a thoroughly credible record; that everybody willing to enlist in the Foreign Legion for the duration of the war is free to enlist, and that anyone who can produce a visa for another country is also dismissed.

Actually they have let out some people whom, in their own interests, they should have kept locked up.

There are two men of my own acquaintance—from old journalist contacts abroad—now in this country busy spreading anti-French and anti-British propaganda, whom the French released. A quite appalling number of the spies who have been executed and without publicity are German emigres. Some of these are old Communists, still keeping, after the Russo-German pact, their blind obedience to the Party Line. Others have simply had their desperate economic condition exploited. The Nazis, having created a fearful situation for thousands of penniless refugees, now cynically offer to save their existences in France by offering them money to be spies, or threaten them into Nazi service by holding relatives at home as hostages.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the two revolutionary governments spread defeatism among the rich, of the old pro-Fascist or pro-Munich groups, in both England and France, on the argument that the continuation of the war will mean the end of the capitalist system, and that they should make peace. They hold out Goering as the white hope for the success in Germany of the latter program. It is an illusion. Goering is at least as much of a revolutionary as Hitler.

THE MANIFESTO issued by Dr. Robert Levy to the workers of the world ten days ago reveals the new strategy. "Workers of all lands, unite to smash the rule of English capitalism. You young, upward-striving nations of the earth, combine to annihilate the English dragon who blocks the treasures of the earth and withholds from you the riches of the world!"

On Thursday a very significant dispatch from former Czecho-Slovakia revealed what is happening there. The Nazis are now organizing the Communist movement in Bohemia-Moravia as a means of breaking the resistance of the old democratic and Czech nationalist spirit. Before the conquest there was a small Fascist organization in Prague called the "Vlajka." There was also a strong Communist Party, whose leaders have all left Czecho-Slovakia. Until about a month ago, when the Russian government asked for the withdrawal of Mr. Fierlander, the Czech ambassador to Moscow, Russia observed disinterest in the internal affairs of the Czech protectorate.

But now the formerly Fascist Vlajka is publishing a new Communist paper. This paper attacks the Czech emigres and the Czech Democrats as tools of the imperialist powers, supports Germany and calls the Nazi state "the apotheosis of Leninism."

The sheet is printed on excellent paper, hard for other journals to get; is edited by Jan Rys-Rozsevac, a former leader of Czech Fascism, and by Vojpa Musil, who used to be in the German broadcasting station in Vienna and from there conducted anti-Czech propaganda. The new paper bears the name of a former illegal Communist sheet called Rude Pravo (Red Law) and is distributed on the streets by cars that have been confiscated by the German army in Prague.

It is demanding the dissolution of the Czech police force, the dismissal of the Czech Mayor of Prague, and other governmental changes that would bring about the complete and final Nazification (or communization) of the protectorate. At the same time, policies are being put into operation that are destroying the existing capitalist structure of the protectorate.

THE FUSION of the Nazi and Communist revolutions — something that was foreseen by a few people and is now rapidly coming to pass—is by all odds the most important element in this war; for before the war began the Communists and the Nazis had introduced a Trojan horse into every single western country, including our own. The Communists have by far the more effective international organization amongst the workers and the youth in democratic countries, while the Nazis have contacts with the middle classes—in our country with the various Ku Klux offspring. Now each has the benefit of the other's organization.

To effect this merger, Hitler has become the Kerensky of Germany and of Europe, and Stalin has become the leader of Trotskyism.

Blank Checks For War Costs

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 22.—Even the British Parliament will not know how much the war costs until it is over. The government has introduced a system of token votes for £100, each one which when passed by Parliament will authorize the expenditure of hundreds of millions of pounds annually for the fighting services.

Not until the war is over and peace is signed will a detailed bill be presented to the country. Then the members of Parliament will learn exactly how much they voted every time they blindly passed a token vote for £100.

The government defends this apparent encroachment on democratic rights by saying it would be possible for Germany to deduce from detailed estimates the nature and scope of Britain's naval and air force building programme, the number of men in the navy and other valuable information. It says it is not practicable to present an exact bill because the expense of the army, navy and air force must vary with the progress of the war.

The naval estimates for the next financial year will add up on paper to £1,800 under 18 token votes, according to figures published this week. The number of men in the navy is not given, the estimate saying only "such numbers as His Majesty may deem necessary."

Last year's naval budget was £149,000,000. In a full year of the last war the navy took as much as £325,000,000 and had more than 400,000 men. The maximum number now authorized is 145,000 to which will be added "additional numbers" under the supplementary estimate issued today.

The Strange Game In The Balkans

Five-Handed Play Which Involves All The Powers

By Barnet Nover

LIKE SO MANY other European neutrals, the Balkan states can be said to be in the war in practically every respect except actual military involvement. And none of them can be at all sure that this exemption will be vouchsafed them very much longer.

Left to themselves, every one of the nations in the peninsula would no doubt favor a policy of aloofness from the struggles raging elsewhere on the continent. That is as true of the nations, such as Rumania, which want to preserve the territory they have, as of nations, such as Bulgaria and Hungary, which clamor for the reincorporation within their boundaries of lands taken from them at the end of the last war.

The Balkan states are, however, not being left to themselves. On the contrary, the Balkan peninsula is today the scene of a fierce diplomatic struggle whose outcome, still very much in doubt, may determine not only the fate of these nations but the fate of Europe as well.

THE STRUGGLE involves every one of Europe's great powers, Italy as well as Russia, Great Britain and France as well as Germany. But certain minor powers, notably Turkey and Rumania, have been assigned not unimportant roles in the developing drama.

Up to now, however, the action has been obscure. Developments taking place behind the scenes may have the decisive bearing on the denouement. And those actions which are being played out on the open stage in the full glare of publicity do not necessarily mean what, at first glance, they seem to mean.

For instance, there is still the unexplained presence in the Near East of a large and apparently growing Allied force. The existence of this force was for a long time denied. The tendency recently has been in the reverse direction. Great Britain and France, far from seeking to hide the fact of Allied concentrations in Syria, Palestine, Egypt and elsewhere in the eastern Mediterranean, have been doing everything possible to proclaim it.

The purpose of this publicity is not entirely clear. It is rumored that what the Allies ultimately have in mind is the creation of a new front and one free of the difficulties that exist in the West. This seems like a large order. More likely the Allied force in the Near East, when taken in conjunction with the strong language being used by the Turkish press in emphasizing Turkey's readiness to fight aggression in the Balkans, is probably intended, among other things, to stiffen the backs of the Balkan states in their relations with the Reich. Rumania's ban on shipments of high-grade airplane gasoline to Germany is a case in point.

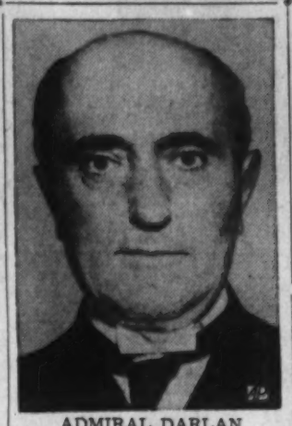
FROM THE VIEWPOINT of the Allies, however, the importance of the Balkan countries lies not only in their relation to what Germany may do or Russia may do but also, and perhaps more important, in the bearing of the Balkan situation on the Italian position.

Neither London nor Rome can for a moment afford to assume that Italy's neutrality is permanent and unchangeable. Far from it. The fact remains that the Italo-German alliance was reaffirmed after the war began, that Italy calls herself a "nonbelligerent" rather than a neutral and that the Italian press has remained consistently friendly to the Reich and consistently critical of the Allies.

Nor can the Allies forget that while Mussolini's Mediterranean ambitions might be satisfied if the Allies lose, whether or not Italy gets into the war, they could not be satisfied if the Allies win. Indeed, a defeat for Germany, which under present circumstances would also mean a defeat for Russia, would leave Italy the only totalitarian power in a Europe in which Great Britain and France would, for some years, have the balance of power.

They cannot assume, therefore, that Italy, for all her professed opposition to Bolshevism, would not sooner or later become the third partner in a German-Russian combination cemented at the immediate expense of the Balkans and the ultimate expense of the Allies.

Assuredly as long as the Allies retain mastery of the seas, Italy will remain technically on the fence. But there is much she can do negatively for the Reich even if the opportunity for positive action does not become immediately available. She might, for instance, sabotage the efforts of the Allies to make the Balkans an effective part of the Allied blockade. She has already tried to do so and not without success.



ADMIRAL DARLAN

Neither The Allies Nor The Italians Hold All Trumps

THE ALLIES, however, are in a position to trump certain of Italy's cards and are already beginning to do so. The Allied force in the Near East is probably as much, if not more, of a warning to Italy of the dangers inherent in overbenevolent Italian neutrality toward Germany as it is a possible counter against Russia or Germany. And the announcement from London that coal shipments from Hamburg to Italy would no longer be allowed to proceed unmolested shows an inclination to use Italy's weakness—she is terribly deficient in coal—against her if Rome remains uncooperative.

What happens in the Balkans thus has an intimate relationship to the whole European picture. The still static Balkan front, it can be said without much exaggeration, extends to the Siegfried and Maginot lines, in the west, to the Mannerheim Line, in the north.

If the Finns hold out, a Russian thrust in the direction of the Balkans is likely to be postponed. If the Italian loophole in the Allied blockade can be plugged up, that is certain to have a bearing on Germany's readiness to chance a major offensive. Similarly, if the Balkan nations can be convinced that the Allies are and will remain stronger than Germany, their readiness to cooperate with London and Paris is certain to increase. But the Balkan game is not yet over. There are still many cards that remain to be played.

Moral Courage Needed, Says Dr. Emerson

Cleveland Cleric Speaks at Epiphany Noon Lenten Rites

Creative intelligence, moral courage and courage based on communion with God are "desperately needed" today to stave off world chaos, the Very Rev. Chester B. Emerson, D. D., dean of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, Ohio, stated here yesterday.

"There is nothing hidden that shall not be revealed to inquiring minds," he said at Epiphany noonday Lenten rites, contending that "science is only the bundle of answers that the universe has given to wise questions. There is nothing in all the world that has not been here from the beginning that has not needed creative intelligence to discover and use it."

Knowledge Misused

Dean Emerson, who concludes his series of addresses today, said "because one may be wise and wicked at the same time, we need moral character also."

"The use of TNT may be no concern to the scientist," he continued, "but it deeply concerns the Christian that uses it. The difficulty with the world today is the fact that moral conscience has not kept pace with physical inventions, so that the world is made a shambles by the misuse of knowledge and power."

The cleric said courage to face facts and to deal with them, "however ugly they may be," was greatly needed today, "whether it is the pain of our persons or the terrible evil abroad in the world."

Methodist to Speak

Dean Emerson insisted that "no artificial courage, based on a refusal to meet life head-on, or on the substitute of sheer overactivity, which so often takes the place of purposefulness, can meet the terrific needs of our situation. Only the power that comes from the Almighty can give us strength to endure."

The Rev. S. Carroll Coale, pastor of Brightwood Methodist Church, is scheduled to speak today at 12 noon at the Penn Theater, at union services of Southeast churches. The Rev. Edward G. Latch, Chevy Chase Methodist cleric, spoke yesterday. Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., spoke last night at Chevy Chase Baptist Church at community Lenten rites.

Chitwood Rites Set Today in Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—Political leaders and members of the bar from throughout southwest Virginia are expected to attend the funeral of Joseph H. Chitwood, U. S. district attorney for Western Virginia, in the First Baptist Church here at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Justice Department officials said at Washington that Frank Tavenner, of Woodstock, assistant district attorney, probably would be given a temporary appointment as district attorney by Federal Judge John Paul of Harrisonburg until the President can make a permanent appointment. Both Senators Glass and Byrd have endorsed Tavenner for the position, and it is expected that he will receive it.)

Police said the truck, operated by Earl E. Stewart, colored, 38, of 1413 T street northwest, was in collision with an automobile driven by Edwin D. Cook, 36, of Arlington, Va. Cooksey was charged with reckless driving.

James R. Bowings, 18, of 1209 C street northeast, was struck by an automobile on Fifteenth street near G street southeast. He was treated at Providence Hospital for head injuries and a possible fracture of the left arm. Police said the automobile was driven by William A. Chappelear, 50, of 807 Seventeenth street northeast.

Two 14-year-old boys riding a bicycle together were hurled to the street at Fourth and K streets northwest by an automobile which police said was operated by George E. Smith, of 960 Randolph street northwest. Carroll Dickson, of 421 Ninth street northeast, suffered a concussion and George Smith, of 336 Fourteenth street northeast, was treated for minor injuries.

Two other boys, roller skating in different parts of the city, were injured when they collided with automobiles. William Turner, colored, 10, of 423 Fifth street southeast, was struck while roller skating in the 400 block of E street southeast by an automobile, which, police said, was operated by Harold R. Lindsay, 32, of 4001 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and suffered a fractured right knee. James Jones, colored, 16, of 908 N street northwest, was cut when he skated into a taxicab at Second and N streets northwest.

Shirley Mae Ryan, 9, of 1524 C street northeast, suffered minor injuries when she was struck by an automobile in the 1500 block of D street northeast. The automobile was operated, police reported, by James P. McCollin, 44, of 330 Seventeenth street northeast.

Joseph Eastern, colored, 6, of 430 First street southwest, suffered a fractured left leg and head injuries when he was struck by an automobile at First and D streets southwest. Milton E. Johnson, colored, 25, of 38 Q street southwest, was charged with operating an automobile with bad hand brakes.

Antonio Catena, 39, of 1219 G street northeast, working in a plowpit at 1500 Benning road northeast, was injured about the head, chest and legs when he was struck by an automobile. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Three persons were injured and a traffic control box was torn from its moorings when two automobiles collided at First and K streets northwest. Injured were Seline A. Pascoe, of the 300 block of Thirty-fourth place northeast; Raymond Johnson, 22, of La Plata, Md., and Hanna Paran, of La Plata.

Mrs. Minnie Pearl Nash, 30, of Arlington, Va., was struck by a street car at Seventh street and Constitution avenue northwest. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts on the head and neck.

Engineers Scoff

A dozen New York municipal engineers, emerged from Union Station yesterday, scratched their heads, looked again at the new array of Neon "walk" lights and promptly labeled the "whole mess" impractical for their city.

"We wouldn't dare try it," one laughed. "Some of our 'Dead End' youngsters would be sure to try their slingshots on them." More seriously, they indicated that they thought the system would be impossible to enforce.

In Washington for a week-end of sightseeing and a day's serious study of Federal engineering research, the New Yorkers will examine research technique at the Bureau of Standards and the Abingdon Research Division of the Bureau of Public Roads.

L. H. Csanyi, Manhattan research engineer, said that they are most anxious to examine the Abingdon laboratory, which, "for a highway man, is one of the most important centers of interest in the entire country."

Reports of new discoveries and road building innovations will have much more value to the New Yorkers after they have examined the conditions under which research is carried on, Csanyi said.

Parish Schools' 130th Birthday Is Celebrated

St. Joseph's College, System's Birthplace, Recalls Founding

By the Associated Press

Emmitsburg, Md., Feb. 22.—Students and townspeople of this small college town near the Pennsylvania line paused today in memory of two big events—Washington's Birthday and the 130th anniversary of the founding of the Catholic parochial school system in the United States.

From the handful of poor pioneer children who attended first classes in the old "white house" on the Fleming farm February 22, 1810, the institution established by the beloved Mother Seton has grown today to a modern educational plant known as St. Joseph's College.

Leaving Baltimore June 21, 1809, Mother Seton, her small daughter, and three others came to Emmitsburg to locate a school in a country that had been inhabited only by Indians and trappers a few years previously.

Many hardships and privations were endured, but Mother Seton, the school's first superior, and ten sisters who came a few weeks later, taught the "three r's" to the children of the hardy farm people with one hand and went about enlarging and improving the institution with the other.

Recognizing that a fixed code of rules and regulations must be adopted in the interests of a progressive college, Mother Seton, the Rev. Father Dubourg, president of St. Mary's Seminary at Baltimore, and Archbishop Carroll placed into effect the constitution of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul. This action founded the Sisters of Charity in the United States.

Eighteen sisters took the vows of religion in 1813 and St. Joseph's College was incorporated under Maryland statutes in 1816. Two years later the first normal school was begun.

That Mother Seton did her work well can be seen not only by the cluster of modern college buildings that have sprung up around the place where the first crude log classrooms stood.

Seal to Study Nonsupport Case Appeal

Appeal from a District Court order freeing a Washington man from Occoquan workhouse, where he was serving a nonsupport sentence imposed by Juvenile Court will be studied today by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal and Juvenile Court Judge Fay Bentley.

Seal said he will confer with Judge Bentley on the possibility of appealing the decision of District Court Justice F. Dickinson Letts ordering the release of Walter B. Wilson, colored, after a habeas corpus hearing Wednesday.

Wilson had been confined to the District Jail and Occoquan since January 9, when Judge Bentley ordered him to serve a year for failing to obey a court order requiring him to pay $20 a month to Mrs. Mary Wilson. Justice Letts held that since no children were involved in the case, Wilson's conviction was unlawful, pointing out that the jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court was limited by the act of June 1, 1938, to cases involving children.

The decision, it was learned, would mean release for five other persons now at the Occoquan workhouse on nonsupport similar charges.

Judge Bentley, whose term expires today, has headed the Juvenile Court for six years.

Jack Jouett Day Asked in Measure Given Assembly

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—Delegate W. H. W. Cassell of Portsmouth today offered a joint resolution to designate June 4 "Jack Jouett Day" in honor of the famous ride of Capt. Jouett to warn Thomas Jefferson and members of the General Assembly at Charlottesville of the British plan to "take or disperse" the legislators.

Jouett rode from Cuckoo Tavern in Louisa County to Charlottesville a distance of some 40 miles, to warn Jefferson at Monticello and then notify the assemblymen, who fled into the mountains.

Activities This Week in Capital Clubs

By Mary Harris.

NEPTUNE'S NICE NEWS. Organist Glen Hardman, singing Alice O'Connell and pianistic Evalyn Tyner were all due to leave the Neptune Room in a few days. But the engagements of all three have been extended until March 29. This group, with emcee Bert Granoff, offers some of the finest and best balanced diversion around town. Their retention is another bright move by the Freres Lurba, owners of Neptune.

MAYFAIR COMMUNIQUE. A wire from Mayfair's Jimmy Byrd says that it will be the Rhythm Boys, formerly with Paul Whiteman, who will open in Mayfair on March 5 and not Art Barker's Trio, which he hopes to engage later in the season . . . Maria Kars'n's Trio will remain over for an extra day on March 4, later open in the Fort Hayes Hotel in Columbus, Ohio. It will be Maria's third engagement at the Fort Hayes.

CANDID CAMERA. Shar-Zad. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins looking no end regal at the table usually reserved for the management. . . . Bright-eyed Pat Hurley and her fiance, Dr. Henry Beall Gwynn, at a table a deux. . . . Maestro Bill McCune beamingly displaying samples of the pins he's sending to members of the Bill McCune Fan Club.

Metronome. Betty Brodel, new raven-haired singer, looking as though she'd stepped out of "G. W. T. W." with her highish hair-do and that black-and-white intaglio pendant. But giving an awful wham to "Wham" in the strictly 1940 manner.

Lotus. Betty Ferro in a mutterfly hat that received special mention from emcee Bill Strickland. . . . Maestro Leon Brusiloff applauding the floor show. . . . Manager Dick Lamm looking in the pink again after those dozens of seances with the dentist.

SON WRITERS. Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, has just written a new song, very saucy and tuneful. He thinks he'll call it "You Must Be Mine Tonight" . . . Lee Kerry, the Trioka's too good-looking emcee, is singing a new number he's just composed. It's "I See You."

NOVACHORD ENTHUSIAST. If you see a jovial Irishman giving the Rainbow Room's novachord a brilliant swing, don't think Milton Davis is going on vacation. The visiting player will be Albert Donovan of New York, one of the country's real novachord enthusiasts, who's just arrived at the Shoreham with his friend, Harry Rowan.

ALICE O'CONNELL, songstress of the Neptune Room

TIPS TO REMEMBER. You'll have just about two weeks longer to enjoy the Mecico music of Opalee and her trio in the Hi Hat. Their successors haven't been chosen. . . . Madrillon will celebrate its Twentieth anniversary on March 1 with free birthday cake and posies for the patrons. And twenty years of successful night clubbing, my friends, is a fine testimonial to the abilities of Peter Borras, M. Martin and Chef Maggia. . . . Russ Cullen of the Pall Mall Room, claims he was kicked on the shin by one of the wooden horses of the midnight show. We knew that they bucked, but not that they kicked. . . . Eddy Mayhoff's chatterbox specialties at Cafe Caprice have been praised by no less an expert than Fred Allen.

RIVER BEND SWING. It's "Swing Night" at River Bend tonight. George Stein and his band think that Friday is a good night for them to go slightly cuh-razy with rhythm. They have stewed up a batch of studies in pure swing that will do your heart and feet good.

SWEET LISTENING. "Tumblin' Tumbleweed," concocted into a vivid arrangement by Artie Hume, and just brought out this week by Pete Macias' orchestra at the Lounge Riviera. . . . The blithe accordioning of Lyda Ehrenberg from the table to table in Del Rio's Fiesta Room. . . . That new and "different" arrangement of "Indian Summer" played by Bill Downer's orchestra at the Nightingale. . . . The vibraphoning of DeVaughn Clements at the Fat Boy. De Vaughn has a fine and expensive and he knows how to make it sit up and say "Uncle!"

Do FALSE TEETH Rock, Slide or Slip?

FASTEETH, an improved powder to be sprinkled on upper or lower plates, holds false teeth more firmly in place. Do not slide, slip or rock. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. FASTEETH is alkaline (non-acid). Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

Pan American Library Group Meets Today

Convention to Mark 50th Anniversary Of Union's Founding

The third convention of the Inter-American Bibliographical and Library Association, commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Pan American Union, will open today at 9:30 a. m. in the Hall of the Americas, Pan American Union.

Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, will address the morning session with James B. Childs, chief of the document division, Library of Congress, presiding.

Other speakers at the first session will be the Rev. Irenaeus Herscher, St. Bonaventure College; Alfred Coester, Leland Stanford University; Rafael Heliodoro Valle, University of Mexico, and Charles F. Gosnell, Queens College, New York City.

John T. Vance, chief of the law division, Library of Congress, will preside at the luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel at 12:30 p. m. Speakers will include William J. Wilson, Washington, and Fernando Ortiz, Havana, Cuba.

The next session will convene at 2:30 p. m. with R. D. W. Conner, Archivist of the United States, presiding. An address will be made by Vernon D. Tate, chief of the division of photographic archives and research, National Archives; Luther H. Evans, director, legislative service, Library of Congress; Robert C. Smith, assistant director, Hispanic foundation, Library of Congress; and Philip C. Brooks, National Archives.

A dinner at 7 p. m. at the Willard will be addressed by Harold W. Jones, librarian, Army Medical Center; Teresa Umlauff, cataloguer, library of the University of San Marcos, Lima, Peru; and A. Curtis Wilgus, president of the association.

Morning and afternoon sessions tomorrow will hear Charles E. Babcock, librarian, Columbus Memorial Library, Pan American Union; Alma C. Mitchell, president, Special Library Association, and M. L. Raney, director, university libraries, University of Chicago.

Mrs. Alice Baker Dies in Capital; Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Alice Baker, a resident of Washington for 30 years, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Eugene Whitmore, 2139 Wyoming avenue northwest.

Mrs. Baker, widow of Henry S. Baker, was born in Baltimore and came here early in her married life.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from her daughter's home. Burial will be in Shepherdstown, W. Va.

Mrs. Baker is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Percy T. Burness, and a son, W. Lester Baker, both of Washington.

Mrs. Albert's Will Probated

The will of Mrs. Annie E. Abert of Rockville, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, bequeaths her entire estate to her sisters, Mrs. Emily Greenlee and Misses Elsie M., Lillian C., Matilda O. England, in equal shares. The instrument, which was executed August 30, 1936, does not reveal the value of the estate. Mrs. Abert was the wife of Dr. Charles Abert, of Rockville.

Communistic Activity Noted Only Once in 7 Years in CCC

Case So Trifling, Director-Designate J. J. McEntee Says, That He Ordered Investigation of Camps Be Dropped

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

In the seven years of its existence, the Civilian Conservation Corps has discovered only one case of Communist activity in the camps of sufficient importance to warrant an investigation, the CCC director-designate, J. J. McEntee, revealed yesterday.

He said the investigation showed that the attempt to proselyte enrollees was so trifling and had such negligible results that he ordered the matter dropped.

In 1934, McEntee said, copies of a mimeographed bulletin called the Camp Spark were found in a few Eastern camps. It was believed to have been issued by the Young Communistic League, which appeared to be attempting to secure names of enrollees for a mailing list.

When a check showed that the mailing list did not exceed 468 names, McEntee said, he paid no further attention to the matter. After a few issues, the publication ceased.

Although CCC camps, populated by young workers from low-income families, offer ideal locations for the spread of Communist doctrine, according to Communist Party theory, occasional left-wing speakers only serve to "amuse" the boys, McEntee said. As a result, he said, "soapboxers" very rarely appear in the camps.

McEntee also asserted that no cases of pro-Fascist organizational attempts had been reported to CCC headquarters and only one complaint of anti-Semitism had been made.

He said the "CCC cure for Communism" is three meals a day for the boys, an opportunity for work, plenty of recreation, good leadership and extensive vocational and citizenship training.

The discordancies in Army musical organizations, noted in this space yesterday, apply not to the Army band, which is the one in Washington, but to the regimental bands throughout the country, it should be explained.

No one, it is called to our attention, has heard anything but the sweetest harmonies from the Army band. The disharmony in the situation, it appears, is only because the field organizations do not measure up to the standard set by the band here.

Oddenda—At the request of the A. F. G. E., Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, has introduced a bill giving watchmen at the National Zoological Park the status of national park police . . . Val Lorwin, Labor Standards analyst, will give a course on Government writing and publicity at the Federal Workers School . . . A survey by the U. F. W. A. showed that only three branches of the Agriculture Department—Forest Service, Library and Home Economics—are following precepts set at a conference last summer to grant official parking space to clerks as well as big-wigs.

Speaking of lawyers—and who doesn't—the tribulations of an assistant general counsel of a large Federal department are worthy of note.

In the process of transferring the lawyer from one pay roll to another, the Civil Service Commission demanded his birth certificate. The attorney explained he had none, inasmuch as his State did not require such a document at the time of his birth. The doctor and nurse in attendance at the time, he said, now are dead. Therefore, would not an affidavit from his mother suffice?

The commission said no, arguing that the mother might be prejudiced.

Correspondence continued, with a large dossier on the case being built up. Census records were searched, but to no avail. The lawyer asked the commission whether his present existence did not create a strong presumption in favor of the belief that he had, at some time in the past, been born. The commission still said no.

Finally, however, the commission relented, and said an affidavit from his mother would be acceptable. The document was prepared, signed, notarized and sent to the commission. Through a typographical error, however, it stated the date of birth as April 1, 1939.

The commission wrote back a terse and suspicious note: Was it true that the lawyer had been born on April 1, 1939.

The tired attorney took a page of the flossiest note paper in his office, bearing across the top the imposing title of the general counsel of the department. On it, the attorney wrote, in a childish scribble, "Goo-goo."

The case is still pending.

U. S. to Acquire Famed Virginia Battlefield Area

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 22.—One hundred and sixty-two acres of the famed Bloody Angle sector of the Spotsylvania Courthouse battlefield, scene of the fiercest close-quarter fighting of the War Between the States, will be presented formally to the Federal Government for inclusion in the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Battlefield Memorial Park on May 11 by the Pennsylvania Commandary, Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

A simple ceremony is planned. In the onlooking crowd will be approximately 150 members of the Loyal Legion (descendants of the officers of the Union Army), and a number of their wives and daughters, representatives of the Pennsylvania and Virginia Legislatures and others.

The principal speakers are to include United States Senator Harry Flood Byrd, who has been invited to accept the gift of land; Col. William Innes Forbes, commander-in-chief of the legion; the Rev. Joseph Ford Newton, who will make the presentation; former State Senator C. O'Conor Goolrick, of the city, and Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Feb. 22.—Archibald MacLeish today called on his fellow librarians to protect the records of human culture from "the demagogues, official liars and terrorizing mob."

The Librarian of Congress said members of his profession can no longer be "passive" or "neutral" custodians of books.

Librarians must constantly and vigorously affirm "to the people the nobility and beauty of their intellectual inheritance," he asserted.

MacLeish spoke at Commemoration Day exercises at Johns Hopkins University, which conferred on him the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

The "triumph of the lie and the mutilation of culture" are commonplaces in the world of 1940, MacLeish said. "Whatever the duty of the librarian may have been in a different world and a more peaceful generation," he declared, "his duty now is to defend—to say, to fight and to defend."

No one else bears such heavy responsibility for combating "those who would cut off here and ink out there the texts their prejudices or their parties or their churches or their fears find hateful," he continued.

Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of the university, announced gifts and bequests for the academic division totaling $2,500,000. A bequest of the late Dr. John Martin Vincent, former professor of European history, will make available approximately $1,000,000 for advancing the history department's work, Dr. Bowman said.

Funeral Today For Cowsill, 84, Retired Builder

Funeral services for Nathan Cowsill, 84, retired building contractor, who died Tuesday at his home, 809 Seventh street northeast, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the residence.

Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Born in Bolton, England, Mr. Cowsill came to this country 50 years ago. He had a part in the construction of several Washington structures, including the old Post-office Building, the Southern Railway Building, the Mendota Apartments and the Douglas Methodist Memorial Church, of which he was a member.

Mr. Cowsill also belonged to the Myron Parker Lodge of Masons and the Amaranth Lodge, Knights of Pythias.

He leaves three daughters, Miss Evelyn Cowsill and Mrs. Alma C. Germann, both of Washington, and Mrs. Joseph W. Sanford, of Atlanta; a son, Harry Cowsill, of this city; a sister, Mrs. Sarah Fielding, and a brother, Arthur Cowsill, also of Washington.

Va. Assembly Mill Is Fed 695 Bills, 16% Less Than '38

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—Virginia's 1940 lawmakers are not so prolific with bills as their predecessors of 1938.

Bills introduced through yesterday—the fortieth day of the session—total 695. The delegates have introduced an even 400 and the senators 295.

On the fortieth day of the 1938 session 842 bills had been introduced—538 in the house and 304 in the senate.

It has been customary to prohibit introduction of bills other than finance and local bills after the fortieth day of legislative sessions in Virginia, except by unanimous consent. However, the assembly last week rescinded its previous action and voted to allow general bills to be introduced through Monday, February 26. This may give the bill writers an opportunity to catch up with the 1938 number.

G.O.P. Publicist to Speak

"Life Begins in '40" will be the topic of an address by Wells Church, director of radio and assistant director of publicity for the Republican National Committee, at 12:30 p. m. today at a luncheon of the Washington Round Table at the National Press Club.

Fire Razes Church Near Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 22.—Fire, said to have caught from a defective flue, destroyed Zion Hill Baptist Church, colored, located opposite the gate to Merrie Mills, on Route 250, about 12 miles east of Charlottesville.

The building was erected shortly after the Civil War and the church was formed under the leadership of the Rev. Robert Hughes, who belonged to the Randolph family of Edgehill.

Career, Children, Clubs and Home Are Successfully Handled by Amelia Gude Thomas

Streisel Kuchen Unknown to Most Of Their Playmates

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

A SYMBOL of the ability of present day women to carry on more than one activity successfully is personified in Amelia Gude Thomas. Mother of three daughters, vice president of a local florist company, president of a Parent-Teachers Association, past director of the Florist Telegraph Delivery Association, past president of the local Zonta Club and on the present board of directors and the inter-city chairman of the Washington Chapter of Zonta and a teacher of 8-year-olds at the First Reformed Church, she yet finds time to operate her home easily and pleasantly.

Martha Ellyn

Mrs. Thomas is endowed with a bubbling personality and a sense of humor that have no doubt contributed greatly to her ability to go to business each day and also manage a home which embodies all that a home should. Good management is also another one of this career woman's attributes. In carrying out the schedule for running her home, Mrs. Thomas gives much of the credit to Cora, her capable and reliable maid who has been with her for several years. She has so trained Cora that the maid goes to market, builds her own menus, cares for the three children and even makes costumes for their school and dancing needs. Serenity and a capacity for throwing off small worries are the chief needs of a woman who would combine a career with homemaking, Mrs. Thomas believes.

While still a high school student, Mrs. Thomas took an active part in the business of her late father, William F. Gude, whose establishment celebrated its golden anniversary November 19, 1939. After her marriage, Mrs. Thomas continued her work in her father's company and has for some time been the vice president.

Every consideration is given her three daughters—Katharine, 10; Amelia, 9, and Nancye, 7—necessary to their rearing. That Mrs. Thomas is keenly interested in their education is evidenced by the fact that she is the president of the Parent-Teachers Association of the Alexander R. Shepherd School, which her daughters attend.

Mrs. Thomas also gives consideration to food for her growing daughters. But, although they eat all kinds of food, yet each has a definite favorite. Katherine is fond of all green vegetables; Amelia likes noodles and Nancy insists that hominy is one of the world's best foods. All of the girls love Streisel Kuchen and are much amused that most of their schoolmates do not know their favorite food. The recipe for making it is one that Mrs. Thomas says has been in her family for years

Streisel Kuchen

Cream 4 tablespoons butter with 2 cups sugar. Add the grated rind of 2 lemons, 2 cups milk, 2 eggs, 6 cups flour, 3 tablespoons baking powder and 2 teaspoons salt and mix thoroughly. Blanch 1 pound almonds and put into a colander. Slip off skins and rinse quickly and then run nuts through a meat grinder. Mix the ground almonds, 1 cup sugar and 2 tablespoons cinnamon and spread on top of the dough which has been spread in a cake plate. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes.

When the day's tasks are completed in the business world, Amelia Gude Thomas, successful career woman, rushes home for the children's hour. It is then she gathers together her three daughters for a cozy family chat. Seated on the floor is Katharine who smiles up at Nancye squeezed into the same chair with her mother, while Amelia stands near

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Miss Hughes Finds Her Heart Warmed By Heavy Snowfall

New York, Feb. 22

Well, the old town has finally made good, and Florida's laurels as a cold spot can safely wither. It snowed for 24 solid hours, with intervals of large wet smacks which quickly turned to ice particles that smacked the face like a handful of B-B shot. What a time we had, sliding and falling down. Why, a guy on skis was actually seen going through Times Square, and this is no idle jesting.

Alice Hughes

It was a snowstorm the like of which we almost never see in these unregenerate times, and gave little Mayor Spike LaGuardia a chance to trot out the millions of dollars worth of snow-removel plows, tanks and armored cars he's been collecting for some years. It's a ghastly thing when this jam-packed town is snow-bound—the poet, Whittier, didn't know the half of it. But I must say the city boys do an astonishing job of dealing with it.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The best crack I heard in Miami came from Attorney Frank Katzentine, nominated by a colleague as "the typical Miamian." Said the counselor—"We're still pioneering down here—but with luxury." There's just a fillip of irony in that apparent paradox which pleasantly warms the mind...

Again we are peering at the screen shadow of the incredible Hedy Lamarr, in the picture she made with Spencer Tracy. The studio had frightful trouble with that baby—once they laid it away after laying out hundreds of thousands. But they pumped it back to life. There's no picture spectacle quite as breathtaking as that Lamarr belle...

Betty Hutton, the cute jitterbugging child now on revue here, turned up at a popular eating house the other night in an unusual white silk jersey dinner dress, shirred right down the center, neck to hem. With it went a white turban, to which a miniature Benda mask was clipped. Several of the young blades at nearby tables misforked their vittles, and no wonder. She was a pretty sight.

First Prize, $3.
Mrs. C. J. Cassidy, 1063 Michigan avenue northeast

Recipe: Saute 1 pint sliced mushrooms in 1½ tablespoons butter until tender. Set aside. Put 1 pound shrimp, ½ pint oysters and 2 hard cooked chopped eggs into a buttered casserole or individual ramekins. Pour over a sauce made as follows: Melt 1½ tablespoons butter and add 1 medium-sized minced onion and cook until tender but not brown. Stir in 1 tablespoon flour, and add 1 cup cream or top milk, stirring slowly and constantly. Add 1 teaspoon salt, a dash of cayenne, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 bay leaf and the sauted mushrooms. Blend well. Pour over the fish. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons grated American cheese. Bake about 1 hour in oven at 350 degrees.

Broiled Halibut Steak With Almond Fritters

Second Prize, $2.
Mrs. Helen Murphy, 2515 Thirteenth street northwest

Recipe: Take 1 lagre slice of halibut, cut 1 inch thick. Oil on both sides and broil, turning over once. Dress with 3 tablespoons melted butter and juice of 1 lemon, whisked up, then salt and pepper. Serve on hot platter garnished with hot almond fritters and ice cold white grapes. To make almond fritters, put 3 tablespoons butter and ¼ teaspoon salt in a saucepan. Add 1¼ cups water or consumme. Let it boil up. Take from fire and beat in 1 cup sifted flour all at once (as for cream puffs). Add 2 unbeaten eggs, one at a time. Beat well. Have 1½ cups finely shaved almonds spread out thin. Drop batter by 1½ teaspoons into nuts and roll until covered with almond slivers. Fry in deep fat until golden brown.

Oyster Pudding

Third Prize, $1.
Mrs. B. C. Phillips, 631 Allison street northwest

Recipe: Butter your largest baking dish (a glass one if available) and spread the bottom of dish with a layer of rolled, dried bread crumbs. Drain the liquor from at least 2 dozen oysters (more according to family and appetites). Add liquor to 3 cups of milk after placing half of the well-picked-over oysters over the crumbs. Season with salt, pepper and paprika and add 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper. Cover with next layer of crumbs and oysters and dot over with 2 tablespoons butter. Have 3 well-beaten eggs and add these to the combined milk and oyster liquor, being careful not to combine milk and liquor until the last moment to prevent curdling. Pour over top of the pudding and let it soak well before putting into oven. To make an attractive crusty top, cooked well-drained rice may be spread over top in a blanket and browned to a delicate golden. Bake at 350 degrees for about 40 minutes. Garnish around sides of dish with parsley and serve hot in the casserole.

Cottage Cheese Pancakes

Mrs. A. A. Rosenfeld, 2124 I street northwest

Recipe: Place 1 pound cottage cheese in a bowl, add salt and pepper to taste, and 2 unbeaten eggs. (Just break eggs and place in bowl with cheese.) Mix well with fork, gradually add 4 tablespoons soda cracker crumbs. Let remain for 5 to 10 minutes, until liquid is absorbed. Spread handful of cracker crumbs on plate. Melt 2 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons other fat together in skillet on slow heat. Dip a tablespoon in the melted fat and with it take up a spoonful of cheese and roll it in crumbs, repeating until all cheese is used. Turn up heat until fat simmers. Place balls of cheese in pan, flattening with spoon. Fry to golden brown on one side, turn gently with spatula and brown on other side. If more shortening is needed, it may be added while pancakes are in skillet. Serve plain or with raspberry jam. Serves 4.

$25 THIRD CASH PRIZE
50 PRIZES EACH $2.00 CASH
100 PRIZES OF NEW "STOP-DRIP" SYRUP PITCHERS

Here's What You Do! Use these two lines of rhyme:

These folks who know use Golden Crown,
The most delicious Syrup in town and Make Up Two Additional Lines of your own to go with them to complete a rhyme stanza of four lines, arranged in any order that you wish, rhyming in any way that you wish.

HINTS TO HELP YOU! First get acquainted with Golden Crown Table Syrup. Be one of "those folks who know"! Taste its wonderful, smooth deliciousness on hot cakes, waffles, and all kinds of breads. Enjoy its wholesome goodness, rich in food energy for growing children and grown-ups, too. Study its labeling. All this will aid you in composing your lines, and you'll find writing about it is easy. Talk with your friends—you may get ideas from them. Children, ask your teachers and your parents to help you. Put your own originality to work. Prize winning ideas often come like a flash. When you have a good thought, send it in, and when you have a better one, send that, too.

JUST FOLLOW THESE EASY CONTEST RULES!!
1—Compose two original lines of your own and combine them with the two lines given you elsewhere, in any order of arrangement of the four lines that you wish, to complete a four line rhyme stanza, which will make sense and carry out the thought expressed in the two lines given. The last words of your two lines may (but do not have to) rhyme with "Crown" or "Town."
2—Print or write plainly your completed rhyme stanza of four lines together with your name and address, on the back of a label taken from any size package of Golden Crown Table Syrup. (Or you may write on separate sheet, with label attached.) Mail your entry to Contest Dept., Steuart, Son & Co. Dep-C Eastern Avenue, Baltimore, Md. on or before February 29, 1940.
3—In place of the label of Golden Crown Table Syrup, you may use the label of any of the other syrup and molasses products of Steuart, Son & Co., including Golden Crown White Syrup, Ri-Ko-Mo (a blend of corn syrup and West Indies molasses), Golden Joy Cane Sugar and Maple Syrup, and Crowne Old Time Molasses, or facsimile of same.
4—Any one may enter this contest, except employees of Steuart, Son & Co., and of their advertising agency, and their families. You may send as many different entries as you desire provided each entry is accompanied by a separate label. If more than one entry is submitted for the same label, such entries will be disqualified. If the label is torn in removing it from the container, more than half of the label must be sent.
5—Contest closes February 29, 1940. All entries postmarked before the close of that day will be considered.
6—Entries will be judged for originality, aptness and merit. Decision of the judges will be final. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded. No entries will be returned, and all entries, contents and ideas therein become the property of Steuart, Son & Co. Winners will be announced as soon as possible after the contest closes, and all prizes will be distributed immediately thereafter.
7—This contest is subject to all federal, state and local laws and regulations.

Sartorial Mystery

Why is a woman whose sock has

Regarded as a frump with a slattern's soul,
While a man with a gravy spot

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthown Torch)

Mrs. Bartholomew Mink, chairman of the women's division of the Democracy in Everyday Life League, entertained with a gold plate breakfast yesterday in the Babylonian room of the Hotel Swank, for visiting political bigwigs. Senator Theophilus Greatheart was the guest of honor.

Bedroom Soiree

Mr. Reginald Vanderpuffer, prominent member of the hunting set, has been on the sick list with grippe the last week at his country estate, Stagecrest. Among the socialites seen at his bedside have been Mr. and Mrs. Artemus Swagg, she in stunning lavendar tweeds; Mr. Rufus DeRaven and his daughter, Mrs. DeRaven Trill, the latter wearing a delectable chapeau ornamented with a large lacquered orange; Col. Bennington Beagle; and Mrs. Marcus Steppit in an eye-filling black and red ensemble.

The Music Lovers

Local devotees of music, swathed in mink and ermine, were out in full force at the concert given yesterday afternoon by the Tonsorial String Quartet in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Arabesque.

Mrs. Lucius Wadd, who entertained at a box party, arrived with her guests in the middle of the second number and succeeded in getting her party seated despite the ushers' protests.

Several large luncheons were given preceding the concert which delayed the arrival of many of the more important guests until the first movement of the Beethoven sonata was well under way. Among those who made majestic and determined entrances with parties were Mrs. Alonzo Bellweather, Mrs. Adolphus Schooner, Mrs. Livingston Sailem and Mrs. Gilbert Plush.

Among those occupying conspicious box seats were Mrs. Roswell Clymer, Mrs. Parmalee Newcome, Mrs. J. Harrison Peacock, Mrs. Horatius Preen, Mrs. Ethelbert Crash, Mrs. Otis Tinfoil, Mrs. Napoleon Popinjay and Mrs. Mortimer Mushroom.

Many cocktail parties were held following the concert, and as a result the ballroom was virtually emptied before the last number was completed.

Late February Portrait

Her winter hat has acquired a vague, dark unshapeliness, and is hopelessly clapped on and worn at what ever angle it happens to strike.

Her fur coat that looked so elegant and alluring, that was so softly flattering when she put it on last November, seems to hang on her like a weary sack, drooping in every line.

Her black crepe dress that appeared so sleek and chic last fall has taken on a depressing dullness, and suggests an old woman's Sunday best outfit.

Her suede shoes have a heavy rusty look; her black suede gloves give her hands the appearance of a bear's paws.

Her hair is stringing over her ears, and she keeps pinning up her "curls" at the back in a brave effort to go until the first of March without a new permanent.

She feels a little shoddy and down at the heels all over; unconsciously her mouth droops, her face falls, her shoulders sag; when she catches sight of herself in a downtown mirror she realizes that her skirt has a slight duck-tail in the back and that her nose is shiny. But she does not even get out her compact or straighten her posture. What's the use? . . . If she can just get home without running on to anyone she knows—well, it won't be long until she will be knocking everybody cold in a brand new spring outfit.

Great Beauties of Century Ago Influence Spring Coiffures

The spring coiffure above, by George, is an adaptation of the one in the center of the oval. The hair is combed directly off the forehead, then curled in a modified coronet roll ending in long soft curls in the back. For long hair this style is a natural. For short haired girls, extra curls can be worn with fresh flowers. These modern coiffures differ from those of a century ago only in their greater simplicity

Beautician Gives Advice On Make-up

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

AFTER running through collections of the newest advance styles in New York recently, it struck us that this spring might easily be a confusing one for the average woman. Silhouettes and influences are widely varied—colors are complicated as there are brilliant, strong tones as well as quiet pastels. Since most of us are wobbly about our particular "type," anyway, we decided to settle the cosmetic line-up for spring by taking the problem to Elizabeth Arden in person—one of the most energetic and thorough of New York's large sisterhood of beauty experts.

Here is Miss Arden's very practical advice. She urges "Settle your type in your own mind before you ever buy a stitch. Do this either by getting a color analysis from your favorite beauty counselor or by making up your mind to be a 'pastel' or a 'vivid' type this spring. If you are soft and feminine-looking and feel best in pastels, then chose foam green, blue haze or pink mist from among this season's color-affiliated accessories. These delicate tones can be repeated in fragile sky-blue pink cosmetic tints and can be combined with basic costume colors like gray, beige and springy browns. Even the coiffure should be appealingly soft and picturesque if these are your colors, and 'pastels' your forte."

Daring Make-Up

If you are the more courageous type of girl, say the young business executive who must attract admiring glances for her daring or distinction in dress, then here is Miss Arden's advice—although she herself is one of the most disarmingly feminine personalities in the beauty world. "Wear scandal red often, a bold blue streak or a yellow that yells. These are commanding sharp tones that will become your vivid coloring or give you courage if you are a timid soul, and they are excellent with basic navies or blacks."

For vivid, striking cosmetics to blend with these colors, a chic make-up has recently come out of Miss Arden's busy laboratories, which, incidentally, she herself was personally experimenting with, all the while looking like breakable china. This new Telecast make-up, in harmonies for blondes and brunettes, includes the same dramatic dark lipsticks, golden flecked eye shadow and iridescent skin tones that television stars wear for their broadcasts.

Mary Haworth's Mail

With Marriage Financially Unfeasible, Couple Struggles Against Temptation; Girl Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is this: I am going rather steadily with a young man employed in Government service. He does not make a salary that would permit us to consider marriage, and it will be a number of years before we can think about it. We are deeply in love and see each other constantly.

This association has been enjoyed for over a year and it is the old story—I cannot continue to keep a potential lover at arm's length. I am afraid the years ahead will ruin our feeling for each other. Yet I think it would be even more hazardous for our love if we gave our emotions free rein.

We have tried not to see each other, but invariably we find ourselves together again; back where we started. I would that I might, one bright morning soon, find in your answer sudden calm in a stormy sea.

BAFFLED.

Temptation Vanishes When Ignored

DEAR BAFFLED: You say you "cannot continue to keep a potential lover at arm's length." If that is your fundamental attitude, I doubt that any written words of mine can serve you as shield and buckler. However, let's look at the situation this way: supposing your young man were enamoured of a 12-cylinder car which he could not afford to purchase, would he attempt to persuade the retail agency that his passion to possess it entitled him to the use of it? Supposing you were familiar with a beautiful estate where you longed to live, yet lacked means to acquire it, would it occur to you to break in and take over? Would not the laws of society, as well as the imperious dictates of your own common sense or conscience, tell you that such conduct, if indulged, would border on lunacy?

There is something enfeebled about the character of individuals who cannot contain themselves within the boundaries of a traditional code of sound behavior; something infantile about the philosophy (if any) of persons who declare themselves unequal to the heroic task of shaping admirable accomplishments patiently and diligently; and something despicable about any human being who would assault a fellow creature's moral integrity in the name of love.

Flabby personalities such as those described are the product, nearly always, of second rate associations of a social and intellectual kind. It is their misfortune not to know, either in their circle of friends or between the covers of books, men and women whose lofty aims, highhearted endeavors and cumulative rewards constitute the most persuasive sermon on the benefits of rational austerity.

Your preoccupation with the idea of resisting temptation is more likely to prove your undoing than whatever actual temptation exists. The forces of evil are not overcome by consciously opposing one's will to their lure, but rather by turning one's shoulder to them and addressing one's self fully, confidently and serenely to considerations of good.

You and your admirer can, if you will, stem the dangerous tide of emotional experimentation by devoting your shared time and thought to constructive social activities and intellectual exercises of an invigorating and elevating kind. If you fail to set him such an example, or he fails to follow, don't salve your conscience by saying that it could not be done. Face the fact that you weren't willing to make the effort.

M. H.

Reformed Philanderer Champions Chastity

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The other day your column carried a letter from "Unsophisticated,"— a young lady of 27 who complains of men's "dishonorable" addresses to her. Perhaps the young lady has had the misfortune to run into a type of man whom I know well. He is young, about 30, pleasing to women (apparently) and with plenty of money to spend. He rode into Washington on the coat tails of the New Deal and landed an excellent job.

He found that most of the women he met were yearning to be loved and so he obliged. But after a while he tired of this easy prey and went after different game—the more charming girls of the "hands-off" type. He would select his intended victim and try to win her. Perhaps it would be a month or two months before he succeeded. He would be faithful to her for a time, before passing on to new conquests. Sometimes he carried on two affairs simultaneously. This went on for years.

Then (this is a "story from life"), a new girl was assigned to his office and he started after her. She was about 10 years his junior, very attractive and quite taken by his attentions. In short time she weakened and became another victim. But for some reason he did not tire of her . . . He grew to love her, asked her to marry him, she accepted and in due course a child was born to them.

Now the man prays that this baby boy will not inherit the father's weakness; that he will grow up to be a finer man. How do I know? Because I am the man. And I hope there are not many like me. I hope that "Unsophisticated" will hold out for a better man; that she will be strong enough to resist the "strictly dishonorable" attentions of rascals like myself.

REFORMED RASCAL.

Women Crave Appreciation, Not Admiration

Many Let Selves Go Because They Think No One Cares

By Ida Jean Kain

TRADITIONALLY, women are supposed to be vain creatures. But what they really crave is appreciation, not admiration. If a woman were set down on a desert island equipped with a beauty salon staffed by robots who did excellent work but could neither think nor speak, she would pay it one visit out of curiosity. After that, she probably wouldn't go near the place. Why bother? There would be nobody around to care how she looked.

All too many women let themselves go because they imagine that nobody cares how they look. If that is your state of mind and you can afford to do it, hie yourself to the nearest beauty and exercise salon and let the experts take you in hand. They will study your facial contours so that the most flattering coiffeur may be chosen. They will scold you for failure to take better care of your skin.

The director of the body conditioning department will register personal concern over your weight, measurements and posture. At least once a week, an instructor will stand over you as you perform the exercises that will give you a more youthful figure and posture. If you belong to a class, you will compare notes with your companions of the exercise mat and will be cheered up considerably whenever you make better progress than the rest. Perhaps you will be held up as a good example—or bad! You will be paying for it, but you will be getting the appreciation your efforts warrant, and the psychological value is not to be estimated.

The majority of you, however, will have to take yourselves to task. It will help you to tuck away in your mind this thought: The friends and family who would not dream of hurting you by telling you that anything is wrong with the way you look, will quickly tell you how much better you are looking! There are no sweeter words than "You are looking simply marvelous."

You can do a very thorough job of finding out for yourself what is wrong. And, with or without supervision, you will have to do the work in making improvements. But if you would like the vicarious experience of salon exercise, do these favorites from the beauty bazaars along Fifth Avenue:

1. Posture Corrective

POSITION: Lying on the floor on the back, hands on the shoulders with the elbows shoulder-level on the floor at the sides, knees flexed and soles of feet together, outer edges of feet resting on floor near buttocks, entire back, including back of neck, pressed as closely against the floor as possible.

MOVEMENT: Without letting the back rise off the floor, and keeping soles of feet together, try to slide feet down floor until the legs are straight.

2. For a Slim Waist

POSITION: Still on back on floor, hands clasped and extended up on floor overhead, legs together and straight down. Have back as flat on floor as possible.

MOVEMENT: Holding this position, arc the body sidewards on the floor, first in one direction, then the other.

Film Star Styles May Start New 'Mauve Decade'

Hollywood—Another "mauve decade" may be setting in if the wardrobes of three Warner stars are indication.

Orry-Kelly says it's a shade for blondes, brunettes and titians. In fact, mauve is among the few pastels that flatter all.

Priscilla Lane, vivacious blonde, likes the shade for wide-trousered linen slacks with a surprising tomato silk blouse and white linen bolero top.

Good Manners Aid Popularity

A DINNER date which might have been the beginning of a delightful friendship—and she spoils it all by her careless manners!

For a girl posted on etiquette does not embarrass her escort by spitting fruit seeds into her spoon. She knows it's correct to drop seeds, fish bones inconspicuously into her cupped hand.

Nor does a well-mannered girl eat peas with a spoon, drop olive pits into the ash tray, or lay her crumpled napkin on the table before others have finished.

The right way is to eat peas with a fork, put olive pits on your bread-and-butter or dinner plate, discard your napkin only when every one is leaving the table.

It's little things like these that reveal your background to others. But you needn't fear the impression you make if you know etiquette—and the rules are easy to learn.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Etiquette for Every Day" to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Miss Debutante Discovers
THE SMARTNESS OF SIMPLICITY

It's a natural, lovely sort of simplicity that Spring 1940 brings. One that will make you all the prettier. Dresses have lost their unkempt frills. Jewelry is plain and exquisitely designed. Hats hug your head (we can hear your husband's fervent thanks). Nothing is artificial, but a well-bred natural grace pervades, with more attention paid to finer fabrics, well cut lines, accessories that are an integral part of the costume. Simplicity hits its stride in Lansburgh's Spring collections. Do see them!

Simplicity Is Youth for there is the charm of a sixteen-year-old in shining dickies . . . in lower heels . . . in "little suits."

Mrs. Roosevelt's Visit Brightens Life in Florida

Some Who Planned to Leave Resort Will Stay Since First Lady's Arrival; Greta Garbo Interests Britons at Nassau

By Hope Ridings Miller

THEY DO SAY Mrs. Roosevelt's visit to Florida has added impetus to resort life that was fast becoming a negative quantity. Southern vacationists who were planning to return home because of chill winds swirling around Miami have decided to stick it out now that the First Lady has brought the resort into the national spotlight.

HOPE R. MILLER

Rumors around Washingon had it that Mrs. Roosevelt was going down for a rest and had taken the Ross Judson estate overlooking the sea at Golden Beach just because that happened not to be far from her most recent speaking engagement at a Florida college. Photographers don't seem to be giving her much chance to rest but at least her calendar is not so crowded as it usually is at this time of the year.

Reports coming up from Miami have it, however, that she is receiving friends daily and accepting requests for interviews right and left—even though she is supposed to be off the record. Truth is, Mrs. Roosevelt has always found it difficult to turn anybody down.

I've heard tell that a couple of Christmases ago, her secretary, Miss Melvina Scheider, and the White House social secretary, Mrs. James M. Helm, put their heads together and decided they would ask the First Lady for a very special Christmas present—one which would bring them more pleasure through the whole year than anything else she could give them.

"Why, of course," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "Just what is it both of you would like?"

"We would like more than anything else in the world," averred Mrs. Helm, "for you to learn to say, 'No,' Mrs. Roosevelt."

News Notes From Nassau

From a friend vacationing in Nassau comes news that the visit of Greta Garbo and Dr. B Gaylord Hauser there has revolutionized society. Staid Britishers who live there the year around and rarely pay attention to the goings and comings of visitors were as curious as anybody to see the motion picture star and her current flame.

Virtually everybody angled by every well-known method to get an invitation to some of the small and select get-togethers planned for the visitors by their hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Axel L. Wenner-Gren, whose home "Shangri-la" on Hog Island is quite a social center. Incidentally, Mr. Wenner-Gren, the Swedish millionaire, is well known in Washington and was recently around these parts. He spent most of his time in Baltimore, however.

Back to the Bahamas—the outstanding entertainment of Nassau's big season will be The Gala, sponsored by the Bahamas citizens' war relief committee for the benefit of the lord mayor's Red Cross fund, to be held at the fashionable Emerald Beach Club on Tuesday evening, March 5.

Royal Film To Be Shown

There will be a concert, dancing and a buffet supper, all under the management of Mrs. Percy Malcolm, who heads the committee in charge. And as an additional drawing card there will be the showing of colored motion pictures of the royal progress of their majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, through the United States and Canada. This film recently was shown here at the British Embassy and will be sent on to England later.

SOCIETY GO ROUND: Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock is at the Plaza Hotel in New York . . . Maj. Gen. Allen W. Clarence Hewes Returns From Florida Ahead of Schedule to Get Warm

A REFUGEE FROM FLORIDA is Clarence Hewes, who has come North a week or so ahead of schedule to get warm. It ought to be some comfort to Communists and those who stay in town all winter to know that Palm Beachers are shivering indoors as well as out.

Mr. Hewes decided that he could at least be warm in his home on Massachusetts avenue, so has returned from a stay with Capt. and Mrs. John Gibbons, of Palm Beach and Washington. He started being cold when he arrived in New Orleans in January, having naturally taken no heavy clothes with him. Later he was a passenger on a wonderful yacht going from Miami to Palm Beach. The trip was so rough that when the guests sat down to the first luncheon on board all the china was thrown into their laps. From then on they lost interest in eating, which was perhaps fortunate.

ELLEN FLOWERREE, debutante niece of Mr. Hewes, will remain at her home in New Orleans until the early part of April, when she will return to Washington. Ellen was queen of a large Mardi Gras ball there and her costume had a train which weighed 47 pounds. And the committee didn't allow train bearers, either.

Despite the cold, a sizable group of hardy Washingtonians is sticking it out in Florida and having one of the gayest seasons in years, reports Mr. Hewes. One of the largest and most sumptuous houses there is that leased by the Special Assistant to the Secretary of State and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, who are entertaining the former's son-in-law, Senator Millard Tydings, and his two daughters, Mrs. Tydings and Mrs. Aldace Walker. Mr. Hewes also saw Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, but not her house-guest, Justice Frank Murphy, who is hiding out from social affairs to get a complete rest.

ARTHUR BRADLEY CAMPBELL has lengthened his Florida sojourn into several weeks, but will return here to spend the spring. There's a possibility that his two cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, may join him here. Since turning down the chance to make a debut under Mr. Campbell's auspices, as they were too depressed by the war, the girls have been in Chicago. They came to this country when war broke out from England, where they lived for a number of years.

TWO OF THE THREE Misses Patten—Mary and Helen—were in Palm Beach for a stay with the Walter Schoellkopfs, both of whom were down with heavy colds at the time. The Misses Patten have since moved on to Miami Beach. Horton Schoellkopf, who recently passed his exams for the foreign service, is dividing his time between that resort and Palm Beach.

At the horse races in Miami Mr. Hewes ran into the young Peter Belins, son and daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin, of Washington. They are living in Miami, where Mr. Belin has been transferred by Pan-American Airlines.

MRS. MATTHEW HANNA is in town for a week's visit and will be at the Anchorage starting today. She has been staying with Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor at her home on Tracy place. After living in Washington for several years Mrs. Hanna is now making her home in New York.

WHETHER THE Women's Press Club committe for the stunt party March 9 decided that if an Astor was invited a Vanderbilt should be represented, or whether they felt that the wife of Rhode Island's Governor should be asked, as she is such help to her husband is not known—but anyway, Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt will be here for the dinner. Mrs. Vincent Astor also has been asked.

IN THESE DAYS of uncertain transatlantic sailings, Mrs. Ian Wilson-Young, who was until Wednesday Mrs. Charlotte Brown Nast, sent her announcements in a batch to New York for her mother to mail. Received here yesterday, they announce that after April 1 the Wilson-Youngs will be at home at 3 Smith Square, which is an old part of London near the houses of Parliament.

Alice Annie Hayes Is Wed To Horace Richard Higgins

Miss Alice Annie Hayes became the bride of Horace Richard Higgins yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Ninth Street Christian Church with the Rev. Clifford Jope officiating. She is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Winfield Hayes. Mr. Higgins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Higgins.

The bride wore a white satin gown with a finer tip veil trimmed with seed pearls and orange blossoms. She wore a diamond necklace and brooch given her by her late aunt, Mrs. David J. Ullman. Her flowers were white roses and lilies of the valley surrounding an orchid.

Mrs. Charles R. Bealle served as matron of honor for her sister. She was gowned in pastel blue chiffon trimmed with rows of lace and fashioned on Colonial lines. From a crown of sweetheart roses fell a nose length veil and she carried pink roses tied with blue ribbon. Another sister, Mrs. James Cox, wore pale pink chiffon made on the same lines. Her veil was trimmed with forget-me-nots and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and forget-me-nots tied with pink ribbon.

James T. Brooks served as best man and ushers were Joseph Hamilton, Reece Achenbach, George McNeil, Frank H. Carter, Raymond Letner, and Ivan Letner.

There was a reception at the home of the bride following the wedding. Mrs. Hayes wore a black velvet costume with a white gardenia. Mrs. Higgins wore a powder blue lace gown and a cluster of gardenias.

When the couple returns from a motor trip to New Orleans and Florida they will live at 3028 Porter street. Out of town guests included Major and Mrs. Charles I. Bazire, of Leesburg, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gates, Mr. and Mrs. John Guessner, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gates, Mrs. Frances Kerr, Charles Kerr, Joan Kerr, and John Phillips all of Annapolis.

Prettymans and Awalts Mark Partnership as Hosts at Party

Music and Tea Provided Guests At Holiday Celebration at Hotel 2400; Palms and Spring Flowers Decorate Room

ONE OF THE GAYER fetes yesterday was the party given by Mr. and Mrs. E. Barrett Prettyman and Mr. and Mrs. F. Lloyd Awalt at Hotel 2400 from 5 until 7 o'clock. Although the holiday was a good excuse for the party, the real reason was to celebrate the fourth year of a partnership between the hosts.

Music as well as tea were promised on the invitations so guests arrived expecting a merry party and were not disappointed. The hostesses received their guests together. For the most part, the hosts mingled with their guests, joining the receiving line now and then.

Mrs. Prettyman wore a tea frock with a long black skirt and scarlet blouse trimmed in gold. A corsage of Talisman roses completed the ensemble. Mrs. Awalt wore a crepe frock in strawberry pink with a cluster of violets and lilies of the valley completing the ensemble.

Palms were used in a profusion about the room, where a string orchestra played. Bowls of punch were placed here and there. A large tea table was centered with a silver bowl holding a shower of spring blossoms.

Mrs. Prettyman as well as Mrs. Awalt, had asked a group of her friends to preside at the tea table and assist generally. Each of these had been presented a corsage of gardenias. In Mrs. Prettyman's group were Mrs. Parke P. Jones, Mrs. William King, Mrs. Clarence M. Charest, Mrs. Richard Doyle, Mrs. Karl Loos, Mrs. Harold A. Brooke, Mrs. Gilmer Corner, r., and Mrs. William F. Burdick.

Mrs. Awalt's assistants were Mrs. Frank Yates., Mrs. Herbert Copeland Jones, Mrs. Paul Cherry, Mrs. Elmer Kayseer, Mrs. Clark Ober, Mrs. H. Dolan Awalt and Miss Leonore Haslup.

Frances Kunna Becomes Bride

Looking quite unruffled, and not at all like one who had to change her wedding plans at the eleventh hour, Miss Frances Rita Kunna became the bride of John Thomas Madigan, of Baltimore, yesterday at noon in the Church of St. John the Evangelist in Forest Glen, Md.

Failing to apply for the license in time, the couple were forced to be married in Maryland rather than the District where they had issued a large number of invitations, naming a local church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph John Kunna. Mr. Madigan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Madigan, of Dunkirk, N. Y. The Rev. Edward Malloy officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a costume suit of slate blue wool with matching accessories and a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. John Scully, wearing a navy blue ensemble, served as matron of honor for her sister. Mr. Scully, of East Orange, N. J., served as best man.

A wedding breakfast for members of the family and out-of-town guests was given at the Shoreham Hotel. After their wedding trip the couple will make their home at 28 East Preston street, Baltimore.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended George Washington University where Mr. Madigan received his A. B. degree.

Justice Letts And Wife Fete Niece, Fiance

Mr. and Mrs. Odum Hosts at Luncheon Honoring Bridal Pair

Justice and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts entertained at a buffet supper last evening in honor of their niece, Miss Dorothy Letts, and Ollie R. McGuire, jr., who will be married tomorrow at the Church of the Covenant.

Spring blossoms decked the table where an ample buffet was placed. Guests, for the most part members of the wedding party, had been asked following the rehearsal. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Madison L. Letts and her daughter, Marguerite, here from St. Joseph, Mo. Among the relatives attending were Mr. and Mrs. F. Henry Jones and Mr. and Mrs. William Guthrie. Col. and Mrs. O. R. McGuire were also there.

A luncheon party given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Odum, jr., both of whom will be in the wedding party, kept the prospective bride and bridegroom on the go yesterday. Mrs. Odum will be an attendant and Mr. Odum will serve as best man.

Guests attending the party at the Washington Golf and Country Club included Miss Marguerite Letts, Miss Grace McGuire, sister of the bridegroom-elect, who will be maid of honor, and the attendants, Mrs. Alfred M. Houghton, Miss Bambie McKenna and Miss Jane Ramseyer. Ushers attending were Thomas Clagett, David Letts, Ralph Quinter, jr., George Monk, Robert Weppner and John M. Lynham. Additional guests were Mrs. Quinter, Mrs. Monk and Mr. Houghton.

This evening Miss Bambie McKenna will entertain at a buffet supper for members of the wedding party.

Col. Stokes Gives Cocktail Party

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. George F. Stokes entertained 50 guests at cocktails before the tea dance at the Army-Navy Country Club yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Stokes, who received with the colonel, was gowned in a street-length black crepe frock accented with lingerie touches of white pique and topped her outfit with a dusty pink veiled hat.

Guests included Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Emile P. Moses, of Quantico, Va.; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams, Col. Curtis, Col. and Mrs. Clifton Cates, Col. and Mrs. R. E. Knapp, Col. and Mrs. J. W. Rep. Voorhis Addresses Jewish Veterans' Ladies

By Jessie Ash Arndt
Post Club Editor

It is important to make distinction between those who seek the strengthening of this country's democratic institutions and who believe in their ultimate validity and those who take advantage of liberty and democratic civil rights to promote a totalitarian system of government, Representative Jerry Voorhis, of California, declared last night.

Addressing the Washington's birthday banquet of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Jewish War Veterans at the Shoreham Hotel, he said the task now before the Nation was "to show that a free people can meet the problem of the machine age, namely, to eliminate unemployment. If we do this, our example will be a powerful force in the world, against dictatorships."

Representative Voorhis prefaced his allusion to the United States' place in the international picture today with a discussion of the influence the young Republic exerted in its early history.

"The element of real greatness in Washington's character and career was his willingness to throw his lot with the American cause although he had everything to lose personally," said Representative Voorhis. "By his leadership, he made it possible to establish a Republic and a government by the people. Although no direct influence was exerted then by America on other nations, her example was a great force in the growth of democratic forms of government abroad.

"The ideal of the Founders was deeper than that of mere government, it was to be found in a desire that opportunity be given all sorts of people, those of every class and race, to develop freely and to progress as far as they could."

Representative Voorhis was introduced by Mrs. Benjamin Segal, chairman of the banquet, after the president, Mrs. Mitchell L. Novak, had opened the program. Mrs. Falk Harmel, organizer and first president of the auxiliary offered the invocation, and Mrs. Israel Reiskin, also a past president, spoke briefly.

The singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" was led by Mrs. Herman W. Hertzberg, who also sang, as a solo, "God Bless America," accompanied by Mrs. Jack Sperling. Ramona Wiegand recited "I Am the Constitution."

Mrs. Segal was assisted in arrangements for the banquet, the first such affair given by the auxiliary, by Mrs. Sidney B. Diamond, national vice president for the Southern region and a past president of the local organization.

A large picture of George Washington, loaned by Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, hung behind the speakers' table, with the American flag and the auxiliary and post colors at either side. Miniature American flags were favors at each place, held by little pipe-stem figures, dressed in blue caps and capes, the uniform of auxiliary members. All these favors for the 300 guests were made for the occasion by the women of the committee.

The speakers' table was lighted with red, white and blue candles arranged in antique silver candlesticks, similar to those at Mount Vernon, and which were heirlooms in the family of Mrs. Novak and Mrs. Diamond.

At the head table, in addition to those on the program, were Commander Benjamin Aronsohn of the post, and Mrs. Aronsohn; Samuel Rose, national radio chairman; Mrs. Rose, Dr. Ivy Pelzman, national rehabilitation chairman and first commander of the post; Joseph F. Barr, national committeeman and past commander of the post, and Mrs. Barr, past president of the Auxiliary; Mr. Harmel, Mr. Segal, Mr. Novak, Mr. Diamond, Mr. Reiskin, Mrs. Maurice Folsom, senior vice president, Mr. Folsom; Mrs. Israel Orlove, treasurer, Mr. Orlove; Mrs. Harry Cohen, junior vice president, Mr. Cohen; Mrs. George Jelinek, a cochairman of the banquet, and Mr. Jelinek.

Historian Feted By Daughters Of Confederacy

Mrs. William Cabell Flournoy, of Lexington, Va., historian-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy was guest of honor yesterday afternoon at a luncheon given by the local division of the society at the Mayflower Hotel. There were 40 members present, including Mrs. Emma Triepel, who is also a founder of the National League of American Pen Women.

Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., president of the District Division, presided at the luncheon and presented Miss Katherine Minton Wootten, a past state historian who introduced Mrs. Flournoy. The historian-general, who is custodian of the Lee Chapel in Lexington, talked on the work of her department and outlined the study of historic southern seaports which is being continued as the historical project this season.

Miss Wootten also introduced as an honor guest, Mrs. William A. Coleman, of Alexandria, historian.

Other special guests, presented by Mrs. Vann, were past presidents of the local division, Mrs. Albion W. Tuck, Mrs. Richard A. Allen, and Mrs. Ralph Stevens Pendexter, and two chapter historians, Mrs. H. M. Hoffheims, of J. E. B. Stuart Chapter and Mrs. Adolphus W. Wells, of Williams Chapter.

Series of Parties Are Planned In Honor of Miss Guthrie

A series of interesting affairs will be given next week in honor of Miss Anne Guthrie, who has just returned from the Philippines, where she has served for the past five years as executive secretary of the Y. W. C. A. She will come to Washington tonight to be the guest of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. George Rikover.

Mrs. John Parker Van Zandt (Lydia Van Hagan Van Zandt, widely known lecturer on current events) has issued cards for a tea for Miss Guthrie Sunday afternoon at her apartment at the Westchester. Their friendship began in Manila, where Mrs. Van Zandt lived for eight months, and, at Miss Guthrie's request, conducted an international affairs round table at the Y. W. C. A. The Filipino women had just won the vote, and the object of the course was to arouse their interest in international as well as national affairs.

Miss Guthrie, considered one of the best interpreters of world fellowship in the Y. W. C. A., will discuss "The Role of the Y. W. C. A. In a World Crisis" at a luncheon of the world fellowship committee Tuesday at 12:30 in Barker Hall. Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, of the national interpretation and support committee, is in charge.

Monday night, Miss Gurthrie will address a dinner meeting at which she will tell her experiences in the Orient and tell of the Y. W. C. A. in Manila. It is maintains two residences for girls, an employment department, conducts lectures, programs on child guidance for some 400 mothers who attend home-making classes.

Miss Guthrie has also traveled in China, Manchukuo, Korea and Japan in the past year. Two years ago she represented the United States at a League of Nations' Conference on "Trafffic In Women and Children." Prior to her work in the Orient she attained international background in South America as continental adviser to the Y. W. C. A.

Before her foreign service Miss Guthrie was executive secretary of the Metropolitan Y. W. C. A. in Chicago.

Congressional Club To Be Garner Host

The Congressional Club today will hold its annual reception in honor of Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President. The executive board of the club will be in the receiving line.

Mrs. James Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Mrs. Peter Gerry, of Rhode Island, who are past presidents, will assist at the tea table with Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Paul Kilday, Mrs. Albert Thomas, Mrs. Richard Kleberg, Mrs. Luther Johnson, Mrs. George Mahon, Mrs. Wright Patman, Mrs. Nat Patton, Mrs. Ed Gossett, Mrs. James P. Buchanan and Mrs. James P. Buchanan, jr., all of Texas.

A dinner dance and cabaret will be held by the club on Tuesday evening at 8.

Matrons, Patrons Of Eastern Star Give Silver Tea

Several hundred guests attended the silver tea given yesterday afternoon at the Eastern Star Clubhouse, 2600 Sixteenth street, site for the proposed temple, by the Matrons and Patrons of 1940. The matrons, dressed in colonial costume, acted as hostesses, with the patrons as hosts, but the latter declined to "go colonial" in attire.

Mrs. Minnie J. Burdine, grand matron of the grand chapter of the District, wearing a peach-colored satin gown with green panniers, received, with Edward C. Steagall, the grand patron.

Flags and flowers decorated the dining room on the second floor of the clubhouse where the long tea table was set, and patriotic colors were carried out in the refreshments.

There was music during the afternoon by a trio including Ted Lewis, past grand patron, pianist; Chester Hutchison, also a past grand patron, violinist, and Ludwig Manoly, patron of Federal Chapter, 'cellist.

Hebrew Aid Plans Dance

The Hebrew Sisters Aid Circle will give its annual dance and card party on Wednesday night at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. The proceeds from this affair will be used in its work, which is giving financial assistance to families in distress.

Pen Women Offer Sugar-Coated Course in Current Literature To Those Too Busy to Delve Through New Volumes

TWO MEMBERS of the District Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, catering to the popular idea of gaining a "conversational knowledge" of new books which one may not have time or inclination to read, have organized a Friday Morning Book Club. Those who enroll, for a small fee, may attend meetings at the Grafton Hotel, where new books will be reviewed for them by Mrs. Lyle Campbell and Mrs. Theodore Tiller, who will also present authors, from time to time, in reviews of their own books.

The book review hour is designed for busy women who want a short cut to their literature. Today, at 11, Mrs. Tiller and Mrs. Campbell will review "The Heritage of America" and "Sun and Storm" and will present as guest author, Jenny Ballou, whose new book is "Period Piece" or "The Life and Time of Ella Wheeler Wilcox."

THIS BRINGS US to a note or two about Mrs. Ballou, who manages to combine a literary career with that of wife, mother and home maker. She is the wife of Harold Ballou, of the Farm Security Administration, former professor of Spanish at Michigan, Florida and Cornell Universities and onetime chief of the International News Service in Spain.

During their five-year residence in Spain, Mrs. Ballou collected material for her first published book, "Spanish Prelude," which won the Houghton Mifflin $1,000 fellowship prize in 1936, and was hailed as one of the outstanding books of the year.

CONCERT TODAY—Rose d'Amore (Mrs. Lowell Mason) will be presented this morning as the featured artist in the annual concert arranged for members of the Woman's Alliance of All Soul's Church. She will play three movements of Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata. A luncheon will follow the musicale.

MORE ABOUT MUSIC—The Segovia Society will have its first meeting of the season, a musicale and reception, tomorrow night at 8:30. It will be at the society's headquarters, 2000 N street, with Mme. Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, and honorary president, attending. Artists for the evening will include Alba Rosa Vietor, violinist; Carolyn Schoenthal, soprano, and Winifred Houghton, who will present South American folk songs, with guitar accompaniment.

MARKING THE DAY—Washington Birthday favors decorated the trays of patients at the United States Naval Hospital yesterday. Miss Nell Ennis, of the Red Cross, saw that there was one for every tray.

Two groups which have frequently provided cheery little novelties to the hospital for special days are the Junior Red Cross of Allentown, Pa., and the District Vocational School. For Valentine's Day this year, the Vocational School sent red cellophane bags, the pupils had made, decorated with cupids and filled with candy hearts.

WESTERN ALUMNAE—Mrs. Emily J. D. Goldthwaite, of the New York branch of the Western College Alumnae Association, will address a meeting of the Washington branch Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. H. Collingwood, 1234 Crittenden street, at 3:30.

Mrs. Collingwood will be assisted by Mrs. Peter M. Sievierski, president of the local group, and Mrs. Stanley Cook.

FORM DISTRICT COUNCIL—A district council of Credit Women's Breakfast Clubs, headed by Mrs. Martha Bean Gleason, president of the local club, was organized this week at the annual convention of the National Retail Credit Association, in Baltimore. Other officers are Dorothy Breen, of Reading, Pa., vice president; Agnes Moyer, of Reading, treasurer, and Ruth Adams Robinson, of Washington, corresponding secretary.

The district includes Washington, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania—the other clubs will have to get up early to beat Washington's which always has its breakfast at breakfast time and adjourns so that everybody can get to work on the dot.

DR. F. M. EDWARDS' DISCOVERY FOR CONSTIPATION
Benefits Nation of Sufferers!
COLUMBUS, OHIO: For over 20 years Dr. F. M. Edwards (widely known physician) successfully treated scores of patients for constipation and the headaches, lack of energy and mental dullness which often result.
This wise Doctor knew liver bile must flow freely every day into your intestines or fatty foods can't be properly digested and you may become constipated. So he kept this in mind when he perfected his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.
Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful, yet they assure gentle, thorough bowel movements and ALSO help stimulate bile flow. Test their goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

'Grow in the Appreciation of Freedom,' Dr. Marvin Urges 321 G. W. U. Graduates

President Cloyd H. Marvin of George Washington University last night handed certificates and diplomas to 321 graduates of the university's seven schools and colleges and charged them to "grow in the understanding of justice, in the exercise of strength and creativeness, and in the appreciation of freedom."

The occasion was the 119th winter convocation of the university in Constitution Hall, where more than 3,500 friends and relatives gathered.

John Charles Thomas, Metropolitan Opera barytone, gave a half-hour concert in place of the oratory usually associated with commencement exercises. Between numbers, he seized the opportunity to "make my first commencement address," but in accordance with his promise kept it brief.

Sings Three Encores

Thomas combined congratulations to the graduates with an explanation of one of his songs, "Il Tartaglia," from "Le Maschere," by Mascagni, a humorous burlesque of an Italian sheriff with an impediment in his speech.

He also sang two arias by Verdi and Massenet, "Ye Banks and Braes," "The Minstrel Boy," Frank Brides' "E'en as a Lovely Flower," and "Gwine to Hebb'n," by Jacques Wolfe, as well as three encores.

President Marvin awarded 145 certificates in course to candidates presented by the dean of the Junior College, and 176 degrees to candidates presented by the deans of Columbian College and the schools of law, engineering, pharmacy, education, and government.

Urges Social Understanding

In his charge to the graduates he told them they have "greater opportunity for the selfish investment of personal and social ideals than any persons who have ever lived," because they are entering "a fecund world whose potentialities for social invention are the greatest in history."

He urged them to think of "even-handed justice among men," not to confuse social sympathy with justice or substitute it for judgment, and not to "accept sentimentality as a substitute for social understanding."

He reminded them that "in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," and cautioned them not to "put away this basis of strength . . . and espouse the false doctrine of security."

He told them their task is to preserve freedom, to "revivify our hearts' concern with what independence, freedom and liberty mean."

The names of the graduates follow:

Order of Purple Heart Banquets

Her eyes brimming with tears, a white-haired Washington woman stood at attention with 62 war veterans to receive anew the decoration of the Purple Heart, in ceremonies at the Mayflower last night.

She was Mrs. Nora Warnecke, of 2224 M street northwest, who came there to receive the medal for her husband, Francis Warnecke, who was wounded in action with the Fifth Marines at Belleau Wood, and who died here three years ago.

The ceremony was the fifth annual redecoration for wearers of the Purple Heart, held after a banquet of the Mount Vernon Chapter, No. 22, and National Headquarters of the Military Order of the Purple Heart.

Washington's farewell address was cited by Representative Brewster (Republican), of Maine, as a guide for America in the present world conflict.

Child Home Segregation Hampered

Physicians Report Facilities Lacking To Set Apart Infectious Cases

The Receiving Home's lack of facilities for proper segregation of children with communicable diseases was found to be one of its outstanding deficiencies, in an investigation by two Health Department physicians.

A complete report of their findings on the institution's medical services will be given Health Officer George C. Ruhland today.

Dr. Carl C. Dauer, epidemiologist, and Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of the bureau of medical and sanitary inspection of the schools, were assigned by Dr. Ruhland to make the survey following an order from Commissioner George E. Allen.

Infirmary Survey Planned

Meanwhile, Dr. Edgar Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, planned to assign staff physicians to a medical survey of the 130 in the infirmary at the Home for Aged and Infirm.

Both institutions are under investigation by a House District subcommittee, headed by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland. At recent public hearings D'Alesandro called on the Commissioners to proceed immediately with remedial action at the institutions without waiting for additional funds from Congress.

The report of the two Health Department officials is expected to substantiate findings by social service experts who have repeatedly recommended a new and modern plant for the Receiving Home. The shortcomings at the home are in the physical plant, and not so much in the medical services offered, it was learned the physicians will state.

Two Doctors Available

The home is serviced by two physicians, one of whom is a woman. According to the report, they are available six days a week and are on call on Sunday. One of the investigating physicians said this situation was "adequate." He said when a child is brought to the home he is immediately inspected by the attendant, and if any eruption in the skin or any other indication of a communicable disease is noticed the physician is called at once.

The physicians also found there has been no outbreak of an acute communicable disease for some time at the institution.

Besides an examination of the infirmary patients at the Home for Aged, present plans are to examine all inmates who aid in serving meals at the institutions.

D'Alesandro yesterday said he planned to continue his hearings sometime next week.

Revised Hatch Bill May Be Offered Today

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico was scheduled last night to lay before the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee today a redraft of the Hatch Act to cover thousands more of public employes, including the personnel of the District Government.

A special meeting of the committee has been called for that purpose this morning, Senator George, of Georgia, committee chairman, said.

Senator Hatch, whose original act prevents officers of the Federal Government from taking an active part in political campaigns, now proposes to place similar restrictions on employes of State governments who receive some, or all, of their pay checks from Federal loans, or grants.

The New Mexico Senator is said to have agreed to an amendment restoring to Federal employes in or near Washington their former right to serve as mayors or town councilmen in neaby Maryland and Virginia communities in which they live. Such a right was previously allowed by the Civil Service Commission.

Virginians Celebrate in Colonial Manner

Three Faiths Join to Do Honor to Washington

Clergymen of three faiths yesterday recalled with gratitude the first President's devotion to religious liberty in a Washington Birthday broadcast sponsored by the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital.

The Rev. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, said Washington understood that "we must know each other if we are to solve our problems."

Washington "Man of God"

A rediscovery of the ideals of Washington and his fellow founders of the Republic, especially their belief in fraternity and religious liberty, must take place in America, he declared.

Washington should be remembered, above all, as "a man of God," said the Rev. Patrick J. O'Connor, of Catholic University.

The many Catholics who have fought in defense of America's liberties, like Washington, have been ready to offer their lives "that this precious land might continue to harbor those who recognize God as their Creator and the source of all their rights," he said.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, quoted from Washington's famous message to the Jewish community of Newport, R. I.:

"It is now no more that toleration is spoken of as if it were by the indulgence of one class of people that another enjoyed the exercise of their inherent natural right . . . The Government of the United States gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance."

Founders Firm in Faith

The Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, who introduced the speakers, said the founders of the Republic were "actuated by a firm faith in God and by a respect for the Christian virtues in their application to public life."

He recalled Washington's description of religion as the "indispensable support" of a nation's political life.

$100,000 Gift Cuts Deficit For Sibley

Missionary Society Gives D. C. Hospital Largest Donation In Its History

Dr. Lewis H. Taylor, president of Sibley Hospital, announced last night that the Woman's Home Missionary Society has donated $100,000 to reduce the hospital's indebtedness.

The contribution, the largest ever made by the society, cuts the indebtedness of the $1,800,000 institution to less than $200,000, Dr. Taylor said. The society, a subsidiary of the Methodist Episcipal Church, stated that "plans are under way" for another contribution in the near future.

Mary Holmes Given Plaque

The hospital awarded a plaque at the banquet to Dr. Mary Holmes, Washington physician, upon her retirement from active practice. The plaque cited her long service to the hospital and the city.

The letter from the Missionary Society, bearing the notification of the gift, congratulated Dr. Taylor for "the splendid piece of work which has been done . . . not only in the hospital itself, but in the Nurse Training School." The letter added:

"This has been reported to us not only by board members who have been at the hospital at different times during the last few years, but by persons living in the city of Washington who, until recently, had not known anything about Sibley. The reports from professional men of our own church have been especially gratifying."

Started in 1894

Sibley Hospital is one of about 90 institutions—hospitals, schools and colleges—operated by local boards of directors under the Missionary Society. Started in 1894 at a frame house in the 1100 block of North Capitol street, the hospital now contains 360 beds and last year treated more than 10,000 patients. More than 2,000 babies were delivered and more than 5,000 operations were performed in 1939.

Dr. Taylor pointed out that the hospital has been entirely self-supporting except for an annual contribution of about $4,000 from the Missionary Society.

Capital News In Brief

Bandits Take $122

Two guns outbid a meat cleaver any time, Simon Kimche decided last night and two bandits walked from his liquor and grocery store at 609 Maryland avenue southwest richer by $122.

The men, both tall, one thin, the other fat, walked into his store, Kinche reported, leveled revolvers and said, "Okay; gimme the dough." They rifled the cash register and Kimche's pockets, while he stood handling a cleaver, and fired one shot into the ceiling when he broke away and ran into an adjoining room.

Abe Silverman, 51, of 415 M street northwest, lost $23 to three colored men who threw him to the pavement near his home. A colored man snatched the pocketbook, containing $6.50, carried by Clara Bauer, 21, of 119 Massachusetts avenue northwest, in the 200 block of H street northwest.

Capt. Harold A. White, explorer and world traveler, relates his fascinating experiences in this White Horse series. Follow it week by week.

SCOTCH WITH A STORY

There is no end of wonders in Northern Sweden. One finds snow in the middle of June and a brilliant sun at midnight. Among those blue-white, snow-covered hills are found the hardy descendants of the Vikings. Sportsmen by tradition and training, the Swedes seem to have been born on skis. According to Captain White, the most exciting of Swedish winter sports is "tolkning". But he warns you not to try it unless you are as comfortable on skis as you are in shoes. All you do is find a high-stepping, high-spirited horse, get on your skis, and hold on for dear life. But if you cannot enjoy tolkning in the midnight sun of Sweden, here's a way to add to your winter pleasure. Biting frost and icy winds make White Horse all the more welcome. So learn how much fun it is to come out of the cold to the warm enjoyment of a glass of White Horse. For there is the good cheer of a bright fireside in each smooth sip of this world-famous Scotch. Stop at your favorite bar or package store today and call for White Horse, the perfect winter Scotch. Match it if you can!

Steam and Love Triumph In 'Little Old New York'

By Gerald G. Gross

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

History and historical background, or Hollywood's conception of same, are all around us this week, or hadn't you noticed? At the Metropolitan (see Miss Stroud's review), a picturization of Geronimo's exploits. "The Light That Failed," opening today at the Capitol, treats the Sudan campaign. "Swiss Family Robinson," at RKO-Keith's, starts out against a Napoleonic background and by now everyone knows the Civil War has something to do with "Gone With the Wind," and vice versa.

Not yet having viewed "Remember the Night," your correspondent can only presume, instead of stating with certainty, that it is concerned with the night of Paul Revere's ride, the night that Rome burned or some other epochal occasion in the archives of man, which would make the historical motif unanimous this week-end on the screens of F street, Thirteenth street and Fifteenth street.

Quite, for "Little Old New York," the new attraction at the Earle, is all about the devilish time Robert Fulton had launching the first steamboat. And a crackerjack movie it is, too, as long as one's first consideration is entertainment, rather than historical meticulousness. Since the Twentieth Century-Fox people aren't pretending to give us a document, but 100 minutes of hearty amusement, no carping will be tolerated in this space so the foregoing insinuation is hereby stricken from the record. (Aside to Darryl Zanuck: Washington Irving wasn't middle-aged in 1807, though.)

Altogether different from its celluloid predecessor, circa 1923, which had Marion Davies masquerading as a boy in her quest of riches, the present transcription of Rida Johnson Young's stage play lays stress on the labor pains incident to the birth of the Clermont. In this respect it is particularly comparable to "Rulers of the Sea," which played the same screen a few weeks ago.

Where that picture, however, derived the bulk of its merit from the acting art of Will Fyffe, "Little Old New York" is splendid divertissement for a variety of reasons—spectacular staging, good performances, capable direction and narrative that rarely flags, though the heroes' many adversities never alter the conviction that the girls will get their boys, the villain will get his clock fixed and—most important of all—the Clermont will conquer the Hudson.

Richard Greene, as Robert Fulton, has the brains to make his steamboat go, but not the money. Alice Faye, who runs a grog shop and inn, rents him a room and invites herself to help Fulton obtain the money he needs. Fred MacMurray, Miss Faye's rugged sweetie, directs the construction of the Clermont's hull with enthusiasm, until his girl gives him the false notion that Fulton loves her and she him. Gallantly, he remains at the switch after learning the "truth," but not with any enthusiasm. Brenda Joyce is the miss Fulton really cares for and his affection is reciprocated.

Let's make specific mention of the breathtakingly realistic waterfront set (said to have covered 15 acres), a scene-stealing Senegambian named Ben Carter, Richard Greene's A-1 performance, which should win over whatever male fans who may have been antagonized by his dimple, the crack about Nicholas Roosevelt (a forebear of F. D. R.) being "too conservative" and then wind up as follows: "Little Old New York" is grand stuff for the whole family.

The Earle's new vaudeville bill is longer on variety than it is on distinction, which may be another way of saying that setting a high standard of stage presentations occasionally has its disadvantage. The Calgary Brothers occupy the headline spot, with justification. Their familiar tomfoolery is as funny as ever. Ditto Johnny Burke, the doughboy monologist, who has added a few new gags. Raymond Baird slap-tongues a saxophone, Danny Drayson does taps, Carolyn Marsh sings hot and the Roxyettes invoke Confucius and Jim Farley.

Stirirng Indian Tale Opens at Metropolitan

'Geronimo' Packed With Action, Wild Scenery And Deep Villainy

Geronimo, Apache chief who held out long after the other braves had puffed the peace pipe, is handled with due dignity in the picture of the same name. On the premise that Geronimo had a just grievance against the paleface tribe for the slaying of his family, the plot shows how the redskin plagued his white brother and for a time parodied his Lincolnesque intent to "make the frontier safe."

When Gen. Grant decided the Indian was being mistreated, fed with one hand and stabbed with the other, he sent a little Napoleon of a general, Ralph Morgan, to take over Fort Grant in the mountain fastness of Arizona. That the general's son, unseen by him since babyhood, would be detailed to the outpost and there attain the full measure of his manhood and carry on in the family tradition is inevitable. The other facets of the many-headed plot have to do with how a captain (Preston Foster) and a scout (Andy Devine) contribute their noble bits, personifying the countless like men who died that the chief might make record runs to the Coast.

Engagingly despicable is Villain Gene Lockhart, the wily war profiteer, who uses the Indians to gain gold and power. He gets his'n, as do all the other ill-doers. Virtue triumphs in whoppingly big measures.

Notable is the scenery—solid slabs of mountains down which a man can slide to reach the ammunition train to get it across to the beleaguered ambushed troop remnants; deep-gashed rivers along which scouts can prowl for reconnoitering; winding roads cut through high-breasted hills along which wagons can pound swayingly. Picturesque is the locale, peppery the action, with most of the activity being motivated by Geronimo, who is really Chief Thundercloud doing his decimated people proud as the warrior who didn't want to move when the White Father nudged him.

Deft is a Porky Terrytoon in which the stuttering pig has small time for syllable-shaping, what with being a Legionnaire on the sands of the Sahara and meeting nasty spy who resembles George Raft and flips coins with his big toes, and repulsing dervishes and Ali-Baba single-handed with the assistance of a smallish camel called Baby Dumpling.

SALLY STROUD.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 22.

This morning and every morning, because we're still celebrating the birthday of the Father of Our Country, we should be saying "Thank you, Columbus, for discovering America." And we who are fortunate enough to be living in California should be grateful to Cabrillo, who sailed into San Miguel Bay, now San Diego, Calif., on September 28, 1542. "Thank You, Columbus" is also the title of a new musical play in rehearsal, which will open in Hollywood, written by Curt Bois and G. B. Gontard. Curt Bois was known as the Eddie Cantor of Europe, and Gontard is the famous foreign journalist who has been a guest lecturer at the Rheinhardt School. Neither man can return to his own country.

HOPPER

Gracie Fields, who arrived the other day, is thanking America for being able to recuperate from a recent illness in the land of sunshine. She's now huddling with Darryl Zanuck and Monte Banks about her next story, tentatively titled "Mademoiselle from Armentiers." It's based upon the present war, with lots of inside stuff that hasn't found it's way into print.

Martin Dies is grateful and so should Hollywood be, that he's going to stop talking about the Red activities in Hollywood and bring the names of the guilty out into the open, which I believe will surprise a lot of people—even some who have contributed to the cause. You see, we have so many color-blind people here—perhaps from the glaring sunshine—lots of them don't know the difference between red, pink and blue. In fact, some of our boys and girls who wrap themselves with the stars and stripes at the slightest provocation, may soon find themselves wrapped in—just the stripes.

Speaking about communism, when the fuss first started here, I asked one of our biggest producers why he put So-and-so opposite one of his biggest stars, knowing he was Red. His reply was, "What would you have me do—throw him out and make him a martyr?" I said, "Throw him out and don't care what becomes of him." He reflected a minute and said, "But you see, we need him. We have so few leading men."

Keith's Film Depicts Family Going Native

Human, Earthy Tone of 'Swiss Family Robinson' Hits Responsive Chord

It's a voyage to the back of beyond and to your youth at Keith's this week. That beloved children's classic, "Swiss Family Robinson," is not only effectively transplanted to the screen. It is enriched with humor and individualities, given a lush and delightful setting worthy of such a story.

Father and Mother Robinson, in the expert hands of Thomas Mitchell and Edna Best, become highly human folks with father delighted with their fabulous island and mother persuading herself that she's pining for the niceties of her London home.

There's equally sharp delineation of character in the boys. Freddy Bartholomew, as Jack, is an insufferable young sprig whose London idea of a career was to marry money and pattern himself after Beau Brummel. The island takes all that out of him. Tim Holt, as Fritz, is a youngster bitten with the military bug whose hero is Napoleon. But the island brings him down to earth. Terry Kilburn plays the studious Ernest very finely and Baby Bobby Quillan proves one of the most lovable tykes of the picture world.

Adventure is not a rarity, but an everyday occurrence to the Swiss Family Robinson. They build their tree house over the spreading roots of an enormous banyan tree. Ernest tames Henry, the ostrich, who obligingly lays eggs for them. Baby Bobby gets caught in a trap the boys have set for wild animals. Mother Robinson's first ventures in the art of cookery leave the family with their eyes watering, but not their mouths. Ernest chases a butterfly into a tarantula's nest and gets bitten. A tropical hurricane wrecks both their tree house and the boat on which they have labored for months.

"Swiss Family Robinson" is one of those pictures that belong on a "must" list. It takes audiences on a two-hour cruise to a day when the world was newer.

In portraying Vatican City, the March of Time producers have done their usual magnificent job. No angle of the temporal realm of the Roman Pope seems to have been overlooked. You see the Vatican's daily newspaper edited, its commissary where delicacies can be obtained that are not available to the Italian public, the cathedrals of St. Peter and St. John Lateran, the present Pope and that mysterious personage, the "Black Pope" of the Jesuits, who turns out to be a cheerful little man whose looks belie his title. Other important heads of the Vatican hierarchy also appear in this picture that is both pageant and newsreel.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 22.

DAVID SARNOFF, who attended the Overseas Press Club dinner recently, wore a red ribbon which signifies membership in the Legion d'Honneur . . . "How wonderful," one of the guests said to him. "How did you get it?" . . . "Let me tell you the story," Sarnoff replied. "Once, in Paris, a woman whose husband disappeared rushed to the police for help. 'Give us a complete description, so we'll know what he looks like,' the gendarmes asked her . . . 'Oh, that's so easy,' the wife told them. "He's the gentleman without the Legion d'Honneur ribbon.'"

TOMMY MANVILLE will back Paul Berney's production of "It's a Girl," which will star Lulu McConnell. Billy Livingston will appear in it . . . Alice Mizner, niece of the late Wilson and Addison Mizner, has returned from France, because of the war, and now is a hat-check girl at the Brevoort . . . Gloria Vanderbilt, who went with Geoffrey Jones to the Rainbow Room, had a duenna waiting in the outer room to chaperon them home . . . Harry Richman, for years one of Miami Beach's foremost citizens, has indicated that this will be his last season there. Mrs. Richman is allergic to climate and prefers California.

HARRY HOPKINS' personal aide is Victor Sholis, the brilliant Chicago newspaperman who went to work for Hopkins one year ago . . . Sholis' personal aide is Fred Polangen . . . "Fred, you're my righthand man," Sholis told him . . . "And that," said Polangen, "makes me the right-hand man to a right-hand man" . . . "Of a Left-winger," Sholis added.

TEDDY HART, one of the featured actors in "See My Lawyer," will receive star-billing for the two performances on February 27 and 28. The Junior Hadassah purchased the entire house for those two nights . . . Mr. and Mrs. Tyrone Power were startled, at Fefe's Monte Carlo, when a young lady suddenly sat down at their table, and began to recite: "One, two, three, four"—until she had counted to 60. "Thank you," she explained. "I just won a bet—that I could sit at your table for one minute."

THE MERCHANT Tailors and Designers Association selected the 22 best dressed men in America . . . One of them, William McC. Martin, president of the Stock Exchange, never owned a hat until last year. . . . Bennett Cerf, the publisher, also won ranking. Last year, as Elizabeth Hawes' fashion party, Cerf wore his best summer suit—a $16 outfit . . . The list also included Paul V. McNutt, the Presidential aspirant, who for the past two months has tried to wear unpressed suits—so that the farmers and suburban voters won't think he's a dude.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 21.—A Sunday School teacher overhearing the remarks of Stanley Harris today would doubtless be horrified, and for that matter any other righteous individual would begin to wonder if baseball does, indeed, possess all the character-building qualities claimed for it by the off-season orators on the banquet circuit.

POVICH

Because, in a serious discussion of the Nats' 1940 prospects, Manager Harris was saying things like this:

"I wish I had four more Gerald Walkers on this club. He's nice and mean when that ball game starts. You can have those meek and polite guys. Give me a team of hard losers and I'll show you a team that's up in the race. The ball field is no place for the tender-hearted. The tough guy makes his own breaks. There's such a thing as being too good a loser. The fellow who doesn't mind getting beat is a headache to the manager."

That Harris was inferring that he has been the victim of numerous such headaches was obvious enough. Since 1933, when they won their last pennant, the Nats have been a particularly mild-mannered club to the disgust of their manager, who was a fiery sort in his playing days and still finds defeat incompatible with his personal happiness.

The presence of the dynamic Walker with the Nats raises by several degrees the club's battle spirit. It isn't a spirited club to start with and they gained in Walker a personality who is tantamount to a terrific shot in the arm. The Mississippian has always hungered for a battle. He has been a storm center with every club whose uniform he wore. Whether stealing home with the winning run or trying to take a base that was already occupied, he was always attempting to accomplish something.

On the Washington club he'll be a stand-out as far as enthusiasm is concerned. The only other Washington player with any sort of a hard glint in his eye is George Case. The Trenton boy combines his zest for the game with a recklessness that as far as Harris is concerned is not ill-becoming.

"Sure, all of that type of player like Case and Walker make their mistakes," the Nats' manager was saying, "but most of the time they're forcing the issue for you and getting the club a good share of the breaks. Case would be a very ordinary ball player without that fire he has. I don't know if he could stay in the big leagues. But if he doesn't lose that fighting spirit, if he doesn't learn to take defeat too easily, he can easily become a star with the talents he has."

In a milder sort of way, Buddy Lewis carries the flame of battle, but it is apparent only to the players on the field. There is nothing obvious about Lewis' determination from the grandstands. But his teammates on the bench and the pitcher out there on the mound have a healthy respect for him when he wraps his fists around the bat and challenges the ball to come near the plate.

That is the lot of them—Walker, Case and Lewis. There are other good ball players on the Washington Club, but none of them are exhibitionists. Their grit may be as great as that of the trio we've named, but they make no show of it, and to show it is important. It always has been in baseball. Occasionally the strong, silent men rise to stardom, but only because of a superabundance of skill.

It isn't difficult to make out a strong case for the fiery ball players. Jake Powell, for instance, has never been accused of any outstanding talents either as a hitter or an outfielder. And he has never been rated a smart baserunner. But by dint of his enthusiasm and dash he has stuck in the big leagues for a half-dozen years and proven a valuable performer.

"I'll have to give Jake credit," Harris was saying. "He was the rootin', tootin sort who made his own breaks. He was not a solid hitter, just a wild swinger who happened to connect often enough, but he made infielders hurry their throws and step lively or they'd never get him out. Jake always provided a big margin of error for the men handling the ball whether he was throwing it or fielding it. It wasn't hard for a manager to string along with a fellow like Powell. He was always doing something for you."

But look at the preponderance of big league stars. Ty Cobb was never happy unless he was making a winning hit or scoring the winning run. Mickey Cochrane, like Cobb, was a downright vicious ball player. Bill Dickey broke Carl Reynolds' jaw with a punch. Earl Whitehill writhed in defeat. Al Simmons would scare a pitcher out of his wits. Buddy Myer would fight at the drop of a hat. Babe Ruth, the royal nonesuch, was above any such belligerence, but he was a man apart in all respects. But the deduction is, of course, that a little bit of meanness never did hurt a ball player.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 22.—A bloke walked up to the ticket grille at Mike Jacobs' office today, slid his dough under the bars and said, with some passion, "Gimme four tickets . . . and I'd buy ten if I thought that bum was gonna lose."

CONSIDINE

Herman Lewin peered out through the grille and looked into the face of a typical New York fight fan. It was no surprise to Lewin. He had been hearing a lot of these grouses this week, and he had been seeing the unfolding of a kind of boxing miracle: the birth of a fighter so unpopular that he has become a great drawing card.

The bum in question is Bummy Davis, nee Abraham Davidoff, who tomorrow night fights Lou Ambers, nee Luigi d'Ambrosio, at Madison Square Garden. Davis is a young 10-minute egg from the Brownsville section of Brooklyn. He is unbeaten in 37 fights as a pro, has a great left hook that can rearrange an opponent's stomach and then come up and dent his chin, and he is apparently without compassion or any of the social graces which often attach themselves to fighting men.

Nobody knows just how he got so unpopular, in 19 years. In some respects he has the makings of a hero, for he is irrevocably on his way to either the welterweight or middleweight title. Atop that, he is the local boy, up from the gutter, bought his mother a house, and has never been known to slug a neighbor on Sunday. But he got unpopular, and it's likely to make him rich.

He's almost a professional tough. A publicity picture, showing him shooting pool in the poolhall where he trains, smacked of the pool-playing tough in "Pinocchio" or one of those dead end apprentice bums. He likes a cap and has an out-of-the-corner-of-the-mouth way of talking.

Ambers was a tough, but was steered off on a new tack by a Herkimer (N. Y.) priest named Father Purificato. Lou used to have to steal to eat, his great weakness being bread and doughnuts from bakery wagons and fruit from hucksters. He and his mob upset a bakery wagon once, in a spirit of mischief, and the law tossed him in a reform school for a stretch. He came out tougher and collected a mob again, but the priest stepped in there at the right moment. He outfitted the basement of St. Anthony's with some fourth-hand boxing equipment he had secured and coaxed Ambers to come in.

Lou took readily to fighting, developed a frisky, effective style, became a well-known amateur under the incongruous name of Otis Paradise, turned pro and lived to wear the diadem of Gans, Nelson and Leonard. Today he is really a model young man, and his charities border on the excessive. Secretly, he deplores the manner in which Davis revels in toughness.

Davis is the first unpopular drawing card since Leach Cross and Willie Jackson, who packed them in in droves, to boo—but packed them.

Cross was a booer's delight because he was smarter than most of the citizens who came to see him, or the ones who wrote about him, and because he was a cutey in that ring. He'd do a Leon Errol when tagged on the chin and when the happy opponent would close in for the kill, Cross would half break his neck with a sneaky right.

Willie Jackson brought down wrath (and bucks) on his head because he kayoed an idol—Johnny Dundee, and because he refused to fight Jenny Leonard.

In Davis' case, the patrons have taken a dislike to his sneer, his background, and the "killer" in his ring deportment. Fortunately for him, and his four managers, it is a violent dislike and one which, if it continues unabated, will make them all rich.

Coast-Bred 3-Year-Old Surprises

Royal Crusader and Weigh Anchor Next As Favorites Fail; 35,000 See Race

(Chart of Derby on Page 26.)

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 22.—Conquering a field of 16 rivals in an upset that left the favorites a badly beaten lot, California-bred Sweepida won the richest event for 3-year-olds in the West today—the $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby.

A 33-to-1 shot in the betting booths, this spanking brown gelding, owned by H. C. Hill, of Stockton, Calif., took the big purse—$43,850 to the winner—with a burst of speed that kept him on top of the field from wire to wire.

Ridden by Jockey Ralph Neves, Sweepida charged down the stretch in a battle with another outside candidate, Royal Crusader, and flashed across the finish line a length and a quarter in front.

Weigh Anchor, a "field" entry, finished a close third, while the prides of Kentucky, Maryland and Delaware—Gallahadion, Fairy Chant, Maestro Sascha, Tough Hombre and other Eastern bluebloods, trailed in out of the money. C. S. Howard's Mioland was fourth.

$10,000 Second Cash

Royal Crusader, owned by Walter Hoffman's R. C. Stable, of Ventura, Calif., won $10,000 for second place; William Ziegler, jr., of New York, who saddled Weigh Anchor, won $5,000 and Mioland $2,500.

The winner paid off the fancy price of $68.60, $21.20 and $10; Royal Crusader paid $23 and $13, and Weigh Anchor $6.60.

An overcast sky brought out a garish hue to the greens and yellows of the infield, and the blue haze of the sprawling Sierra Madre Mountains seemed deeper than usual as the 17 candidates—15 colts and two fillies—paraded to the post.

Fleecy clouds hung over the mountain tops to the north of the grandstand, and the ceiling skies were leaden and forboding, but the threatened downpour of rain failed to materialize.

A brief sprinkle fell soon after the fourth race but did not dampen the spirits of the derby day crowd of 35,000, and the track was fast.

Sweepida Away Fast

Speed horses got away fast, as expected, but Sweepida got away faster and was leading the pack as the field pounded down in front of the grandstand. Goinfi into the first turn, Neves let Sweepida out and he moved into a length lead, with Neil McCarthy's Augury, Weigh Anchor and W. C. Stroube's Exarch in close pursuit. Into the back stretch they can, with the California pride holding his own, while the 5-to-2 favorites, Gallahadion and Tough Hombre, as well as Fairy Chant, were well back.

Jockey Lester Balaski gave the whip to Royal Crusader, but he could never collar the pace-setting Sweepida. Weigh Anchor, with Johnny Longden aboard, charged at Royal Crusader, and it was a tight finish between the two, with Mioland another close contender for show money

Time for the mile and one-eighth was 1:51 3-5.

The betting handle for the race was $178,424.

Gonzaga Downs St. John's to Even Series

Purple Five Draws Away Near Close

First Period Brings Only 3 Points; Row With Official Marks Hard-Fought Battle

By Bill Burnett

Stung to a highly-profitable fighting fury by what it considered bad officiating in the first half, Gonzaga's Purple cage team last night turned the heat on its prime rival, St. John's, to win in a walkaway, 32-23.

Tech High gym was packed to its rafters for one of the few times this season as the Catholic schools came together for their second meeting this year. Last night's result deadlocked the rivalry, the Johnnies having won the first clash in an overtime, 19-18.

The lowest scoring first quarter in this year's scholastic books led up to a second session in which fireworks exploded all over the place. In that opening stanza the only points tallied were a two-pointer by the Purple's Lane O'Donnell and a foul throw by St. John's Joe Corrado.

Johnnies Strike

The Johnnies struck suddenly as the second period opened. Corrado whirled around Buddy Rowzee for a neat "set up," Herbie Munhall contributed another pair of points, and Frank Cady made good on a foul called on O'Donnell.

That penalty on O'Donnell, called by Referee Maurice Enright, brought such a squak from the Purple bench that Enright issued the first of three technicals on the Gonzagas.

The next technical came a few seconds later, when another foul was called on O'Donnell. St. John's held an 11-to-5 lead at the time. Coach Orrell Mitchell, of Gonzaga, objected again, and, for his pains, saw the Johnnies take another free throw. There was talk on Gonzaga's bench of having the game stopped.

Instead, however, the Purple set itself to basketball with the result that it was behind only 14 to 12 when the gun ended first half hostilities. The last technical foul on Gonzaga was called shortly before the intermission.

Take Lead Again

On the first play of the last half St. John's took a 16-12 lead, but that was short-lived. Burke tallied a foul point for the Purple, and Bob Mulvihill took care of the remaining deficit with four straight points. After the third quarter it was 22-18 favoring Gonzaga, and the winners registered 10 points to St. John's 5 in the last period.

Star of Gonzaga's earlier loss, Mulvihill again sparked the I-Streeters in their successful effort. The 8 points he scored were a minor matter in his brilliant all-around play. Freddy Rice, forward, won scoring honors with 12 points, and O'Donnell stood out brightly on the defense.

Nine points by Corrado was best for the losers as Cady, the teams' ace scorer, was held to 5 points by Mulvihill.

Maryland U. Routs V. M. I. Five, 27-25

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Maryland University's five staggered into a Southern Conference championship tournament berth last night at College Park by outlasting V. M. I., 27-25, in one of the slowest college court exhibitions of the season before some 1,500 fans.

Entering the game with six victories and five defeats in the conference standings, and needing one more to clinch a place to the Raleigh tournament next week, the Terps managed to freeze the ball in the last 30 seconds to protect the one-basket advantage.

The visitors already firmly entrenched in next to last place in the standings of the teams, could not solve Maryland's zone defense and failed to hit the basket with any degree of accuracy, but still managed to stay within striking distance for the entire 40 minutes.

George DeWitt, star forward of the hosts, drew three fouls in the first nine minutes and played a cautious game the remainder of the

Harvard's Mystery, Promoter Turner's Gain as Frenchman Beats Alan Eustace

By Al Hailey

The only man they're afraid to take out to see the animals in the zoo came to town last night and showed that while he's probably the world's worst wrestler, he's no bum when it comes to drawing crowds. He won, incidentally.

He's Maurice (The Angel) Tillett, and a record crowd of Congressmen, clerks, captains of industry and regular wrestling fans jam-packed Turner's arena to see the face that made Harvard anthropologists run and take another look at the calendar.

Two thousand and two hundred fans—all the District fire regulations allow—trouped into the arena, and Promoter Joe Turner sadly turned away 500 more who wanted to see if it's true what they say about the Angel.

Picture, if you can, a being 5-feet 8-inches in 276 pounds of bone and muscle 5-feet 8-inches off the floor, a neck 22 inches in circumference, a face 7½ inches wide by 14 long and ears spread into the best imitation of a cauliflower seen in Washington in a decade.

You can do this without benefit of lobster and pickles at midnight—in fact, it's The Angel. You look at him and feel the urge to ask, but where's your dinosaur, Mr. Angel?" Walter Haight said it made him feel like he was looking into one of those trick mirrors at a carnival.

But The Angel has a weakness—elevators. Elevators that tear off 50 floors at a clip are his favorite people. That's not all—The Angel is anxious to make some American millionairess happy by becoming her husband.

Uses Headwork

Thus, Maurice, who hails from Rheims, France, shows that those Harvard pedagogues knew whereof they spoke when they said that his massive cranium housed a brain—"a most excellent brain."

The Angel's father was a mining engineer in the Ural Mountains in Russia, and his mother a teacher of French in the University of Moscow. She's now a teacher at a girl's school in Rheims.

Maurice fawns like a lost puppy on anyone who'll speak a few syllables of French to him—he speaks little English. His most perfect phrase yet is:

"Promoter, give me money."

When The Angel hove onto the scene to toss around a lad named Alan Eustace and win in 10½ minutes strong men gasped, women paled and two dozen fans walked up and swore to become teetotalers for life.

There's just one way of saying it—he looked like hell. But he's proud of it. He claims he's the strongest man in the world. Karl Pojello,

Budge, Perry Advance in Pro Tennis

By the United Press

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—Donald Budge and Fred Perry, seeded No. 1 and 2, respectively, marched into semifinals of the $2,500 Southeastern Professional Tennis Tournament with straight set victories today.

Budge, former national amateur champion, defeated John Nogrady, New York, 7—5, 6—4, 6—4. Perry dropped Frank Rericha, New York, 7—5, 6—4 6—4.

In semifinals tomorrow, Budge plays young Art Hendrix, Lakeland, Fla., tennis coach at the United States Naval Academy, and Perry faces Walter Senior, Chicago, sixth seeded, Saturday.

Big Bill Tilden and Vincent Richards, one of the favored doubles teams, beat Lloyd Budge, Don's brother, and John Hendrix, Chattanooga, Tenn., 6—1, 8—10, 8—6, 7—5.

Riggs Pressed In Winning Indoor Game

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 22.—Bobby Riggs of Chicago, America's No. 1 amateur tennis player, fot off to an extremely shaky start in his first national indoor championship tournament today at the Seventh Regiment Armory.

King Bobby, heading one of the best fields in several years, was pressed to extra games by young Dick Shipp, of Harrisburg, Pa., competing in his first senior tournament on boards.

Riggs won 6—4, 11-9, but only after he had fought off repeated challenges by Shipp. The young Pennsylvanian, hitting with abandon, particularly on his service, caused the national outdoor champion plenty of anguish in the second set, before Riggs managed to come from behind an 8-9 count.

In direct contrast, Elwood Cooke of Portland, Oreg., Riggs' fellow Davis-Cupper advanced easily Cooke, seeded No. 3 behind Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, raced through Fred Krais, jr., of Pelham Manor, N. Y., 6—4, 6—1. McNeill, National Indoor champion two years ago, will not play until Saturday when he meets Bill Pardoe, former Brigham Young University star in the opening round. Classes at Kenyon College prevented the second seeded entry from being on hand for the opening day.

Ladislav Hecht, of Czecho-Slovakia, the lone foreign entry, won his place in the second round with a 6—3, 7—5 victory over Lou Marvinney, of Jersey City, N. J.

River Vale, N. J., Feb. 22 (AP).—The Washingon Eagles defeated the River Vale Skeeters, 5-4, in an overtime Eastern Amateur Hockey League game tonight.

The Skeeters faded in the later stages of the game which enabled the Eagles to tie.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

FOUR—BUCKY JACOBS, PITCHER

The freckled son of a Chatham, Va., jeweler is going to win possession of a big league pitching job on his third try, according to the consensus of opinion in the Nats' camp He is Newton (Bucky) Jacobs, former pride of the University of Richmond campus.

He was fresh off the campus that August day in 1937 when he walked to a big league pitching mound for the first time in his life. He was breaking in the hard way, because the team he was facing was the Cleveland Indians, and his pitching opponent was Bobby Feller. It would be nice to say that he beat Feller in a thrilling duel, but he didn't. He pitched three scoreless innings and then the Indians landed on him for four runs.

BUCKY JACOBS

The Nats never have given up on the little right-hander, however. They were intrigued by those three no-hit games he pitched for the University of Richmond in the spring of '37. In 1938 they sent him to Charlotte, where he blossomed as the league's leading pitcher with 26 wins for the season.

Back in the Nats' camp last spring he was still considered too small. He went to Springfield in the Eastern League. There he won 13 games in a row before he lost one. Then the Springfield management overworked him and he won only five of his next 24 decisions.

But those 13 wins in a row by Jacobs won the Nats' interest anew. They've called him back here for another tryout, and now they think he'll do. One of the items in his favor is 18 pounds of additional weight gained the past year. It is expected to help his fast ball.

District Boxing Boom Promised by Turner and Leoffler

DeChard Gets $1,000 Offer To Turn Pro

Turner-Menendez, Leoffler-Erwin Give Notice of Intentions For Competing Shows

By Al Hailey

Washington was promised a boxing boom without parallel in history of the sport's legalized existence in the Captial yesterday.

First pledge to put professional boxing on a high plane and give District fans a long-awaited "break" came from Joe Turner, who has reentered the game with Gabe Menendez as his new matchmaker.

Turner and Menendez outlined plans for a highly active season beginning March 4 and revealed that they have offered Jimmy DeChard, 21-year-old amateur heavyweight, $1,000 to take up professional fighting.

At the same time, Severine G. Leoffler, owner of the Washington ice hockey Eagles, confirmed reports he will enter boxing promotion in the spring by verifying his tie-up with Jimmy Erwin, who piloted Petey Sarron to the world's featherweight championship, as matchmaker.

Plan Use of Local Talent

Turner and his new matchmaker said they have offered DeChard $1,000 for three professional fights in the first step of a plan to induce "real local talent" to take up the professional end of the business.

Turner's announcement was made at a luncheon attended by members of the District Boxing Commission and local newspapermen at the Occidental Hotel. Leoffler's disclosure came at the bi-weekly Hockey Writers Association luncheon at The Stables.

Leoffler said he plans to apply to the Boxing Commission for a license immediately and that his first show will be in Riverside the second week in April.

It is possible that Leoffler, Turner and Ahearn will conduct outdoor programs that will not actually conflict. Ahearn plans to stage biweekly shows, while Leoffler expects to follow the same plan. If Turner enters the outdoor program he may so arrange his shows so that all three will be promoting different weekly dates.

Riverside Ideal for Shows

Leoffler's plan puts him in the lead by a nose over Turner and Ahearn, however. He has the ideal plant and can seat 8,000 fans. Furthermore, he will be able to stage his shows, rain or shine, and still have all the comforts of an outdoor arena.

Frankie Mann, veteran Washington boxing figure and manager of DeChard, was first offered the position as matchmaker at Riverside, but turned it down, Leoffler said.

Welcoming Turner back into the promotional field temporarily deserted by Goldie Ahearn, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chairman; Secretary Harvey L. Miller and Fred Buchholtz pledged the commission's cooperation and paid flowery tribute to Turner's association with sports activities in Washington.

"I know of no man who has done as much for the city of Washington as has Joe Turner, and I am certain that the commission will cooperate to the fullest extent," Brown said.

Plans are Indefinite

"While deploring the present situation of boxing and the lack of a suitable arena in the Capital, the commission feels that boxing is ready for a comeback. We have had no official notice of competing forces, but we believe competition would be a big spur to public interest," he added.

Turner, who had been seeking Riverside Stadium for summer boxing shows to compete with Ahearn's program in Griffith Stadium, remained indefinite about his plans for the outdoor season but emphasized that he welcomes competition.

"I'll be in there promoting boxing just as long as any of them will, and as long as I can raise a dollar boxing won't die in Washington," he said. "I didn't get back into boxing to 'save my shirt'—I got back in it because I love the sport and believe in its future."

Turner and Menendez will bring Buddy Scott, whom Menedez formerly managed, for the opening show March 4. His opponent is yet to be selected from a crop of young heavyweights.

"We're going to build up from the bottom," Menendez explained. "We're going to put on good shows, and there aren't going to be any more McAvoys in here. What the town needs is local fighters—more amateurs turning professional. It's perfectly natural that we're going to give these youngsters full protection—we'd be the last in the world to overmatch them and get them knocked off, especially De Chard.

"But as for Phil Furr and the others of his experience, Brown and Gallagher, we are going to provide real opposition or none at all. If Furr wants to fight he can meet such welters as Vic Della Curti or Kenny LaSalle."

Turner explained, without bitterness, that he and Leoffler had conferred at noon about the tentative plans for summer promotion in Riverside and that even at that hour Leoffler had told him he was uncertain as to his own line of action.

Heseman Captures Annual Dog Derby

Ashton, Idaho, Feb. 22 (AP).—His young dogs harnessed in unorthodox zig-zag fashion, Everett Heseman won the 10-mile twenty-fourth annual American dog derby today in 41 minutes flat.

The Twin Falls musher collected $400 prize money. Celey Baum, of Ashton twice winner of the event and favored to repeat, was second in 41.32.

Justice Has Net Club

A tennis club with approximately 35 members has been formed in the Department of Justice. Both men and women players from the club will go into action locally, the men taking part in Government League play and the women in special events.

Maryland's Southern Conference Champions Wave Farewell

First Round Byes to Two Terp Boxers

Maryland University's boxing team boarded a train at Union Station last night for the Southern Conference tournament in Columbia, S. C., with two of its members assured a second-round appearance by virtue of byes.

Three of the 14 seeded berths in the tournament which will see the Terps defending their 1939 championship went to Maryland fighters—Newton Cox, 165-pound champion; Hotsy Alperstein, welterweight, and Nate Askin, 135-pounder.

Norman Hathaway, 155 pounds, and Heavyweight George Pyles drew byes, while Bob Bradley, undefeated this season as a featherweight, was not on the seeded list.

Each of the eight teams in the tournament received at least one seeded position—six going to Clemson.

First-round matches begin tonight at 8 o'clock. Semifinals will begin at 3 p. m. tomorrow and finals at 8 p. m. Tonight's pairings:

127-pound class—Bagnal (The Citadel) vs. Jordan (Duke), Alexson (Virginia Tech) vs. Christmas (South Carolina), Fleming (North Carolina State) vs. Johnston (North Carolina), Bradley (Maryland) vs. Dorn (Clemson).

165-pound class—Rion (Clemson) vs. McCarter (South Carolina), Abrams (North Carolina State) vs. Cox (Maryland), Sanders (North Carolina) vs. Belmore (Virginia Tech), Ulrich (The Citadel) bye.

175-pound class—Robertson (North Carolina State) bye, Henson (South Carolina) vs. Ferguson (Clemson), Murphy (Duke) vs. Leites (Maryland), Duncan (The Citadel) vs. Sowder (Virginia Tech).

way, and that probably affected the Terps as a team. DeWitt scored only 7 points, one of his lowest totals of the season.

V. M. I., with Ed Doyle and Joe Parrish showing the way, led 10-9 at the end of 12 minutes of play, but Maryland held a 13-12 advantage at half-time. The Terps widened the margin to 25-19 midway in the second half, the biggest advantage of the game. But Duvall's snowbird was their lone scoring contribution in the last nine minutes.

Maryland's zone defense bewildered the Keydets. They refused to break for the basket and scored only when one of the Maryland men would abandon his post and leave a shot open. In turn the Terps' biggest fault was wild passing that sent the ball into the crowd more often than into a teammate's hands.

Take 25-19 Lead

After Mulitz, Mondorff and Rea upped the Terp lead to 25-19, Foster and Stumpf narrowed it to 25-23. Then Duvall boosted the Terp margin to four points again before Shomo made it 27-25 with little more than a minute to play.

Little Bobby O'Keeffe let one fly from mid-court, the potential tying basket, but it hit the rim and Maryland recovered the ball and held it for the victory.

The game was the last regularly scheduled contest of the season for the Terrapins, and left them with a record of 13 victories and 8 defeats for the season's play.

Miss McDermott, Ed Heller Top Lynn Handicap Pin Play

Lead Field of 213 at Arcadia; Heller's 630 Total Earns $50 First Prize; Sartwell Second

Marguerite McDermott, a southpaw bowler, and Ed Heller, recent second-place finishers in the Hap Burtner Sweeps, shared women's and men's top honors in the fifth annual Margaret Lynn Handicap Sweepstakes yesterday at Arcadia Bowling Alleys. The event honoring one of the city's outstanding pinwomen attracted another banner field of 213, 125 men and 88 women.

Miss McDermott, of the Ladies Independent League, had a 592 count and a three pin handicap for a 595 total that won the $30 top prize in her class. Heller, of the Temple Minor League, had 620 with a ten pin handicap for 630 and the $50 top men's prize. Miss McDermott's second game of 150 and others of 109-100-122 and 111 led to the victory. Heller rolled consistent counts of 114-126-129-124 and 127.

A. D. Sartwell, of the N. F. F. E. League, was second among the men with 601-10, 611, while the next nine finishers, all money winners, included: Russell M. Shoemaker, Dynamite League, 596-6, 602; George Boyd, jr., Catholic, 572-30, 602; James M. Barrow, Census Bureau, 582-10, 592; T. E. Youngblood, Times-Herald, 592, from scratch, while Harry E. Baudu, Interdepartmental League, had a like total. A. B. Sisemore, Western Electric, had 577-13, 590, for eighth place, while Walter Aters, jr., Methodist Church, 577-10, 587, was ninth and two tied for tenth prize, William W. Brownholtz, Internal Revenue, with 54740, 587, and Randolph Blaydes, B. and K. Auto, 581-6, 587.

Ruth Waple, representing the Mount Rainier League, copped second place among the women bowlers with a 574 pinfall, plus a 16 handicap for 590. In third place was the Star Tournament champion, Juanita Pollock, of the Veterans Administration League, with 540—40, 580.

Agnes Rubin, C. and P. Telephone League pinwoman, had 562—23, 585, for fourth, while also in the prize list was Ruth King, Silver Spring Ladies League, with 566—13, 579; Ida Lu Moore, Prince Georges County, 545—33, 578; Maurice Morrison, Ladies Independent, 545—26, 571, and Helen Hiser, Prince Georges County League, 549—13, 562. Virginia Kreamer's 137 game was high.

Arcadia Manager Ralph Fraser announced that all averages were subject to check and the winners' list subject to change.

Western, Wilson In 1st High Play-Off

First action in the playoff to decide which public high teams engage in next week's interhigh championship tournament will take place tonight at Tech gym, where Western and Wilson come to grips at 8 p. m.

The winner automatically takes a tourney berth, while the loser must meet Eastern Tuesday for the fourth place. Roosevelt and Central are safely in first and second.

The outcome of a previous battle indicates Wilson as tonight's victor. The Tigers held on for a 25-22 decision. That, however, was one of the last respectable showings Wilson has made. Since then it has been beaten by Roosevelt, Central and Eastern.

Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 22 (AP).—Ted Zoberski, of Ironwood, Mich., representing the Gateway Club of Land O'Lakes, Wis., won the central United States ski championship today by leaping 191 and 203 feet off Suicide Hill in a class A competition.

Dunkelberger, Strafaci Win

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22 (AP).—Frank Strafaci, of New York, former national public links ruler, and Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., Southern champion, advanced to the semifinals of the sixteenth annual Dixie Amateur Golf Tournament today.

Strafaci turned back Charles Whitehead, of South River, N. J., 2 and 1. Dunkelberger, who will play Strafaci tomorrow, eliminated Arnold Minkley, of Chicago, 4 and 3.

In the other bracket Earl Christianson, long-driving Miami policeman, whipped Dick Ciuci, of New York, 3 and 1, earning his margin with a hot putter that brought birdies on the last three holes. Fred Dowling, of Toledo, Ohio, eliminated Don Allen, of Pittston, Pa., 1 up.

Galento to Referee 15 Southern Fights

February 26, Charlotte, N. C.; 27, Columbia, S. C.; 28, Norfolk, Va.; 29, Lynchburg, Va.; March 1, Winston-Salem, N. C.; 4, Lake Worth, Fla.; 5, Orlando, Fla.; 6, Tampa, Fla.; 7, St. Petersburg, Fla.; 8, Jacksonville, Fla.; 11, Memphis; 12, Nashville; 13, Atlanta; 14, Chattanooga; 15, Birmingham.

Bill Holt Selected To Play in Masters

Augusta, Ga., Feb. 22 (AP).—"Trailer" Bill Holt, of Syracuse, semifinalist in the 1939 British amateur golf championship, has been selected by a group of former U. S. amateur titleholders to play in the masters tournament, April 4-7.

The masters tournament committee recently announced the plan by which one amateur and one pro, not otherwise eligible for the tournament, would be selected to play. The pro will be picked by U. S. open champions.

Taub Returns To Columbus Fight Line-up

Injured 127-Pounder Ready to Go Against La. Tech Tomorrow

Columbus University's Fighting Explorers were the recipients of good news and bad yesterday as they speeded up preparation for tomorrow night's closing 1940 boxing match with Louisiana Tech's battling Bulldogs, of Ruston, La., at 8:30 o'clock.

Following a physical examination Lou Taub, Columbus U. 127-pounder, was pronounced fit to return to action against Louisiana Tech's undefeated Bobby Hand. This acquisition was offset, however, by the loss of Abe Cohen, sharpshooting southpaw heavyweight, who suffered a ruptured blood vessel that will keep him inactive tonight.

The return to action of Taub assures Washingtonians of one of the finest collegiate featherweight bouts of the year. Taub, however, is a fighting product of New York's East Side with a two-fisted punch and bobbing and weaving style, and may administer the classy Hand the first defeat of his collegiate career.

The Explorers previously had lost Artie Lane, 190-pound warrior. In the absence of these heavyweights Coach Jim McNamara has been forced to revise his line-up in such fashion as to present his best possible front against the Bulldogs.

A newcomer will be introduced by the Explorers tomorrow night in Elmer Jacobsen, a walloping Swede from Minnesota who supplants Charley Cox at 155 pounds, Cox moving up to 165 pounds. Bill Crum shifts to 175 pounds and Rube Hay, legitimate light-heavyweight, will box as a heavyweight.

Big Chance Tonight for Bummy Davis

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 22.—Al (Bummy) Davis, who started fighting because he had to and wound up making money at it, gets the most important assignment of his brief career tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden, where he faces Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers in an over-the-weight ten-rounder.

"Bummy" grew up in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, where either you're tough or you don't go out nights. Young Davis was plenty tough, and still is—as witness his record of 22 knockouts in 37 bouts, all but two of which he won. Even in those two, he got no worse than draws.

Al Jamison Takes Pro Job at Bradley Hills

AL JAMISON

Al Jamison, Indian Spring professional, officially announced yesterday he had completed arrangements with Eddie Adams, new lessee of the Bradley Hills Golf Club, and would report as club professional March 1, as originally reported in The Post immediately after Adams took over the former National Women's Club. He presented his resignation to Manager Mrs. Alma Von Steinner at Indian Spring.

Jamison returned Wednesday from Miami where he spent over five weeks. It was a foregone conclusion, however, that he was through at Indian Spring and would join Adams in the new venture on Bradley Lane.

His successor at Indian Spring has not been named but several pros are being contacted and a prominent public links player was approached as to turning professional and taking over the pro shop at the Four Corners Club, now a nine-hole layout.

Adams has signed 175 members for the new Bradley Hills Club and has spent $3,200 on clubhouse improvements. The list will close when 50 more members are in the fold.

Jamison has been at Indian Spring for two years, where he succeeded George Diffenbaugh. He was former assistant to Wiffy Cox at Kenwood and also worked at Capital and Army and Navy in an assistant pro capacity. He is 30 years old.

Workmen are now completing the pro shop at Bradley Hills, that will be located in the present clubhouse, facing the first tee. Jamison will name his assistant in the near future.

Three-Way Battle Rages in Nats' Camp for Catching Job

Early, Evans Are Pressing Rick Ferrell

All Three Catchers Hail From Carolina; Harris Favors Early; Evans Has Improved

By Shirley Povich
A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 22.—Washington's No. 1 catcher next season will hail from somewhere in North Carolina. The exact town is uncertain at this writing, but it will be either Guilford, home of Rick Ferrell; Kings Mountain, where Jake Early was born and bred, or a whistle-stop named Kennley, where young Al Evans was reared.

The fond hope of Manager Bucky Harris is that Kings Mountain will provide the Nats with their regular catcher. Because in that event Jake Early will have justified his promise of talents, which are considerable.

It is no secret that the trim but iron-muscled Early is the pet of the Nats' bosses, so far as the catching department is concerned.

He's bigger than the veteran Rick Ferrell. He's faster, he hits a ball farther, and he has a better throwing arm. But is he a good catcher? That is the burning question in the Nats' camp. Harrris is nursing the notion that young Early will show enough improvement to oust Ferrell from the No. 1 job.

Hits Well, Is Fast

"I'd like to have Jake in our regular lineup," said Harris. "We could use his long hits and his speed on the bases. I'm not worried about his throwing arm. I've never seen a young catcher with a better one. If Bennie Bengough can teach him some finnesse around the plate, I think we'll have a catcher."

Benough is a man with a mission in the Nats' camp this season. He is commissioned with the job of making acceptable receivers out of both Early and Al Evans. The old Yankee backstop can be seen daily keeping both lads out on the field after the practice session has ended and demonstrating the niceties of fielding their position and throwing to bases.

The Nats' bosses think so highly of Early and Evans that they hired Bengough for the particular purpose of improving them as catchers. "And I think we hired the right man," Harris was saying. Benogough held a job with the Yankees without hitting a lick, he was that good a catcher. If anybody can teach those boys things, he can do it."

This is supposed to be the year that Early blossoms as a big leaguer. Until he was hurt last season he showed definite signs of taking the regular job away from Ferrell. But now Jake 's finding new competition. Nobody in the Washington camp is underestimating the talents of Al Evans.

Piedmont Sensation

While Early was sitting most of the games out on the Nats' bench last season, Evans was the sensation of the Piedmont League. He played virtually every game and was the league's standout catcher. He hit .296 despite the fact that he was a dead leftfield hitter.

If Evans does not boast as clever a throwing arm as Early, he does not lag by much in that department. Piedmont Leaguers rarely stole a base on the sandy-haired Evans and, according to Manager Calvin Griffith, the fellow did a remarkable job in handling as wild a set of pitchers as was to be found in the minors.

"He isn't the same fellow who was in the Washington camp last spring," young Griffith was saying. "He's got more poise, for one thing, and more confidence. He won't set any worlds on fire with his hitting, but he's no set-up at bat. He's going to make some big league club a good catcher, maybe this year."

Ken Chase, Leonard New Nat Arrivals

Ken Chase was one of the new arrivals. The curly haired lefthander is, besides Dutch Leonard, the only pitcher certain of a regular job on the Nats' staff in view of his clever performances last year. Another arrival was Buddy Lewis, attempting this season to convert himself into an outfielder.

Rookie Quinn is a tall Irish lad from Brooklyn who says he is a pitcher. He is getting a tryout with the Nats on the tsrength of talent he showed in a brief workout last year with the Washington team at Yankee Stadium. He hails from Brooklyn, where he played at St. John's Prep. He is a right-hander who formerly played the outfield.

Pacini Sweeps Listed Tomorrow

Tomorrow Ollie Pacini will be host at the Temple Alleys for the sixth annual rolling of the Ollie Pacini Near-Star Sweepstakes for bowlers with an average of 117 and under, with shifts of squads at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.

In addition to the cash prizes, the winner will be the recipient of the Ollie Pacini gold medal.

Fifty-seven were in the event last year, and indications are an even larger field will participate tomorrow. The entrance fee is $5, including the cost of the games.

In the Southeast League at the Queen Pin Alleys, George Honey by virtue of a 390 set, won a free entry in the Ollie Pacini Near-Star Sweepstakes, and coupled with "Bub" Guether's 383 downed the Baca Bros., 2 to 1.

Lieut. Boudinot Stars; National Capital Club Second; Md. Is Third

Maryland University's champion riflemen of 1939 were unseated by the District National Guard team yesterday as Lieut. Henry M. Boudinot set the pace in puncturing bull's-eyes to give his team the 1940 title by 12 points.

Boudinot captured the individual championship and gold medal by just one point, with a total of 282 out of 300. Alden Imus, Maryland student, was second.

The National Capital Rifle Club went into an early lead, but the National Guard five came back with a rush to pour a stream of lead into the portions of the target that count most to amass a total of 1,362 points.

The Terrapins had to be satisfied with the junior championship, won by their freshman team last year.

The National Guard was awarded the Marine Corps Headquarters Rifle Club Trophy to retain for one year. The results:

Patty Berg Plays In Miami Today

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 22 (INS).—The mid-Florida women's golf semi-finals tomorrow will feature Lillian Zech, of Chicago, matched with Clara Gallender, of Long Beach, and Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, tangling with Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I.

The Chicagoan advanced to the semi-finals by staging a mild upset in eliminating Laddie Irwin, of Montclair, N. J., tournament medalist, 2 and 1 in today's quarter finals. Miss Callender scored a 3 and 1 decision over Shirley Ann Johnson, of Chicago.

Miss Berg took out Neoma Coppic, of Toledo, Ohio, 4 and 3, while Miss Bauer was eliminating Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., by a 2 up margin in the other quarter final matches.

Dizzy Dean States He Will Not Sign Pact for $10,000

Plans to Tend His Farm Until Club Meets His Figures; Doesn't Want to Quit Baseball

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Feb. 22.—Ole Diz Dean, the man of a few thousand words, boiled down his annual holdout skit to blunt comment today:

"I won't sign for no $10,000."

Frankly, the lame Chicago Cub pitcher is vexed about the whole thing and may take his new role of gentleman farmer a little more seriously than he thought when he purchased a few acres of black land on the outskirts of Dallas several weeks ago.

"Guess I'll just get my farm ready and sit there all summer," remarked Mr. Dean after once again going over the details of Owner Phil K. Wrigley's $10,000 offer and Player D. Dean's refusal to sign for anything less than $15,000.

The great Dean, browsing around his several acres, first milking Betsy, a mild old cow, then chasing down seven squealing pigs which his wife, Pat, gave him, burst out with:

"Naw, I don't want to quit baseball, but I've got will power them other players haven't. When I set my mind and know what I want, I stick to it.

"I worked out a little up at my Mississippi baseball school. I ran quite a good deal and exercised my arm. Felt pretty frisky.

"I feel like if I could get together with Mr. Wrigley I would go good this season. But things aren't so good right now. Nothing has changed for several days."

Diz, deep in the problems of plowing under several acres of crops in accordance with Government programs and installing a water tower "over there on the side of the hill," seemed far more worried about getting construction under way on his farm house than anything else.

But he perked up and started asking questions when informed that the Cubs, minus only the great Dean, had shoved off for their Santa Catalina Island training base today.

"Say, tell me, what did that story say? So training has started, has it?"

Regardless of what happens in the next few days, Dean is going right ahead with his farm plans.

DIZZY DEAN

"Whether I play baseball or not—and I won't unless I get what I want—I'm gonna have a good farm. 'Spect I'll build about a $12,000 or $15,000 home out here and fix it up real nice."

Something in Dean's conversation led you to believe that the future of the righthander would be decided in about 10 days.

He started out after several sheep when a cameraman asked him to pose with some of the newly acquired Dean livestock. Diz got a hold of a rambunctious ram—"My first feel of a sheep"—and took a wild ride before he was released.

Farmer Dean, slipping into baseball's past with a wrecked arm, is a stubborn individual.

Gettysburg Five Bows to Navy, 37-21

Victory First on Home Court This Season for Middies

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Feb. 22.—Navy's basketeers today turned back Gettysburg College by a score of 37 to 21 for their first victory on the home court and their second in 12 starts this season.

Their first victory was scored over University of Pennsylvania early in the season, at Palestra, at Philadelphia. The Middies have two more games in their schedule. They meet Williiam and Mary College here on Saturday and the following Saturday they go to West Point for their annual contest with the rival military cadets.

Today's game lacked the zip that has been characteristic of most contests this season. Two foul goals by Capt. Mike Hanley put the Tars in front at 2 to 0, although a field goal and a foul throw by Bob Buyer gave the battlefield boys a 3-to-2 advantage. Hanley made good another toss from the charity strip to knot the issue at 3-all, and Shaffer came through with a double-decker to put the count at 5 to 3 for hte home team. Then Harry Simon scored from the floor for the Tars, to again give the home crew a lead which they never relinquished through the rest of the game. The score at the intermission read Navy, 20; Gettysburg, 9.

Baltimore Hockey Team Beats Rovers

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 22.—The Baltimore Orioles defeated the New York Rovers today at Madison Square Garden before a crowd of 8,762 by the score of 4-1, in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game.

After a scoreless first period, Vitarelli tallied for Baltimore. A minute later Ripley, on a pass from Dyte, countered to make the score 2 to 0.

Eagles Play Gulls In Atlantic City Tonight

The Washington Eagles tonight are to invade Atlantic City, N. J., where they are to bid for their third consecutive victory over the fiery Sea Gulls in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League match.

The Eagles, who experienced little success against the Sea Gulls previously, recently scored victories over Atlantic City on consecutive nights and are confident they have dispelled, for once and all, the mastery of the Sea Gulls.

On Sunday afternoon the locals will visit Madison Square Garden for a crucial match with the New York Rovers. The teams will enter this match in a 5-5 deadlock for the seasin and a rousing duel is the prospect.

On next Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock the Eagles will return to the home ice at Riverside Stadium where they are to entertain the league leading Baltimore Orioles. The Eagles have won 6 of 10 matches from the Orioles thus far this season and will be out to upset the team that has proven all but unstoppable in recent matches.

Woodridge Winner

Club Sponsors N. J. Day for 3 Brewers Sunday

Official announcement that the New Jersey Club, of this city, will sponsor a New Jersey Day for three outstanding Heurich Brewers basketball players at Heurich gymnasium Sunday afternoon when the Brewers entertain the New York Jewels at 2:30 o'clock was made by that organization yesterday.

The athletes to be honored are Phil Rabin, of Paterson, N. J.; Moe Dubilier, of Jersey City, and Mike Bloom, of Trenton.

The New Jersey Club currently is planning to award gifts to all these players and to turn out en masse for the Brewers' closing home game of the regulation schedule here.

Simultaneously Business Manager Bob McDonald, of the Brewers, announced that the Heurich Club had officially received its bid to enter the World Professional Tournament at Chicago starting March 17 and is seriously considering acceptance.

This tournament will involve three American and National Basketball League clubs each, a trio of teams from the Pacific Coast, and the world renowned Renaissance.

Sphas Beat Brewers, Take League Lead

The Philadelphia Sphas zoomed into the American Basketball League's lead and sent the Washington Heurich Brewers spinning into fourth place last night as they sent the local professionals down to defeat before 700 fans at Heurich gymnasium, 29 to 21.

Accuracy from the foul line coupled with Philadelphia's ability to stop siege gun Phil Rabin, of the Brewers, with a lone free toss enabled the Sphas to take over the lead.

The standings today are:

Philadelphia	17	12	.621
Troy-Celtics	19	14	.576
New York	15	12	.556
WASHINGTON	15	13	.532
Baltimore	13	15	.464

The superiority of the visitors from the free line is best illustrated when it is noted that they sank 11 of 12 tries whereas the Brewers could cash but 3 or 8.

In a Heurich Amateur Basketball League game scheduled as the preliminary United Typewriters defeated United Clay Products, 43-30.

Morty Alnwick Elected Hoya Relay Captain

Morty Alnwick, senior anchor man, was elected captain of Georgetown University's undefeated mile relay team yesterday which makes its next start at Madison Square Garden in the American indoor track and field championships tomorrow night.

Alnwick, one of the most colorful speed stars enrolled at Georgetown in years, is conceded much credit for the success of Georgetown's mile relay team this season and it was his great finish that enabled the Hoyas to score over New York University's great team in the Seton Hall games at Newark, N. J., last Monday night.

Georgetown's mile relay stars have scored in five consecutive major events, namely: The Grover Cleveland Democratic Osceola games, Millrose games, University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment Armory, New York Athletic Club games and the Seton Hall games.

Rock Wren and Maegay Win in Divisions of Dinner Stakes

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Colt Drives Home; Snite's Horse Fails But Entrymate Wins

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 22.—Coming within one-fifth of a second of the 3-furlong track record, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Rock Wren, victorious in her recent debut, drove to a half-length triumph in the ladies division of the Miami Jockey Club Dinner Stakes here today. Double Call, grouped in the "field" and representing Miss Ruth E. Dunnigan, daughter of New York State Senator John Dunnigan, was second by a like margin over Mrs. Nicholas M. Schenck's Painted Veil. A field of 16 juveniles went postward in this half of the split invitational affair.

Mrs. Whitney was not present to see her Questionnaire filly win. The famous patron of the Greentree Stable is now in Thomasville, Ga., where she spends the winter.

Rock Wren paid $18.40 and finished in :33 1-5 under Eddie Arcaro. Horses can be leased for this race by nonowning subscribers, who register their own silks. Each $100 subscription fee goes into the dinner and the two winning owners are honored guests at a clubhouse dinner in the evening. They each receive a gold trophy from the Miami Jockey Club in addition to the $1,150 winner's share of each purse.

Blue Twink Falls

Mrs. E. S. Moore's Blue Twink, the colt that made the "field" horses favorite, never was a factor in the Rock When hustled into immediate command, drew into a daylight lead, but just lasted when Double Call challenged in the final strides after forcing the pace. Painted Veil always held the others safe.

It would be nice to write that Frederick B. Snite, jr., the 30-year-old gamester who lives in an iron lung, was represented by the winner of the men's division of the dinner stakes, but the filly leased by the young man, Maedixie, finished sixth in the field of 12 juveniles. Snite leased Maedixie from Dewitt Page of Bristol, Conn., and chose vivid silks that he could easily distinguish—white, Red "S" on back, red sleeves, white and red cap. However, Maedixie was an entry with a winner, for Mr. Page's Maegay won the event by a half length. The Snite-Page entry was favorite at even money.

Watches the Race

H. P. Headley's Not Yet was second, by another half length, while W. E. Boeing's Chance Cut took the show. The time was :33 3/5.

Snite, or "the boiler kid" as he good-humoredly refers to himself, was able to watch the race from a position opposite the pole a furlong from the finish. Snite, a frequent visitor here and at other sports events, has a sort of mirror-reflection and periscope arrangement in his trailer.

Maegay, now winner of three races and second in her other two starts, wore down the fast stepping Not Yet after a long, thrilling drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROCK WREN, $18.40, $8.00, $4.50; DOUBLE CALL (field), $3.80, $2.70; PAINTED VEIL, $3.40.

ROCK WREN displayed keen speed, responded courageously when the real test came and outlasted DOUBLE CALL. The latter gained steadily through the stretch and was wearing the winner down. PAINTED VEIL was bumped approaching the furlong pole, finished gamely when clear and disposed of the others. SUBURA and BLUE LILY could not better their positions.

FOURTH RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $1,500; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:54½. Off 3:58½. Winner, DeWitt Page's b. f. (2), by Oar Monarch—Fata Branka. Trained by G. E. Phillips. Value to winner, $1,150; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:33⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAEGAY (Snite, jr.-Page entry), $4.00, $3.30, $2.50; NOT YET, $5.40, $3.50; CHANCE CUT, $3.10.

MAEGAY swung around the leaders in the stretch, finished with determination and won going away. NOT YET, showing the most speed, crossed to the inside, but was not equal to the winner when challenged. CHANCE CUT responded to pressure and shook off GENERAL JACK in the final furlong. GENERAL JACK displayed speed, but faltered.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:22½. Off 4:23. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. g. (6), by Fair Wind—Amo. Trained by R. O. Higdon. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:51⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUDDIE TREACY, $11.50, $6.20, $4.20; DES GRIEUX, $14.20, $7.50; EL PUMA, $4.00.

BUDDIE TREACY held his field safe for speed, was nicely rated in front and held on with good courage to outlast DES GRIEUX. The latter saved ground and made a bold effort, but could not set up. EL PUMA, under light restraint until midway around the lower turn, closed stoutly. BLANCO SWEEP was sore going to the post. WINGED VICTORY was blocked sharply approaching the half-mile pole.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:51. Off at once. Winner, Marshall Field's b. g. (3), by Stimulus—Sena Lumpers. Trained by G. M. Odom. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLIND IMPULSE, $8.00, $5.10, $3.60; JEHOOVER, $4.70, $3.10; RAPID WAY, $3.20.

BLIND IMPULSE moved up swiftly on the extreme outside going to the stretch turn, shook off the leaders, but had nothing left at the end. JEHOOVER assumed a short lead rounding the turn and finished gamely after being displaced. RAPID WAY, prominent from the start, hung in the stretch run. TIPCAT had no mishaps.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:22½. Off 5:23½. Winner, Fanfare Farm's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OFFICIATE, $11.70, $5.70, $3.20; GEN L, $6.70, $3.70; MOTLEY, $3.00.

OFFICIATE, displaying the most speed, was steadied in front, bore out sharply at the furlong pole and forced GEN L to take back sharply to avoid being bumped. A foul was claimed but not allowed. GEN L gradually improved his position on the outside, was going strong when Winn took him up suddenly and could never recover. MOTLEY, forward factor, came wide into the stretch, but continued gamely to outlast CHAMELEON. The latter saved much ground, but could not get up.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 6:01½. Off at once. Winner, Bristol Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONSUL, $8.60, $4.20, $3.30; JELWELL, $4.80, $3.20; KEN'S REVENGE, $5.30.

CONSUL moved into contention with determination on the outside midway around the lower turn and shook off JELWELL through the stretch. JELWELL, prominent throughout, made a game effort, but was no match for the winner. KEN'S REVENGE opened up a good lead, responded with courage, but could not keep pace with the leaders. POR ROMANCE could not get up.

Kansas Coach Advocates Cage Change

Wants to Raise Baskets; Create Zone Around Goal

By the Associated Press

Lawrence, Kans., Feb. 22.—Dr. F. C. Allen, Kansas University basket ball coach, who advocates raising the baskets to lessen the advantage of tall players, has a new idea.

He would create a safety zone around each goal and, in effect, virtually eliminate all shots within 8 feet of the baskets.

Allen said the center jump was eliminated because of tall men but "instead of driving tall players out of the game the demand for them became even greater. A team no longer is defeated in the center of the court, at the jump, but at the backboards."

His safety zone would be a 16-foot circle with the basket as a center. Players could dribble in or out of the circle, but could not drive in and shoot if another player was in the ring. Thus, a team could place a stationary guard in the circle and prevent enemy shots within the safety zone.

Allen also would abolish tip-in shots.

He demonstrated his safety zone in a clinic game and said he would propose it at a meeting of the National Basketball Coaches Association and rules committee in Kansas City next month.

U. S. Stocks Are Steady In London

General Market There Aided by Requisition Of British U.S. Holdings

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 22.—Stocks continued to rise on impetus provided by the requisition of British holdings of United States shares. This released an estimated £24,000,000 (about $96,000,000) for reinvestment in British securities. British government issues were quiet, registering fractional declines on profit-taking. Transatlantics were without feature because of the U. S. holiday closing.

Brazilian bonds, industrials, and copper, rubber and diamond shares were strong. Tins eased on the recession of the spot metal price nearly £2 to £244 pounds, 17 shilling and sixpence.

Paris Bourse Higher

Paris, Feb. 22 (AP).—The bourse opened briskly today with prices rising in all divisions in fair volume. Finance Minister Reynaud's statement of last night showing a satisfactory and steady rise in savings bank deposits and armament bonds subscriptions, and his contention that war need not bring financial ruin had a beneficial effect upon the market. Tapering off of orders as prices rose had a sobering effect but closing levels generally showed net gains.

Ordinary rentes closed 25 to 40 centimes higher. Improvement was general among domestic equities except that chemical and coal mining shares moved unevenly. Base metal issues were well supported all day.

Amsterdam Gloomy

Amsterdam, Feb. 22 (AP).—A gloomy feeling based upon fears war would soon assume much greater proportions, and dismay over large shipping losses had an effect upon trading volume in today's bourse, but the trend was not weak. Domestic issues finished irregular. Tobacco, sugar and tin shares were steady to firm. American shares were quiet, closing for the most part a bit below yesterday.

The dollar was easier in foreign exchange dealings, attributed to a desire to obtain liquid funds against subscriptions for the forthcoming Dutch consolidation loan. Sterling was a shade higher. Cocoa and other commodities were strong.

Montreal Irregular

Montreal, Feb. 22 (AP).—Prices continued uneven in late trading in the stock market today. Algoma Steel, Asbestos, Dryden Paper, Imperial Tobacco and Dominion Bridge showed narrow advances, while Canadian Car and Shawinigan eased small fractions. Also displaying lower price trends were Imperial Oil and International Petroleum in the oils.

Unchanged issues included Brazilian, building products, Canadian Car preferred, Canadian Pacific, Montreal Power, Bathurst and Canada Steamships.

Toronto Heavy

Toronto, Feb. 22 (AP).—The weight of changes was on the down side in the stock exchange today with trading showing a tendency to dry up again. The fact that the New York market was closed may have helped to slow the action. Industrials and base metals were the weakest groups, while the golds and Western oils showed little net change. Aggregate turnover was around 185,000 shares.

Auto Production

Detroit, Feb. 22 (AP).—Automotive News, reporting an above seasonal demand for new cars, today estimated the current week's car and truck production at 104,097 units. Assemblies last week were 97,321 and the output for this week a year ago was 75,834 vehicles.

Record Chemical Exports Predicted

Record chemical exports, coupled with rising sales abroad of other commodities, presage expanding foreign trade under war conditions, according to an analysis yesterday by Otto Wilson, statistician for the American Chemical Society. Chemical exports reached a new high last year, surpassing those of 1938 by almost 30 per cent, Mr. Wilson points out. Imports, on the other hand, were only slightly above the total of the preceding year. December, 1939, exports of chemical goods were almost double those for December, 1938, being valued at $19,502,000 as compared with $11,475,000. Imports, at $6,763,000, were practically the same as in 1938.

Bank Clearings Rise Sharply During Week

Total for 22 Cities Is 14.5 Per Cent Above 1938 Week

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 22.—Bank clearings for the latest week went sharply above the previous week and likewise displayed a large increase over the corresponding 1939 week. This showing was largely due to the fact that the current week's transactions were for six business days, whereas the preceding week and the same week of last year were reduced to five days by the observance of holidays.

Clearances for 22 cities for the six business days ended February 21, Dun & Bradstreet reported, amounted to $5,120,753,000, or 14.5 per cent more than the $4,473,308,000 for the five-day week a year ago.

The turnover for the current full week increased $913,370,000 over that for the preceding short week. A similar comparison between the two like weeks of 1939 (both five-day weeks) revealed a rise of only $25,743,000.

New York exchanges were $2,804,365,000, against $2,769,236,000 last year, a gain of 1.3 per cent, while the 21 outside cities had an aggregate of $2,316,388,000, an increase of 35.9 per cent above the $1,704,072,000 for the same 1939 week.

Biggest Utility Asks Vote on New Financing

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Consolidated Edison Co., of New York, Inc., world's largest seller of electric power, has asked its stockholders to decide the moot issue of whether new finance money shall be raised by competitive bidding, or by the traditional Wall Street investment house method of private bidding.

Financial sources here said they believed this was the first instance of a company of Consolidated's size asking its owners' opinion.

The whole subject of competitive bidding has been a recent topic of debate, not always friendly, by the temporary National Economic Committee, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and by some officers and groups in other fields, notably by some Cleveland and Chicago bankers and some railroad investment groups.

Consolidated's chairman, Floyd L. Carlisle, enclosed with the company's annual report to stockholders, mailed today, a ballot asking their opinion on competitive bidding.

The company reported 1939 net income of $36,428,119, or $2.22 a common share. This was 4.4 per cent higher than the 1938 total of $34,893,619 or $2.09 a share.

Net of $32,032,525 Is $20,986,425 More Than Previous Year

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—The Pennsylvania Railroad, riding the crest of a sharp upturn of industrial activity during the last four months of 1939, earned a net income for the year of $32,032,525—an increase of $20,986,425 over 1938—the company's ninety-third annual report disclosed today.

A $23,177,686 surplus remaining after appropriations to the sinking and other funds, was equivalent to 3.52 per cent, or $1.76 per share on the outstanding stock, the report showed. This compared with 0.46 per cent or 23 cents per share in 1938.

The report pointed out that a dividend of 2 per cent, or $1.00 per share, was paid last December 18, and the remainder of $10,009,932 was transferred to profit and loss. It added that the 1939 dividend was at double the rate disbursed in 1938.

Asserting the Nation's railroad carloadings jumped from 650,000 carloads weekly during "generally poor business in August" to 860,000 weekly or "relatively good business in October," the report said railroads "took in their stride one of the sharpest upturns of industrial activity in history."

Heavy Tax Increase

President M. W. Clement commented in the report that "the continuing increases in taxes are particularly burdensome to the railroads, which is the only form of transportation that furnishes its own right of way and pays for its upkeep." Out of each dollar of the Pennsylvania's operating revenues last year, Clement said, 9½ cents went to pay taxes.

The Pennsylvania Railroad president expressed hope that the current session of Congress will "enact legislation that will declare as a national transportation policy that all forms of transportation shall have equal opportunity."

Other significant features of the report showed that operating revenues for the year totaled $430,930,778, an increase of $70,546,537, or 19.6 per cent over the preceding year. Freight revenues were $320,960,943, an increase of 23.8 per cent, while the passenger revenue of $71,106,822 showed an increase of 8.1 per cent. Operating expenses aggregated $306,900,835, an increase of $49,853,592, or 19.4 per cent.

Union Pacific

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—The Union Pacific Railroad System today reported January net operating income of $1,624,170, compared with $1,344,023 a year ago. Gross income for the month increased to $12,470,801 from $11,914,096 in January, 1938.

Chesapeake & Ohio

Cleveland, Feb. 22 (AP).—Chesapeake & Ohio Railway today announced its January net income as $2,752,695 against $1,587,826 in January 1939. Net railway operating income was $3,465,628, compared with $2,429,471, and operating revenues were $10,760,750 against $9,136,438.

Utility Issues 68.3 Per Cent of January Offerings

The gross amount of securities effectively registered under the Securities Act of 1933 aggregated $145,182,000 in January, 1940, according to an analysis prepared by the research and statistics section of the Trading and Exchange Division. Of this total $102,375,000 of securities was proposed for sale by issuers as compared with $149,542,000 in December, 1939, and $135,939,000 in January, 1939.

Approximately two-thirds of the amount of registered securities proposed for sale by issuers in January, 1940, represented the securities of only four companies. The largest amount was shown for the American Gas & Electric Co., which registered three debenture issues with aggregate gross proceeds of $30,970,000. Among the other large issues were the 3¼ per cent bonds of Consumers Power Co. with gross proceeds of $19,616,670, the 3¼ per cent bonds of Pennsylvania Water & Power Co. with gross proceeds of $11,510,100, and the 4 per cent bonds of Libby, McNeill & Libby, with gross proceeds of $11,000,000.

Electric, gas and water utility companies accounted for $69,959,000, or 68.3 per cent of the total amount of securities proposed for sale by issuers. Manufacturing companies registered $24,635,000 of securities, or 24.1 per cent of the total, and financial investment companies registered $4,999,000 of securities, or only 4.9 per cent of the total.

Walt Disney to Offer Stock to the Public

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—With the Walt Disney motion picture productions planning considerable expansion of their Hollywood studios this year, a move for public financing of the enlargement of this animated movie cartoon industry was progressing today. Roy O. Disney, business manager, said that the company would file a securities offering with the Securities and Exchange Commission and that they expected to have permission for this public financing within the next 45 days. If granted, this will be the first time public sale of stock has been offered by this heretofore closed corporation. New studios for Disney productions will be on a 51-acre tract in Burbank, Calif., and will be completed within the next four months at a cost of $3,000,000.

Wheat Prices Hold Strong At Winnipeg

Closings Are ½ to ⅝ Cents Per Bushel Above Previous Day

By the Associated Press

Winnipeg, Feb. 22.—The Winnipeg Grain Exchange put on a strong show all by itself today with the United States traders on holiday and other world markets irregular. Light export buying and a lack of selling pressure were behind the advances. Wheat futures prices at the close were ⅝@½ cent above previous closing levels with May at 90⅛; July, 91⅜, and October, 92½ cents.

A weak tone developed at the opening but buyers came into the pit and before the first half-hour was up prices had started a gradual rise that lasted throughout the session.

American markets were closed and the trend at Buenos Aires was unpredictable with quotations ⅛ higher to ⅛ lower at midsession. Export business was at a minimum with only a few loads reported sold to neutral countries in Europe.

Top grades of Northern and garnets were in demand in the cash wheat market for shipmen ffrom lower lake stocks at opening of navigation. Oats and barley traded heavily in the coarse grains pit with support offered by mills and exporters. Flax and rye were neglected but prices ranged slightly higher.

15 More Insolvent Banks Liquidated

During January the liquidation of 15 insolvent national banks was completed and the affairs of such receiverships finally closed. Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these 15 receiverships, amounted to $16,973,788, while dividends paid to unsecured creditors amounted to an average of 85.82 per cent of all claims proved.

One of the banks liquidated was the Washington (D. C.) Savings Bank, which closed December 7, 1933. Disbursements were $611,735 and dividends declared to all claimants were 110.24 per cent.

Engineering Awards Under Year Ago

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday totaled $52,980,000, a gain of 38 per cent from the short preceding week which included Lincoln's Birthday, but 13 per cent less than a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Private contracts awarded increased 26 per cent during the week, but were 30 per cent smaller than the same week last year. Public construction was 45 per cent larger than the previous week and approximately equal to a year ago.

U.S. Sugar Receipts Largest in 10 Years

Sugar delivered to the American market last year totaled 6,865,402 short tons, raw value, or the largest volume since 1929. Deliveries in 1938 totaled 6,642,981 short tons. The Agriculture Department said yesterday that last year's deliveries were from the following sources: Cane sugar refiners, 4,336,629 short tons; beet sugar processors, 1,805,830; importers of refined sugar, 582,064, and continental cane mills, 140,879.

The department reported that stocks of sugar held by refiners, beet sugar factories and importers of refined sugar on December 31 totaled 2,303,233 short tons, compared with similar stocks of 2,112,329 on the last day of 1938.

Falconry Called Oldest Hobby At Md. Show

Falconry is the oldest hobby, Alva G. Nye, jr., of the Biological Survey, last night told the hobby lobby of the hobby show held at Kensington (Md.) Elementary School yesterday. He exhibited his trained falcons and motion pictures showing capture of falcons.

Albert L. Lewis, national secretary of the Model Airplane League, spoke on "Model Airplanes." Julian Cottrell, Charles John and Eugene McPherson, youthful radio "hams," gave an exhibition of short-wave radio.

The show was held under auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association of the school. The committee included Mrs. Dr. Evertt Davis, B. W. Kumler and H. W. McGinniss. The hobbies of Kensington's younger generation were on display.

PAUL B. CROMELIN, DAVID A. HART and JAMES E. ARTIS, Trustees in Civil Action No. 1072.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the District of Columbia. Vera L. Rocca et al., plaintiffs, vs. Mildred V. Ellery et al., defendants. Civil Action No. 1072. Order nisi on sale of real estate. This action came on to be further heard upon the reports of James E. Artis and David A. Hart, trustees, and the report of Paul B. Cromelin, trustee, all filed herein, and it appearing therefrom that the trustees have received an offer of $65,500.00 cash for the following described property, viz: Premises 207 F Street, Northwest, being assessed as Lot 804 in Square 466; premises 1219 Fifth Street, Northwest, being assessed as Lot 818 in Square 513; premises 86 M Street, Northwest, being assessed as Lot 221 in Square 620; premises 302 H Street, Northwest, being assessed as Lot 821 in Square 529; premises 1209 Fifth Street, Northwest, being assessed as Lot 811 in Square 513; premises 1125 New Jersey Avenue, Northwest, being assessed as Lot 818 in Square 557; premises 614 Louisiana Avenue (now Indiana Avenue) Northwest, being assessed as Lot 16 in Square 439; premises 818 Sixth Street, Northwest, being assessed as Lot 39 in Square 453; premises 917 D Street, Northwest, being assessed as Lot C in Square 378, and premises 808 Ninth Street, Northwest, being assessed as Lot 844 in Square 374, which offer is more than two-thirds of the appraised value thereof and also substantially exceeds the aggregate amount offered for each of said properties, and the Court finding that it will be to the interest and advantage of the parties to this action that said offer be accepted, it is, accordingly, by the Court, this 14th day of February, A. D. 1940, ordered that public auction sale of the said property be dispensed with and that the said offer therefor of $65,500.00 subject to the payment of a brokerage of $2,065.00 to the broker submitting the same, is hereby accepted unless cause to the contrary be shown herein at 10 o'clock a. m., on the 26TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1940; provided a copy hereof be published once in the Washington Law Reporter and three times in The Washington Post before said return day and that a copy hereof be promptly mailed by said trustees to each of the parties to this action at their last known postoffice address: provided, further, however, that no interest or estate in said property shall vest in the said purchaser unless and until said offer is finally accepted by the Court and the purchase money paid in full. Tyler, Rydal, Montgomery County, Pa.; (Special Partners) Philemon Dickinson, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia County, Pa.; Jay Cooke, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia County, Pa.; Edwin A. Fish, Locust Valley, Long Island, N. Y. The amount of capital which each special partner has contributed to the common stock is as follows: Philemon Dickinson, $500,000; Edwin A. Fish, $500,000; Jay Cooke, $100,000, and in addition, securities with an agreed value as of December 31, 1937, of $300,000. The period at which the partnership is to commence and the period at which it is to terminate are as follows: The partnership formed at the close of business on December 31, 1937, shall continue from and after the business on January 21, 1940, for the term of three years and eleven months to and including December 31, 1943, and its membership shall be constituted as set forth herein from and after January 31, 1940, and shall continue to and include midnight, May 31, 1941, subject to earlier termination upon certain contingencies. The present limited partnership renews the limited partnership of the same name, the terms of which were set forth in certificates filed in the Office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia on January 6, 1938, and January 3, 1939, with the following changes in membership: During the year 1939, John P. Grier and Edward H. Levis theretofore special partners died; on December 31, 1939, G. William Pepper retired and ceased to be a partner; on January 31, 1940, Junius A. Richards retired and ceased to be a partner; on January 31, 1940, Philemon Dickinson retired as a general partner. All other provisions of the certificates filed on January 6, 1938, as aforesaid shall remain in full force and effect excepting Paragraph 5 of said certificate respecting withdrawal and return of capital shall, for clarification, be amended by substituting in the ninth line thereof for the words "as a result thereof" the words "at the time of such withdrawal" so that the clause shall read "if at the time of such withdrawal there be no impairment of the capital of the partnership."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"As a cold business proposition, it does not pay to bid a big slam that depends upon a finesse," counsels Frank K. Perkins, Boston bridge champion. "The auction should die at six, for the extra gain is not worth risking the game and little slam.

"Little slams are a good investment if they depend on one finesse or on winning two out of three finesses. The little slam should be bid without question, if either of two finesses will make it, but should not be bid if both are needed."

F. M. recently bid seven no trump when he needed a finesse to make it. He played for "queen over the jack" and lost. Had he played for the "drop" or finessed the other way, he would have won the grand slam. Here are the cards:

	♠ K J 7 ♡ F 10 ◇ A K ♣ A K 9 7 6 2
♠ Q 5 ♡ 5 3 2 ◇ Q 8 6 3 ♣ J 10 4 3	WEST — EAST	♠ 9 8 3 ♡ 9 7 6 4 ◇ 9 5 4 2 ♣ Q 8
	♠ A 10 6 4 2 ♡ A Q J 8 ◇ J 10 7 ♣ 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	4 N.T.	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	7 N.T.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead—♡ 4.

F. M. writes: "East opened the four of hearts. I saw that if I were to make the hand I would have to established the entire spade suit. The only possibility I saw to help me find the queen of spades was to try to locate the queen of diamonds, and play for the spade queen in the other hand.

"I put up the heart jack from dummy and let it win. Next I played the diamond jack, hoping it would tip off the diamond queen in West's hand so I could play East for spade queen. If West ducked I would play East for diamond queen and West for spade queen. West ducked after great hesitation, so I knew he had the queen.

"I took the trick in my hand with the king of diamonds and cashed the spade king. Next I played the spade jack and let it ride. West won with the queen and I was set. After I found the diamond queen in West's hand, the 'queen over the jack' rule looked good.

"Should the hand have played at seven? It seemed to me that I would be a coward not to have bid seven on the hand."

Spring Must be Near

Hagerstown, Feb. 22.—Mrs. Pearl Williams, Blairs Valley, reported today she spied a 2-fot garter snake crawling over the snow when she went to her mail box yesterday. Snakes usually do not make their appearance until April.

Listen! with Slocum

Thousands of fans picked 14 bandleaders and instrumental soloists as the best combination for an all-star "Dream Band."

And now Columbia records has put the dream on wax with "King Porter Stomp" and "All-Star Strut"—two jazz classics to delight every jitterbug. The record is scheduled for national release during the first week in March, and proceeds from the sale of the discs are to be turned over to Local 802, A. F. M., in New York, for the Relief Fund.

It took three weeks before Columbia could corral, in one studio, the array of talent represented in the record. Every chair was filled by a nationally famous instrumentalist.

Benny Goodman led on clarinet with a solid, almost unbelievable rhythm section of pianist Jesse Stacey (Bob Crosby band), drummer Gene Krupa, Charlie Christians (Goodman) guitar, and bassist Bob Haggart (Bob Crosby) backgrounding. Then there were Harry James, Ziggy Elman (Goodman) and Charles Spivak, trumpets; Jack Teagarden and Jack Jenny, trombones and Eddie Miller (Crosby), Toots Mondello (Goodman), Benny Carter and Charlie Barnett, saxes.

"King Porter Stomp" is a Fletcher Henderson arrangement which shows sock and drive generated singly and in ensemble by the stars. Each member of the band contributes a sparkling solo bit with entire combination riding out on the last two choruses. "All-Star Strutt" is a "jam" selection with small band. Exciting improvisations and ensemble treatment make this an outstanding example of pure jazz.

"I Take This Man"

BY ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

As Brenda and Alan are having dinner at an old inn a blizzard blows up and they find themselves unable to get back to the city. They talk of their love and Alan proposes that they be married by the village minister. The ceremony is performed and they go back to the inn for the first night of their honeymoon. The following day they attend the little church and watch the coasting and winter games. They are beset by newsmen, who have learned of the wedding.

Chapter 8

When they returned from watching the coasting congratulatory wires awaited them at the inn.

Pixie's wire sounded incredulous, but extravagantly pleased. His mother's and father's wire invited them home. Brenda's eyes filled with tears. She had never known real family life. Orphaned when a child, she had shifted for herself almost entirely. To have suddenly gained a husband and a family overnight was more than unusual.

ALAN smoked a cigarette with her before going into his own room. "I have some letters to write, Brenda. I must make some necessary preparations for our trip."

Brenda had letters of her own to write. There was an aunt back in the little town where she had grown up. She had remarried after her first husband died, and Brenda had never felt very close to her. But she knew that it was a sort of family duty to write her. Then there was Paget Blair.

Paget had been nice to her. He had even asked her to marry him once, but Brenda had not loved him, and was anxious to carry out her ambitious plans in commercial art. Paget had understandingly accepted the fact, and they had gone on these past two years, good friends, nothing more.

The next day was crisply cold, and Alan and she drove into the city, getting there early in the afternoon.

Brenda had bought a small picture of the inn. "For our scrap book, Alan," she had said.

"Little did I dream that I'd bring home a bride," he said, smiling down at her as the traffic became heavier. "I'll drive you out to your apartment, Brenda, and come back later in the afternoon. Shall we go out to dinner tonight?"

"I'd rather have it at my apartment, if you don't mind, Alan."

They had discussed plans the night before and decided to stay on at her apartment until sailing time late in the week. Most of the time would be spent in getting her things in order, obtaining her passport and finishing the details at her office.

She had not mentioned the shock this would be for her company. She and Cary Winship alone knew how much Winship & Lee depended upon her. She felt guilty and depressed about leaving her work.

A Disturbing Call

Alan kissed her and left her inside the living room. The maid had not come in today, but the heat was turned on and everything was ready for her return.

She had taken off her wraps and was running through her Saturday mail when the telephone rang.

It was Cary Winship.

His voice was strained as he said: "Brenda, I must see you at once. Can you come down to the office now?"

"I'll take a cab, Cary." She replaced the receiver slowly. What could Cary want to see her about that couldn't wait until morning?

She stared at the telephone.

She could feel Cary's arms about her once more, but somehow they were confused with Alan's. Alan had been so tender with her that she had forgotten everything in his arms last night.

But Cary—his voice awakened her rudely—back to the problem of loving him—What could he need to see her for?

When Brenda arrived at Cary's office, he dismissed Mary. Brenda was still wearing the green suit she had been married in, and felt illy groomed for its constant use the last two days. She felt the intensity of Cary's mood. His face was white and haggard.

His voice had sounded so perturbed that she had not taken time to change but left her apartment at once. She had not intended seeing Cary today; she had planned on calling the office presently and then appearing tomorrow morning as usual for her work.

He rose when she came in. "Thanks for coming so quickly, Brenda; I missed you this morning. Your wire asking for the day was here when I arrived. I'd not have called but I wanted to discuss something with you." He did not touch her.

"Is it about the Bremen's contract?"

Breaking Bad News

"No. No, it isn't that." He walked over by the window and looked down on the busy street below. He turned to her abruptly. "Brenda, Lynne has asked for a divorce."

Brenda's face grew so white that for a moment he thought she was going to faint. She felt her hands grow icy, then they began to shake. She managed to say, "Why, Cary? Oh, why?"

"She and Jeff Adams want to marry."

"No!" It was a cry from her heart. "No, Cary, she can't do that." She crossed the room rapidly. "You must not let her do that to all of you." Her voice was low and vibrant with feeling. "Jeff Adams is not for Lynne. It should be you and Lynne together the rest of your lives."

Cary was silent. His face paler than she had ever seen before. She touched his arm and wanted to comfort him. He had been desperately wounded. Cary loved Lynne.

"She's thought of everything, but thinks it's worth the sacrifice."

He was still stunned. There was not time enough to reason it out if he took the rest of his life. "I've failed, and I thought she would be happy. We aren't even going to the Royal," he said bitterly.

Afraid of old memories, Brenda thought. She felt sorry for Lynne. Didn't Lynne realized that she'd never hold Jeff Adams? That, after a year, she wouldn't even want to hold him? And then she would be without Cary and without her home.

Suddenly, Brenda realized that Cary had not spoken to her about her own marriage to Alan. He hadn't read the papers that morning, of course! He didn't know about it at all.

Is Her Love Dead?

She must tell him, but not just now.

"Lynne has planned everything. She must have been thinking it out for a long while. I noticed that she was more restless than usual and I wanted to take her away for a trip," he said bitterly. "I should have done it long ago. Now it is too late!"

"What are her plans?"

"Reno, after another month." His eyes had a dulled expression. "She isn't ready to go just yet. But I'm downtown at my club."

Brenda thought of her own trip to South America. She suddenly dreaded telling him that she was leaving. That she wouldn't be able to help him with the advertising work when he needed her most. If only there were some way she could help him! The next few months, until he could make his adjustment, would be so hard for him. Then there was the secret gnawing at Brenda's heart. Cary would be free!

They were silent now. Brenda sat in a chair, slightly away from his desk. She could see it all so plainly. Lynne had been fascinated, swept off her feet with Jeff Adams. Jeff, the playboy, versus Cary Winship, the gentleman artist. A cold pity swept over Brenda, drenching her with anger at Lynne for being so stupid as to allow Jeff to break her home.

Cary sat in front of his desk. He had told Brenda, the only person he knew who could understand how he felt. But there was nothing that she could do. There was nothing that he could do. Nothing but wait until Lynne had finished.

Surprise for Cary

"Cary, I don't know how to tell you—you must have realized, though, that Alan and I have been seeing a great deal of each other." He didn't look as though he was listening. Brenda went on rapidly. "Alan and I are married, Cary."

"Married?" His voice sounded incredulous. "But——" he paused. "When?" Then as if he remembered his good manners, he said, "I hope that you'll be very happy, Brenda. You and Alan are the world's finest." He reached for her hand.

Brenda's fingers were cold as he touched them.

"Alan is going ahead with his plans for leaving——" He paused for a moment and said in sudden astonishment, "You'll be going, too?"

"Yes." Her voice was almost inaudible. "I must, Cary. You understand, I'm sorry to leave when you need me here. I——"

He sat down at his desk again. "Of course you must go with Alan. He needs you. I won't be able to find anyone who will do your work as well as you, but then I could not be so selfish as to want to keep you here always." He was speaking almost impersonally of her value as a commercial artist, and Brenda hated the thought of being needed by Cary only in that way.

They spoke of arrangements that must be made. It was too late for her to begin any new work, since she would be sailing late in the week. Brenda kept back her tears. He needed her and because she was married to Alan, she could not comfort him.

In an hour she returned to her apartment to rest and bathe. Tonight she would have liked staying at home, but Marta would not be in before morning.

She moved slowly about the rooms, seeing them with new eyes. She would be leaving all of this, the home in which she had been the happiest that she could ever remember. The drapes at the side windows, the fat new books in their brightly colored jackets, the soft rugs, the colors she liked best—all of these must be stored, sold or given away.

She thought of Mary, the secretary. There were many things that Mary could use and would love to have. On sudden impulse, Brenda decided to give them to her.

Brenda lay on the divan for a long time. Cary, unhappy, gave her more pain than the Cary she had known before. She held back the tears lest Alan upon returning discover their traces and wonder if he had caused them.

Alan Comes Back

Upon inspiration, she brushed fatigue and worry aside. Springing to her feet, she flew to her closet. Here she selected a printed cotton house coat and dressed.

She searched the refrigerator, then calling the nearest grocer, she told him her needs. With quick hands she flew about and when Alan rang she was ready for him.

He was carrying a black leather traveling case and set it down in the little hall. Brenda went to him quickly. He tipped up her chin and kissed her lips.

He caught sight of the table set before the fireplace. "Marta here?"

"No, but I can cook. You don't mind eating here, do you?"

"Of course not! Much rather. Mother asked us to come there for dinner, but I begged off for tonight. I thought you'd like a little more time before we go."

She was grateful to him for his thoughtfulness. "I know there is so little time before we sail and we must give them one night, Alan."

Alan went into the kitchenette with her and tied on one of Marta's white aprons. He insisted on cooking the steaks and they carried on a light conversation.

After they had eaten and carried the dishes back for Marta to wash in the morning, they lit cigarettes before the fire.

Presently Alan said, "I heard some bad news today about the Winships, Brenda."

Brenda's heart caught. So Alan had heard, too. Then it must be rather common talk. She decided to pretend that she didn't know about it. She would not tell Alan she had seen Cary. "What did you hear, Alan?" she asked.

Good-by to Cary

Alan's sister had told him about the Winships. In their circle it was already common talk. The girls sympathized with Cary, and the men decided to cast Jeff completely out of their group.

Brenda was thankful when the week was over and she had everything ready to sail. Her passports were in order. She had returned to the office once, and then only for a few moments. Cary had looked as though he had passed sleepless nights and was drawn and haggard.

It was the last day before Brenda was to leave. She had left some of her materials at the office and had one last trip there.

Cary was in his office and she went in.

"I came to say good-by, Cary," she said. "I had to see you once more." Today she was wearing her favorite black suit. Her face was paler than usual and her eyes looked haunted.

Cary silently held out a chair for her. He offered her cigarettes and lit one for her. He wanted to keep her here. Lynne was lost to him. Must Brenda, too, be lost to him for always?

"When will you come back?"

"I don't know. Perhaps in a year. Maybe two. I don't believe that Alan likes it here, and, of course, I shall try to carry out his wishes."

The Parting

Cary nodded. His reddish brown hair was smooth today, his blue eyes had lost their brightness. He sat stiffly in his chair and toyed with a paperweight.

"I'm sorry to see you leave, Brenda. I'll miss you more than I can say." He tried to say it in the tone of an ordinary acquaintance.

"You have some one in mind for my position, though?"

"Yes." He leaned forward. "But she cannot really take your place. No one could do that. I hope that you have forgiven me for what happened at the house party. I must have been mad." It was the first time that he had referred to it for weeks, and her cheeks burned.

"Of course, Carey. Please let's never speak of it again!" She rose hurriedly. "I must get my things. I wanted to say thanks for everything. It was so good of you to take me in when I was such a beginner."

"You have more talent than the rest of us stacked all together. You've been a lifesaver. We'll probably get in a terrible muddle and have to send for you."

Federation Head Opposes Shakeup In Va. Game Board

Blacksburg, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—Fnacis Loth, of Waynesboro, president of the Virginia Wildlife Federation, declares in the current issue of the federation's publication, Virginia Wildlife, that complete reorganization of the State game and fish commission at this time "would set the whole wildlife movement back many years."

"If we, as sportsmen, cannot do an about face and begin boosting and cooperating with thecommission instead of kicking it in the teeth at every opportunity," the federation president says, "then we, as sportsmen, have no right to expect future results to be any better than those of the past, if as good."

He prefaced his statement with the assertion that "within a limited group or class widely scattered over the State a great hue and cry is being raised to 'reorganize the commission.'"

Farmers Meet Tomorrow In SandySpring

Acoustics Experiment Convention Feature In Sherwood High

An experiment in acoustics will be a feature of the sixty-eighth annual Farmers Convention of Sandy Spring Neighborhood tomorrow at Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, Md.

The Farmers Convention, which grew from the desire of three clubs of farmers to compare crop results and experiments, will seat its audience crosswise in the high school auditorium in an effort to improve the acoustics. The speakers will talk from the floor and will use a new amplifier loaned by the county agent's office. Much difficulty was experienced at the last two meetings because of a "dead spot" in the center of the auditorium. It is believed the new system will permit all to hear, according to Robert H. Miller, jr., secretary.

Talks on cattle feeding will be given by Leonard C. Burns, Olney farmer who has been conducting successful experiments, and Joseph M. Vail, animal husbandry specialist of the extension service of the Department of Agriculture.

Results of use of hybrid field corn in Sandy Spring will be reviewed in a discussion to be led by Stanley Stabler, William Hines, Maurice Cissel and Dr. Eric England.

County Agent O. W. Anderson will discuss "Growing Lespedeza," a new kind of clover, and R. T. Norris, chief deputy warden of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, will talk on "Game Conservation and Hunter-Farmer Cooperation."

The morning session will begin at 10:30 a. m., with a luncheon served by the women of the community at 12:15 p. m. and the afternoon session will start at 1 p. m.

John E. Muncaster is president, William W. Moore, vice president, and Robert H. Miller, jr., secretary. Frederick Gilpin is chairman of the men's committee, and Mrs. Andrew J. Boyd, of the women's committee.

The Senior Farmers Club, founded in 1844; the Enterprise Club, founded 1865, and the Montgomery Farmers Club, started 1872, sponsored the first convention in order to compare crop results and experiments in 1873.
